NEWPORT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

On Tuesday evening, March 14, Bruce Butterton read an instructive paper on "Boxwood and Its Enemies" before an interested audience, which brought out a good discussion on the means for combatting the leaf-miner which has become a very serious pest of the boxwood. It was voted to set the date for the joint exhibition of the Society and the Garden Club one week later than first announced so as not to conflict with the Gladiolus Show in Boston. The dates are now arranged are August 17, 18 and 19. On Tuesday evening, March 28, Prof. B. L. Hartwell of Kingston will lecture on "How Plants Feed," and on April 25, E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, will deliver a stereopticon lecture on the "Flowers and Gardens of Japan." W. F. Smith, Wm. Mackay, A. S. Meikle, Wm. Gray and Bruce Butterton were appointed a committee to arrange for a Ladies' Night in the week following Easter. James Bond was awarded a cultural certificate for fine blooms of tulip Glory of Haarlem.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

"Seasonable Flowers" was the subject of a general discussion on last Tuesday evening, at the meeting of the Horticultural Society of Western Penn. in Pittsburgh.

Cultural certificates were awarded as follows: William Allen, Homewood Cemetery, for carnations Matchless, Enchantress Supreme and pink and white Winsor; Henry B. Keillor of the Highland Floral Company, carnations; A. A. Leach of "Greenlawn,"

Meetings Next Week

COMING EXHIBITIONS.

March 25-April 2, Philadelphia.—Fourth National Flower Show of the Society of American Florists, Convention Hall, Broad Street and Allegheny Avenue.

April 5-12, New York.—International Flower Show of the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club, Grand Central Palace, Forty-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue, New York.

May 10, 14, Boston.—May Show Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Horticultural Hall.

Primula obconica. At this session the following new members were admitted: Active, Theodore P. Langhans and Oliver Langhans, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., and James Stewart, foreman for Edward A. Woods, and nine associate members. On the previous Tuesday evening the Horticultural Society held a session in the lecture hall of Carnegie Institute, when Mr. McCallum of the Pierson U-Bar Co., contributed an interesting address on "Small Greenhouses and What Flowers to Grow in Them."

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

There was an unusually large attendance of the members in the Dutch Room of the Fort Pitt Hotel on the night of March 7th, to greet the new President, Carl Becherer.

Pasquale Fabbozzi, an Italian member of the Club, had on exhibition a representation of the seal of the City of Pittsburgh done in immortelles of various colors. The design was nearly five feet in diameter, and its novelty and beauty attracted very favorable consideration as shown by certificate of merit awarded by Judges Jno. W. Jones, M. Curran and E. J. McCallum. As judges of the cut flowers and blooming plants the President appointed Messrs. P. S. Randolph, Neil McCallum and Wm. Thomson.

List of Awards.

Russett & Washburn, Chicago. For carnation Belle Washburn, a first class certificate.

Burpee's Seeds Grow

Burpee-Quality Seeds Help Solve the Market Problem

It is our pleasure to record a greatly improved market condition, and we confidently predict that 1916 will prove a most prosperous season for the Market Grower.

Many causes contributed to the unsatisfactory vegetable market of 1915, and it is also true that these same causes created a most profitable market for Staples, such as Wheat, Corn, Oats, etc.

During 1915 we attended many meetings where market growers gathered to formulate plans to overcome the then prevailing unfavorable conditions. Much good resulted from these conventions, as they have proved beyond question that inferior produce in large quantities, dumped without thought of quality or condition, has done more to demoralize the markets than any other factor.

The discussions at these meetings have brought the invariable conclusion that Quality Produce did sell—and sell well—at the highest price obtainable.

Quality Produce can no more be the harvest of inferior seed than high-bred cattle can be the product of inferior or diseased stock.

Burpee's Seeds are known the world over as the American Standard of Excellence. When you buy Burpee's Seeds the element of doubt is removed so far as is possible by human care.

A careful canvass of our Market Grower friends has brought this answer: "Yes, we certainly grew first-class crops from Burpee's Seeds."

The conclusion is inevitable: Burpee's Seeds grow Quality Produce, and Quality Produce brought good prices. Burpee's Seeds help solve the market problem.

Did you use Burpee's Seeds in 1915? If not, we earnestly solicit your orders for 1916. The profit is mutual.

Burpee's Annual for 1916, our complete retail catalog of 182 pages, has already been mailed. If you have failed to receive it, please write us at once and a duplicate copy will be forwarded.

Sincerely yours,

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; First Vice-President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Second Vice-President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.; Cincinnati, O., next meeting place.

A Disappointing Outcome.

We have reported elsewhere the action taken by the called meeting of the American Seed Trade Association at Chicago on the 2nd inst., to consider what action should be taken in view of the writing of contracts for future peas for Wisconsin canners by certain seed growers, who omitted the disclaimer.

We have learned the views of a number of prominent seedsmen, mainly members of the American Trade Seed Association, and all unstintedly condemn the action of the growers. We may also say that most of them have expressed disappointment over the results of the meeting above referred to. Several expressed the opinions that the Seed Trade Association surrendered to the growers when in fact the meeting was called for the purpose of censuring these growers, as we understand it, and of taking any other action which might be deemed advisable. It is not our purpose nor desire to criticize the action of the meeting, but we have our views touching this matter, and are bound to say that the results of the meeting must be disappointing to all well wishers of the seed trade. The resolution adopted permitting the growers to write contracts without the disclaimer by charging an additional price, will not obscure the point, that the seedsmen seem to have in a measure endorsed the action of the growers. It is true that the disclaimer was reaffirmed; it is also true that the additional price was considered in the way of insurance against suits which might follow the omission of the disclaimer. It seems to us doubtful if the courts would take the view which the seedsmen, or some of them, affect to take in this matter. The simple fact that an advance in price is required does not affect the principle involved, and to illustrate this point we quote from a letter of a well-known seedsman as follows:

"So far as its effect on the grower and the quality of the seed is concerned, it is the same. Being sure of the character and quality of the seeds we send out, depends entirely on the price. You pay me 75¢ per pound for Yellow Globe Onion Seed, and I don't 'know' anything about the quality of the seed. Pay me $1.00 per pound, and all doubts disappear. The grower is not interested in the quality of the seed, but in the price he gets for it. The grower is the one who is responsible for the result brought against me."

This seems to cover the case and confirms our opinion that the additional price charged—whether it be called insurance or whatever else it may be—will not affect the fact that the disclaimer has been omitted; and that the strongest, and we might say the keystone in the arch which has protected the American Seed Trade for many years from ignorant or dishonest claims has been ignored. And those who take business without this disclaimer are already at the mercy of the grower. If this were not the case, it would be left to the individual to make out their own bottom, but it is the effect on the disclaimer, its moral and legal force as affecting the seed trade, and a trade that is in question. The idea that Wisconsin can be set aside for special treatment and that this can continue indefinitely is an illusion. Once the breach is made, it will continue to enlarge, and all of the other states will eventually have to receive similar treatment insofar as the canners are concerned, and it will not be long before the seed merchants and dealers themselves will demand the same treatment from the growers. This, of course, will result in the complete breaking down of the protection now received from the disclaimer; and retailers, wholesalers and growers will have sacrificed what has proved their protection through many years for a little temporary gain.

These views may be somewhat radical, but they are the way we look at this matter, and as stated previously they are not to be construed as a criticism of the action taken by the seedsmen who met in Chicago, though many of these we believe are now convinced that they do not materially help the cause of protection to the seedsmen. From expressions which have reached us, we judge that this matter will be a leading subject for discussion at the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association in June, and there is likely to be some pretty plain speaking on that occasion.

In justice to the three growers who have been the cause of all this trouble, it may be said that one or two of them have expressed regret that they were the cause of bringing possible trouble on the seedsmen of the country, while others seem to consider their action as entirely correct and none of the seedsmen's business. This is an attitude it seems that can hardly be passed over by the seed trade.

There is much more that could be said on this subject, but we think we have made it plain that the great body of seedsmen are unalterably opposed to any course that will even tend to weaken the moral and legal value of the disclaimer, and no one claiming to be interested in the seed business of the country can ignore this sentiment.

One Week's Imports.

Imports at the port of New York of horticultural material for the week ending March 10, were recorded as follows:

Bulbs—France, $79; Netherlands, $9,174; England, $782; Japan, $223.

Plants, Etc.—France, $6,159; Netherlands, $7,264; England, $1,110; Scotland, $87.

Red Clover Seed—France, $98,319.

Other Clover Seed—France, $2,048; New Zealand, $483.

Grass Seed—France, $3,944; Sweden, $481; Scotland, $95.

All Other Seeds—France, $4,690; Germany, $3; Netherlands, $4,488; England, $18,609; Hongkong, $98.

Guano—England, $1,641.

Nitrate of Soda—Chile, $101,758.

Other Fertilizers—England, $7,026.

Notes.

Horse Cave, Ky.—Jewell & Paull

have opened a seed store here and will handle a good line of seed stock.

A notice comes to the office of Horticulture from the Boston Post Office informing us that printed matter for Belgium is prohibited until further notice.

Unseasonably cold stormy weather is having a more or less depressing effect on the retail seed trade and no marked improvement can be expected until the weather changes.

Chicago, Ill.—The Illinois Seed Company has purchased a tract of land 126x393 feet on the B. & O. tracks at 41st avenue and Fillmore street, on which they will erect a large building for the handling of grass seed.

In a circular to the trade, the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co. calls attention to the fact that there are unusual delays now on account of congestion of freight all over the country, and they recommend the placing of all orders as early as possible this spring.

The committee having in charge a selection of the place for holding the next convention of the National Canners' Association is now considering the claims of the various cities which have bid for the convention, and no doubt the selection will be announced within a short time. The desire on the part of many of the canners to hold a pure food exhibit at the same time as the convention, is now being considered and if the plan is adopted it is reasonably safe to say that Chicago will be the place selected for the next convention.

THE GINGER JAR.

It has been a cold March and the seed houses are growling because there is little counter trade so far. Also they have been worried about their shipments from abroad. A good many have got in, but many have not. Some that left the other side last November—we don't know where they are, even now. You can cable tracers until your purse goes empty. Makes no difference. There are a whole lot of catastrophes happening on the ocean these days that we know nothing about. People sitting comfortably in their parlors in Boston, Philadelphia, New York and Chicago think they know all about it, by reading the paper. Nonsense! The paper gets a few echoes and dishes that up to the best of its ability. In the meantime ships may have been going down with our consignments aboard, and we may never hear a word of them any more. What's the use of cabling. If the ship's gone it's gone, and half the time the censor in London thinks our cablegram a war order and it never gets any further. The same thing applies to cables from the other side. I think I'll have to write the Kaiser.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Professor Charles S. Sargent started on a trip to the Pacific Coast on Monday, March 20.

N. F. McCarthy has been taking a much needed rest in Bermuda preparation to the strenuous work of the spring auction season.

The schedule committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have been hard at work on the prize list for the Spring Flower Show to be held in March, 1917, at Horticultural Hall, Boston. The premiums offered will amount to approximately $10,000 and the exhibition, which will continue for five days, will be the most ambitious and elaborate ever staged under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

Max Frockman, of Henry M. Robinson & Co., is being congratulated on his approaching marriage to Miss Alice G. Schaeffer, of Revere. The ceremony will take place at the bride's residence on Sunday evening, March 26, following which Mr. Frockman and his bride will start for Philadelphia on their honeymoon. The salesmen of both flower markets have shown their regard for Mr. Frockman by presenting him with a magnificent silver service of nearly 100 pieces.

All exhibitors and many visitors to the National Flower Show in Mechanics Building, Boston, will pleasantly remember Chester I. Campbell, who so efficiently filled the position of manager for that very successful enterprise, and will be glad to learn that he has been appointed American manager by Administrator General Eduard Tijou, representing the French government, for the Reconstruction Exposition to be held in Paris in May, June and July, 1916. We understand that Mr. Campbell is disposed to accept the honor and great responsibility which this appointment means.

Cincinnati—The J. M. McCullough Sons Co. have closed out their cut flower and florist supply department.

Farrant's Point, Vt.—The Farrant greenhouses were destroyed by fire March 13, the loss on houses and adjacent property being estimated as between $8,000 and $10,000.

Philadelphia—A disastrous fire occurred at the establishment of Alphonse Pericat at Collingdale on the morning of Friday, March 17. Everything was burned up except one small greenhouse. Loss estimated at $25,000.

PITTSBURGH.

The McCullough Company recently began to handle the new Prince Deanna rose, which is taking very well.

Ralph W. Pinner and John W. Bracken, of the A. W. Smith Company, are designing an old-fashioned garden for Mary Roberts Rinehart's beautiful estate near Glen Osborne.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Helen Frances Collins of Meyersdale, Pa., to De Forest W. Ludwig. The wedding will probably be an event of the early summer.

Francis Smith, salesman for the G. P. Weaklin Co., made a farewell visit in Beaver Falls, Pa., last week with his family, who are leaving shortly to make their home in Philadelphia.

Miss Eliza McKinley, who has been seriously ill all winter, is now convalescing in the country near Greensburg. She expects to be able to resume her work for Randolph & McClements in time for the Easter trade.

Andrew McKendry, who has been in supervision of Russell H. Boggs' estate at Sewickley Heights, has returned to Madison, New Jersey. He is succeeded by Robert Taylor, who comes from New York. The Boggs' greenhouse is being renovated and replenished.

Augustus W. Weber, who left "Solitude," the estate of the late George Westinghouse, last spring, has entered the service of Michael L. Benedum of "Graystone," but will continue to live on the Westinghouse estate. The grounds of "Graystone" are being completely remodeled under the supervision of Berthold C. Frosch, and an addition is to be made to the greenhouse this spring.

The 62nd birthday anniversary of Henry Meuschke, treasurer of the Ludwig Floral Company, was celebrated last Sunday with a dinner for 120 guests at his home in Castle Shannon. During the entertainment Congressman Barchfeld made an address in behalf of the guests, congratulating and wishing Mr. Meuschke many happy returns of the day. Both William and George Meuschke, of the Ludwig Floral Company, are serving this week and next on the jury.

Groton, Ct.—Mrs. Lucy S. Chapman has brought suit in the New London County Superior Court to have her marriage with Christopher B. Chapman, florist, Eastern Point, annulled, alleging that he is a bigamist.

CHICAGO.

C. E. Washburn and Mr. Washburn are now on their way to Pasadena, where "Ned" Washburn is establishing a greenhouse business.

Sam Pearce, the principal grower of bulbous stock for cut flowers in this vicinity, is cutting Darwin tulips now and the stems measure 15 to 20 inches. Von Sion narcissus is now ready for cutting.

St. Patrick's Day trade was quite lively. There were not enough shamrocks to go around. One large department store could have used many more, twenty thousand having been sold in less than two days.

John Poehlmann, Chas. Erne and John Enders are still invalids. They are all so much a part of the life of the wholesale business and have been identified with it for so many years that their absence is keenly felt.

August Poehlmann, with family and friends, had a narrow escape last Sunday when their car collided with another at Montrose boulevard and Ashland avenue. It was with difficulty that the party were extricated through an incision made in the top, after the overturning of the machine.

It is still early to predict the Easter supply of flowers and plants, but it is generally conceded that the backbone of the Easter lily business in Chicago has been broken, for each year more of the smaller growers follow their chrysanthemums with Easter lilies and prices drop lower and lower as this flower becomes each year more of a catch crop. Possibly in anticipation of a heavy supply for a late Easter, some very low prices are already booked on advance orders.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Thieves breaking into the flower store of O. A. C. Oehmler, broke open his desk and stole bills and change to the amount of $20, according to a report made to the police. The store was entered through the cellar.

Arrangements have been completed for more than 100 members of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., with their families and friends, to attend the Philadelphia Flower Show, leaving here on March 27 at 11 A. M.

Youngstown, O.—Paul V. Manning has purchased the entire stock and good will of the firm of Tierney & Manning, florists, 212 North Phelps street, and will continue the business.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Albert L. Anthony has qualified as a member of the Park Commission to which he was recently elected, succeeding William H. Covell, Jr.

Mrs. Elizabeth O'Connor has been granted a permit to remodel and enlarge her greenhouse on Lorane street, and make alterations in the office adjoining the range.

The Bristol taxpayers in financial town meeting last week refused to adopt the recommendation of the Town Council to appropriate $2,000 for the care of its trees.

George H. Johnson & Son of Providence, have submitted a bid to the Warwick Town Council to spray its trees and shrubs for the coming year. It will come up at the next meeting.

Everett C. Potter, of Auburn, R. I., was elected president of the Providence Market Gardeners' Association, at the second annual meeting and banquet held at the Crown Hotel last Saturday night. Speeches and an entertainment followed the dinner. Other officers were elected as follows: First vice-president, H. E. West; second vice-president, O. R. Peck; secretary and treasurer, George K. Tinkham; executive committee, Eugene W. Peck (chairman), Gardner Killey, Joshua Vose, George A. Fenner and Cosmo Dacchiolia.

Prof. Harland H. York of Brown University was elected president of the Rhode Island Arborists' Association at the annual meeting held last week at the State House. The other officers elected are as follows: Vice-president, Arthur Mowry, Woonsocket; Secretary and treasurer, Harry Harovitz, Providence; directors, Lewis H. Meader, Jr., W. H. Howe, Providence, and John H. Gavitt, Westerly. The association devoted considerable time to the discussion and votes toward the passage of an act to license arborists now pending before the legislature.

ST. LOUIS.

A. C. Zvolanek, of Lompoc, Cal., when visiting here last Saturday was taken in hand by the County Florists and shown the various establishments, especially those where sweet peas are grown.

At the opening of the new quarters of the German-American Bank a wealth of floral work was seen on Monday, March 20. For artistic workmanship those delivered by Miss M. S. Newman, Geo. Waldbart, J. J. Beneke, Fred. C. Weber, F. W. Brueinig and Grimm & Gorly should be given special mention. The Spring Flower Show Committee held its monthly meeting March 16 at the Bourdet Floral Co. office. Jules Bourdet, president of the Florist Club, was made manager and chairman of the executive committee. W. W. Ohlweiler is secretary of the committee. The guarantee fund has now reached $3,000, with more coming in. This show is to be held in the spring of 1917.

Springfield, Mass.—P. M. Andrower, formerly of Boston, and recently employed by different florists in this city, committed suicide by shooting himself on March 14.

TO KEW MEN IN AMERICA.

A reunion and banquet for Kew men, their wives and lady friends has been arranged to be held at "Shanley's," 117 West 42nd street, New York, on April 5th, at 7 P. M., the opening day of the New York Flower Show. Tickets for the above may be had from M. Free, Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Brooklyn, at $1.50 each, and it is desired that all Kew men who wish to attend will write to Mr. Free and secure tickets, also information regarding the reunion.

The business meeting will be held at 7 P. M., and the banquet at 8 P. M., and arrangements have been made for the entertainment of the ladies during the business meeting.

All Kew men are urged to attend and bring a lady, so don't forget the date, April 5th, the place, "Shanley's," and the time, 7 P. M.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The flower market has experienced at last the "slump" long dreaded but thus far escaped. Sunny skies succeeding the long stormy spell are pushing along rapidly the daffodils, lilies and roses. The rose receipts are increasing every day. Carnations are not coming in heavily, but sales are nevertheless very slow. Sweet peas are being received in unprecedented quantities. Snapdragons also are in overstock. The only bulb flowers that sell well are the Poets' narcissus. Darwin tulips have done very well but are now draggy. Pansies are very fine.

CINCINNATI Business has been steady and active and kept the market pretty well cleaned up in most all lines. Shipping business is very good. Roses are meeting with a good call and on some occasions last week were short because of the extraordinary demand caused by spring openings. Carnations are short of actual needs. Easter lilies are less plentiful and at times are scarce. Bulbous stock, with the exception of narcissi is not any too plentiful. Sweet peas are in a good supply and generally are excellent in quality. Lily of the valley meet with only an indifferent demand. The supply of callas and rubrum lilies is ample.

CHICAGO The tone of the market for the past week has been considered very good. The effect of Lent is about over, and with the exception of wedding orders, sales are as before that time-honored season began. Just now, the absence of wedding orders is almost a relief to the growers of lily of the valley who can hold back on their supply. The end is in sight with the tulip crop and daffodils reign without much to rival them in the domain of bulbous stock. All roses are plentiful and the demand is good, all the best grades bringing a fair price and nothing going to waste. The new roses have made a good run this winter and on the whole have been all that could be desired. American Beauties are still a scarce article and do not cut much of a figure in the market as compared to other years. There are many carnations, but not an over supply. Prices have come down and stock is generally used up. There is a good supply of lilies, mignonette, snapdragon, calendula, &c.

The market is getting loaded up in regular mid-lent fashion. The only thing that has held it back so long has been the inclemency of the weather. A surfeit is now in prospect and much lower prices are sure to follow. Roses of all varieties move sluggishly. Carnations are only in moderate surplus as yet but tulips, lilies, wallflowers, sweet peas and daisies are too abundant to maintain their normal value. Orchids are plentiful, the cattleya supply being more than sufficient. Of the latter C. Schroderae is having its usual poor reception.

The past week PHILADELPHIA has held fully up to the good average already reported. On the whole trading was even brisker and prices have realized a little better. St. Patrick may have helped a little to this good showing, but not very much. We saw very little this year of that abomination, the green carnation, so that it would appear that the good seed sown by Horticulture for many years is at last bearing fruit. The shortage on long-stemmed American Beauty roses is past and these are now coming in more freely and prices have dropped 25 per cent. in the last few days. Other grades of the same rose are in good supply and there is a distinct appreciation in the quality. Carnations are still on the scarce side, and selling well at good prices. In fact, take the season all through it has been a fine one for the carnation men. Nothing in carnations for the street boys; the only thing they seem able to get hold of is the violet. That one-time favorite remains very much in the doldrums. It must be a hard job for these Hudson river boys to make ends meet nowadays. Sweet peas plentiful and going well. Lily of the valley demand improved a little last week. Mignonette good but rather on the scarce side.

Prices remain stationary. PITTSBURGH Flowers are none too plentiful, everything—violets excepted—being utilized as they come in. As a wholesale man put it, violets "were all to the bad" during last week, the extremely cold weather precluding the street venders (who are the only sellers) from appearing at their usual haunts. American Beauties of good quality are coming in once more, and the result of the clearer weather is noticeable in the quantity and quality of all bulb stock.

The market is in a healthy condition and stock plentiful. There is an abundance of good roses. Carnations, sweet peas and violets are so many just now that buyers make their own price in big lots. Southern bulb stock shipments have forced the price down on the home-grown lily of the valley and lilies are in good demand. Smilax is scarce and good long strings demand 20 cents each.

Business is beginning to pick up and the number of social events calling for high grade flowers is increasing. Flowers of all kinds are cleaning up fairly well. Lily of the valley continues to be of a rather poor quality, although holding up to $5 per hundred. The supply of single violets is dwindling but the street men seem to continue to be supplied, although prices are advancing. There is little change in the rose market and in many cases these are going to buyers at just about what the latter want to offer for them. American Beauty roses are more plentiful although somewhat higher. Gardenias also are more plentiful. Orchids are still off the market so far as local production is concerned. Carnations are more plentiful in all varieties. Sweet peas are very plentiful and in some varieties very good prices prevail. Cherry, apple and other spring blossoms have made their appearance and are in good demand for table decorations.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

Notice is hereby given that the variety Crystal White, formerly called "Paper White," is submitted for registration by H. H. Baer, of New Hyde Park, N. Y.

The Nomenclature Committee suggests a new method of registration, viz., the publication of a brief description with the suggested names for the varieties submitted for registration. If there is no objection to this name before April 1, this variety will be registered as Crystal White.

Description:—Bloom medium size (8 cm.). Stamen filaments white, anthers bluish; perianth white, blotched Tyrian rose. Seems a compact bloom of good substance, five blooms being open at one time. It is early to mid-season, tall, erect, and bears a large number of blooms (21); is a vigorous grower and well furnished with medium broad leaves; seems rather prolific.

A. C. BEAL,
Chairman Nomenclature Com.

At the April meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, F. A. Smith, principal of the Essex Agricultural School, Hathorne, Mass., will lecture on "Orcharding." Mr. Smith is a well-known orchard expert, and none should miss hearing him.

Obituary

Reuben Arnold

Reuben Arnold, one of the best known horticulturists in the United States, died at his home in Cambridge, Mass., on March 16, 1916. He was 70 years of age. He had been in poor health for a year, but death was made her home with him.

Alexander Nelson.

Alexander Nelson, well known throughout New England and particularly about Boston for the past 40 years, in his business of boiler setting, piping and general greenhouse heating jobbing, died at his home in Cambridge, Mass., on March 16. His age was about 70 years. He had been in poor health for a year, but death was due to pneumonia.

Charles W. Northrup.

Charles W. Northrup passed away at his home in LaGrange, Ill., on March 12th, at the age of 65 years. Mr. Northrup was one of the early settlers and his place was originally a private one, but gradually grew to be commercial. His own time was mostly spent at the La Grange bank, of which he was an officer. His influence in the beautifying of his town was marked and to him is due in large measure the appreciation of the use of flowers and plants around the homes. The greenhouses were torn down two years ago but the grounds continue to be one of the beauty spots of that Chicago suburb.

Charles E. Pierce.

The sympathy of the entire trade is with the relatives of the late Charles E. Pierce, of Bowen Road, Washington, D. C., who passed away last week at the Casualty Hospital, to which place he was taken after becoming ill at his home. He was thirty-nine years of age and was the son of the late William P. Pierce, who died about ten years ago. The senior Pierce had been in the florist business for about twenty-five years prior to the time of his death. Mr. Pierce is survived by four brothers, James F., John H., William T. and George E. Pierce, and the funeral was held from the residence of his brother William. The interment was in Forestville, Md.

David H. Sheehan.

David H. Sheehan, for 22 years superintendent of the public parks of Brookline, Mass., died on Thursday evening, March 16, of acute bronchitis, following a long period of ill health. Mr. Sheehan has been long associated with the gardening business in Boston and vicinity. For a number of years previous to his appointment on the Brookline parks he was employed in the Boston public grounds under William Doogue. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, 72 years ago, took an agricultural course at Trinity College in Dublin and was graduated from that institution. He came to America and settled in Cleveland, later coming to Boston.

Mr. Sheehan was an industrious and able public servant and one of the highest respect among the gardening fraternity. Four children survive: Dr. Thomas Sheehan, Miss Marie J. Sheehan, Dr. Martin D. Sheehan of Stoneham and Edward P. Sheehan, assistant superintendent of parks and playgrounds in Boston.

Mrs. Matthew Crawford.

The tragic death of Mrs. Matthew Crawford has brought a thrill of sorrow to a large circle of friends, and among these The Gladiolus Society of Ohio, of which she was a highly esteemed charter member, desires to express its appreciation of her beautiful life, and of its loss in her sudden passing away. United with her, as we have been, in the love of the good, the true, and the beautiful, under circumstances that have revealed to us the worth of her character, we will each feel as a personal loss her being so strangely and suddenly called away, beyond the reach of our association and friendship, and we shall never forget what her life has meant to us, and to all who have known her.

The suddenness and shock of her death intensifies the grief we feel at the loss of her companionship, and will but fix more indelibly in memory the loving thoughts that will long be cherished in the hearts that have known her so long and so well, and even of those who have only of late come into the circle of her friends. A beautiful and useful life, extended through many years, growing into the loving appreciation of devoted friends, and the glad looking forward to even better things yet to be—what more has life to offer than this?

And so, while we offer sincere and heartfelt sympathy to bereaved family and friends, whose loss we also in lesser measure feel, we know there is a strain of gratitude even in our grieving—we see the heavenly sunshine gilding our tears, and holding up before us the bow of hope, until, numbering this friend with others "loved and lost awhile" we say—Farewell, departed one, but not forever—We shall meet again, Friend of happy days gone by

WEED KILLER

THE VERY NEWEST AND QUICKEST METHOD OF DESTROYING WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

We manufacture the strongest line of DISINFECTANTS on the market.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Standard Cyclopaedia of Horticulture; L. H. Bailey. The appearance of Volume 4 of this monumental work will be a welcome event for many ardent horticulturists, judging from the incessant inquiries we have received during the past few months as to when the next volume might be expected. Two more volumes will complete the set. Volume 4 includes topics from L to O inclusive, pages 1761-2422 and figures 2048-2693. So there are 661 pages of text and 645 cuts in this volume. In addition to this there are 20 full page plates of much beauty, of which 4 are in colors. We know of no work with which this can be compared except the older and first edition. The elaborations and additional matter make it practically a new production as compared with its predecessor. In this volume a new section under the heading of North American States occupies 142 pages, devoted to the horticultural history, industries and products of the entire country. Landscape gardening makes a very interesting section of 41 pages, among the contributing authors being Issa Tanimura, Wm. Verbeck, Ferruccio Vitale, A. W. Cowell, F. L. Olmsted, O. C. Simonds, F. A. Waugh, Wilhelm Miller, Samuel Parsons and L. A. Berckmans. "Orchids," as a general topic, fills 23 pages, in addition to six pages of oncidiums, eight of odontoglossums, etc., this being more than double the space devoted to this subject in the older Cyclopaedia. There are 17 pages of Liliium and 10 pages of Lonicera.

The foregoing will suffice to give a faint idea of the incomparable superiority of this new edition.

We find, however, some apparent discrepancies in the matter describing Nephrolepis—a genus which is very exhaustively treated—in which the variety Piersoni is mentioned as having been the first of the two-pinnate forms of exaltata to appear. We think this is not authentic as the variety Fosteriana (Anna Foster) was the first break according to indisputable records, having been discovered in 1890 and disseminated in 1892 and the variety Piersoni was not sent out until the following year.

Bailey's Cyclopaedia is indispensable to anyone making horticulture his business or his pastime, and the enormous sale already reached while the set is still incomplete shows that this fact is generally realized. For the worker to whom the investment for the full set at once would be a formidable proposition, the payment of six dollars each for the volumes as they appear, at intervals of several months, is comparatively easy. Those who have not already done so should lose

A SHREDDED MANURE HUMUS COMPOST

MAGIC HUMUS is a pure plant food unleached and unburnt. Its analysis proves that it contains potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen in available form. These essentials, together with Compost make a ready soil builder.

MAGIC HUMUS COMPOST is the one Compost that possesses the body and fibre to absorb and retain nature's moisture a long time after it is put into the ground.

Ordinary commercial fertilizer contains no Humus, cannot spread its fertilizing properties and is only available to the soil in the spot where the material is drilled in.

MAGIC HUMUS spreads itself and enriches the soil all around. It comes to the gardener after months of careful preparation, thoroughly dried by Nature, free from weed-seed, without the odor so peculiar to other fertilizers, is sanitary and agreeable to handle.

MAGIC HUMUS can be used on the top of sand or hard ground as a soil, or cultivated into the ground in the garden with a hand cultivator or plow.

The garden receiving a liberal application of MAGIC HUMUS Compost is permanently enriched with plant food and soil.

A PROMINENT CARNATION GROWER SAYS THIS ABOUT THE STANDARD RECORDING THERMOMETER

Standard Thermometer Co.,
Boston, Mass.

Lancaster, Pa.

Gentlemen:

I've sent me 25 record plates like the enclosed sketches and I want to say that the machine, bought a good many years back, is keeping up its good work right along. I think it a very useful adjunct to good plant growing, and it should be in every greenhouse, as reference to it may often tell what is wrong with a batch of plants.

Very truly yours, ALBERT M. HERR.

The actuating element of the Standard Recording Thermometer is of lamina metal which, besides being extremely sensitive to temperature changes, is practically indestructible. Record charts are furnished either daily or weekly, and the whole mechanism is contained in an attractive metal case fitted with lock and key, which insures the record from being tampered with.

The clock movement is of extremely high grade; everything about the instrument is up to the highest possible standard of manufacture.

tion. The society is on the right track and is fortunate in having found a friend so good and useful as Mr. McFarland to give his time and experience to the preparation of this volume. Mr. McFarland's relation to the enterprise has been of a distinctly philanthropic character, inasmuch as the labor of getting together, editing and publishing has been done without compensation and the commercial organization with which he is connected has agreed to split the loss on this first issue with the American Rose Society.

As mentioned in our previous notice, the contents of this publication cover a wide field of practical information, from the pens of a number of writers fully competent and influential. One of the most notable features is the section devoted to the insects and diseases of the rose. The information therein given is equally desirable for the commercial cut-flower man and the amateur. There are 180 pages, with two colored plates and a number of handsome halftones. Copies of the book are supplied free to members of the American Rose Society. Others may obtain the Annual by remitting $1.00 for Associate Membership to the secretary, Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Annual for 1916. A Digest of the Events of the Horticultural Year. A year book for florists, seedsmen, nurserymen, gardeners and all interested in horticulture. This exhaustive compendium of useful information found a ready welcome on its first appearance last year and will, no doubt, find a still larger circulation in this new issue, in which are included many new features. The work has been very thoroughly done by the editor, J. Harrison Dick. It is published by the A. T. DeLaMare Ptg. and Pub Co., New York. Price 50 cents.

Hardy Perennials

For many years one of our most important specialties, our stock this season is again in prime condition, more extensive than ever, with a complete assortment of both standard varieties and novelties.

Roses, Two Year Old Plants for Outdoor Planting

Our Roses are all field grown plants which were dug in the fall, and which during the winter months were potted into 5 and 6 inch pots, they are stored in cold houses and frames, being retarded as much as possible, and are just the sort of stock that will please your retail customers. We are particularly strong on Hybrid Teas but carry also nearly all other types.

Aquatic Plants

Eight acres of Ponds are devoted to Hardy Nymphaeas and Nelumbiums alone, a large assortment of Tropical Nymphaeas, Victoria Regia, etc., as well as sub-aquatic plants for marginal planting. If interested in these, send for our book "Dreer's Water Lilies," it is not only descriptive, but gives full cultural directions.

Hardy Shrubs and Vines

A full assortment including Hardy Azaleas, Rhododendrons, New Buddleias, Daphne Cneorum, Hydrangea Paniculata and Arborvitae, Japanese Maples, Altheas, Deutzias, Philadelphus, Viburnums, Weigellas, Boxwoods, Ampelopsis, Clematis, Wisterias, etc.

Decorative Plants

Our strong specials, Palms and Ferns, also a full line of Bay Trees, Crotons, Dracaenas, Ficus, Pandanus, etc.

Bulbs and Roots

Amaryllis, Begonias, Caladiums, Dahlias, Cannas, Lilies, Tigridias, Gladiolus, Tuberoses, etc.

All of the above and many others are fully described in our current Wholesale List, January to June, which will be mailed upon request to anyone in the trade.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Azaleas

Easter is so late this year it will be a hard task to keep these plants back in order to have them in good condition three or four days before Easter. There will be little need of hastening azaleas for the great spring holiday, but should there be some plants showing merely a swelling of buds, then an increase in fire heat and an exposure to the brightest sunshine will likely bring them out in time. A very cool and shaded place, on the other hand, must be found for those too far advanced. To hold back the most forward ones place in darkened and very cool quarters, but azaleas must have water in sufficiency which may mean somewhat less for those in a cool place than those under regular forcing, but always enough to prevent any drying out at the roots. Ten days before Easter it will be just right for azaleas to be about half way out in bloom.

Antirrhinums

Where antirrhinums are raised somewhat extensively, it is best to always have seedlings on hand as a source for annual propagation. The blooms of the seedlings are never quite so uniform in color as those raised by cuttings. The second growth coming in the form of sturdy shoots from the base of the plant makes the best cuttings that will produce long, large flowering spikes. It is time now to start stock for next winter's crop of flowers. The seeds of the tall and most improved kinds in separate colors—white, pink, red and yellow—are good for indoor bench culture. They are a very satisfactory flower for the florist to grow as they are persistent bloomers and have excellent lasting qualities. They can be grown in pots with frequent shifting during the summer.

Easter Preparations

All flowering Easter stock will now be pot bound and will need copious watering especially hydrangeas, spiraeas and rambler roses. Narcissi and tulips which are in flats can be placed in pans now. Select the short and stocky ones and do it just before the flowers open. Treat hyacinths the same way. Pansies and double daisies that are coming into flower can be made up in pans or baskets. Such flowering shrubs as lilac, genista, viburnum, deutzia, acacia, azalea and double-flowering cherries, plums and peaches should now be showing flower and would be better to be opened in a cooler house for the gradual hardening off of such stock. Some callas, cyclamens, begonias, stocks, geraniums, mignonette, primulas and many others can now be worked up for Easter trade. The most shapely plants and those that are sure to be in bloom, should be set aside.

Perennial Border

To renew perennial border, as the ground dries up, remove the covering and look over the plants as the winter sometimes does considerable injury. It is a good plan to replant every fifth or sixth year, digging up all the plants and giving the soil a liberal amount of cow manure and bone. A good dressing of well-rotted manure thoroughly incorporated with the soil is absolutely essential. Before commencing to plant a border, it is well to construct tables or make a list of the material, specifying respective times of flowering, colors and altitudes so as to have a good arrangement.

Swainsonas

Plants that have been growing thrifty will have a lot of material fit for propagation. The best cuttings are those selected out of the axil formed by the leaf and main stem. These can just be pulled out sideways and will not need any trimming. Place in a moderately warm propagating bench and by keeping them shaded and watered for about twelve to fifteen days they will root nicely, after which they can be potted into 2½-inch pots, using a compost of fibrous soil three parts, leaf mold and well rotted cow manure one part each. Keep shaded for a few days when they should have all the sun and light possible. These will make fine plants by Decoration Day as they are suitable for cemetery planting. Give them a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees at night.

Astilbe for Memorial Day

Where the young growths are a couple of inches high by this time they will be all right for Memorial Day. They will stand manure water twice a week which will improve the bloom and foliage. When they are full out give some shade.

Next Week:—Crotons; Dieffenbachias; Easter Preparations; Gloxinias; Palms from Seed; Starting Cobaea scandens.

A Word to the Trade

In the advertising pages of this number you will find the Spring Trade Offerings of the Leading Dealers. These firms are in business to supply you and are worthy of the support which they ask for in these announcements. The special stock they offer is the best ever placed before the trade. Read what they have to say and then get busy with them as to prices and quantity.

The Flower Shows.

Business may keep you away from one of the shows, but it may be possible to attend the other. It will be well worth while. There will be more flowers than ever, with all the latest inventions, time savers and improvements in greenhouse construction, and all these will be well worth while seeing. Growers doing a retail business will do well to see that all their customers are informed of the show and many will think it a real treat to receive a ticket. The more people attending the better it will be for the florist trade all over, as the more the public see of flowers the more will they buy. There still are people who have never been to a flower show, and to send these to the coming show will make them enthusiastic about flowers, to say the least. If every grower secures two there will be quite a crowd.

Keep the Houses Cool.

With the thermometer outside at 56 the snow is going very fast and we certainly hope we will not see any more until next winter. The sun is very warm on clear days and the result is that the houses will have to have good attention or they will become too warm. If this happens quite often the roses will become soft and a dose of mildew is almost sure to follow. There is very little use to air by the inch on a clear warm day. If the houses have been closed down at night they should have a crack of air first thing in the morning and more air added as soon as they begin to rise. As soon as four inches of air is put on and the houses rise, double the amount can be safely put on and this again doubled, until they are up full if necessary. It will be best to have them up full when they go up to 78, and if they go above this with full air on the heat will not hurt them so much as the air will not be so humid and the leaves will not become soft. In the wide houses the wind blowing in will not hit the plants very much for the vents are very high up, so there will be little danger of the plants getting chilled. In the small three-quarter-span houses, the plants are quite hardy as a rule and if the wind does blow in a little, it will do no harm. Do not allow any doors to remain open, for the draft from the cross houses will start new air currents and this may chill the plants for they will not be accustomed to it as they are to the air from the ventilators. Doors that are hard to close and are used a great deal should have springs attached so that they will close automatically after a person passes through. The end doors should not be used and the same is true of the side ventilators. The latter should not be used until the hot summer weather and then they should be looked after by an experienced man.

Syringing.

The plants can hardly get too much syringing from now on and no opportunity to syringe should be lost. We have had quite a little cloudy weather the last two or three months and there is bound to be a little spider here and there, and if these are not cleaned out they will spread very fast until they are beyond control and the result will be several hundred dollars damage to the plants, as it will take them quite a while to recover, if they succeed in getting over it. Syringe as rapidly as possible being careful to syringe the top benches first and then directing the stream so that all the spent water will fly into the walk if possible. The plants must not be dry when this work is done, for they would get burned badly. If inclined to be dry at all they had better get a watering, and defer the syringing for a day. However, by getting around early the houses can be watered early in the morning and they syringed later. Many growers syringe late in the afternoon or on cloudy days. This may be good and well where the water drains right down and the houses dry off quickly but we would never recommend it or do it ourselves. It is always best to have the plants nice and dry before night and to have them so it will be necessary to shake them after they receive their syringing. This should be done as soon as the house is finished, so that they will have every chance possible.

Sulphur.

It will be necessary to use sulphur a little more freely from now on, and this especially on plants that are not sprayed to prevent mildew. A little applied to the pipes here and there will kill all the mildew as long as steam is used. Should there be any troublesome spots here and there it will be best to blow a little sulphur over these with bellows. It is not advisable to blow sulphur over all the plants, unless it is necessary, for the sun is quite strong and the fumes created when the rays hit the sulphur will bleach the buds pretty badly. Spraying with Fungine will be more effective and will not harm or discolor the buds or foliage. However, with proper attention paid to ventilation during the day and proper care of the fires at night, there should be little trouble with mildew, and a little sulphur applied to the steam pipes as stated above will take care of the little speck here and there that may appear in spite of good care.

That Easter Crop.

Right now is the time to take care of the plants to insure nice roses for Easter. All buds that will be cut for the holiday will be shooting up now, and with proper feeding, watering and ventilating will turn out to be nice. It will not pay to run the houses warm to force the plants more, for if anything were gained by this method it would all be lost later and more. Keep the house cool, plants well fed and surrounded by pure sweet air, and you will be doing as much as you can. The plants will usually do the rest. It is best not to try to dictate to the plants. Give them ideal growing conditions, and if they have any vitality at all, they will respond accordingly.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

A Notable Triumph Exhibits of Exceptional Quality—A Great Trade Section—Trade Visitors from All Over the Country—Philadelphia Public Enthusiastic—List of Prize Exhibits

The great enterprise upon which the leaders of the S. A. F. and affiliated organizations, together with representative horticultural people of Philadelphia, have been preparing for so assiduously is now a reality. It opened on schedule time, Saturday afternoon, March 25, far from complete because of congested traffic conditions on the railroads, and exasperating slowness on the part of the express companies but far enough advanced to set at rest forever any doubts as to its success in every respect and with more than enough material to fill the big exhibition building to the corners.

It was a most glorious day—the opening of the long deferred spring weather. The exterior appearance as one approached the building was inspiring, H. F. Michell Co. and H. A. Dreer having adorned the lawns on either side with handsome evergreens, Michell including a brilliant display of hyacinths and tulips, while Adolph Muller had done his share in and around the entrance with groups of conifers. Inside of the building there was much confusion owing largely to the excess of material and the problem of finding a place for it all. There were S. A. F. members on all sides—old war horses and young recruits—exchanging greetings and dodging betimes to avoid the scurrying exhibitors and helpers and noisy trucks. Promptly at 2 o'clock the music started up and shortly afterward the dignitaries of the city and the S. A. F. appeared on the balcony and words of welcome and expressions of responsive pleasure were voiced. Among the representatives of the S. A. F. participating in the opening formalities we noticed W. F. Gude of Washington, President McRorie of San Francisco, George Asmus of Chicago and the veteran Robert Craig of Philadelphia.

While this was going on the judges with commendable patience and faithful zeal were working away on their herculean job and it was not long before blue ribbons and red ribbons began to tell their story here and there, carrying joy here and consternation there and precipitating many a discussion as to the "why and wherefore."

The National Flower Show at Philadelphia is undeniably the most dazzling floral spectacle ever presented in this country. The vast space in the main hall, without pillar or obstruction of any sort, amply lighted from a roof of moderate height, lends itself well to an exhibition of this character and whatever defects one might find are mainly due to the superabundance of exhibition material.

EXHIBITORS AND AWARDS.

Philadelphia's Convention Hall, occupying an entire city square, proved to be far too small for the exhibits, and there is really enough plant and flower material throughout its acres of floor space which would easily fill two halls of such area. Many of the groups are massed as close as the pots can be placed together, and the aisles are totally inadequate for the throngs of visitors. Apart from the impressiveness of the groups from the view point of the general public, there are some features of this exhibition which to the professional present qualities of excellence and novelty seldom reached.

Lists of first and second prize awards in detail are at all times very dry reading and in that form they interest but few. In the present instance where the schedule comprises nearly one thousand classes, each including first and second prizes, we have preferred to condense considerably without, however, intending to omit mention of any worthy winner. While not intending to make any suggestion of comparative priority or value or to overlook any of the many exhibits which won honor in the various classes, we name a few outstanding exhibits which impressed us as exceptional in their character. Taking up the decorative plants we would mention first the group of acacias arranged by Thomas Roland. We have not words at our command to fully describe the beauty of this group. It was a picture never to be forgotten and if Boston gets nothing else in the shows of 1916 this one triumph is sufficient. The group comprised thirty varieties of acacias, altogether three hundred plants, inclusive of a splendid line of Erica melanthera which formed the outline of the group. The acacias were superbly flowered and in size up to twenty-five feet in height.

The garden of hybrid tea roses by H. A. Dreer, which was not entered in competition but which was the winner of two special gold medals, was one of the most deservedly admired exhibits in the hall. It must have occupied a space of not less than one thousand sq. ft. and the roses which were arranged in four long beds bordered with sod were remarkable for their splendid foliage and flowers. We do not think there ever was a group of garden roses staged in this country to equal it. At each end there was a bed of bulbs in flower and in the center a basin of aquatics. In passing we might mention two new nymphaeas shown here. One was a new hardy French hybrid named Picciola. It is a decided advance over all others in earliness, as last year it was in bloom outside on April 28th. The other was raised at Riverton and has been named Dreer's True Blue. It is unquestionably the deepest purple in color of any variety yet introduced. We understand that Messrs. Eisele, Clark and Anderson were responsible for the growing and arranging of the Dreer rose exhibit.

The two rose gardens in competition, arranged by the Robert Craig Company and A. N. Pierson, Inc., were among the sensational attractions of the show and were a center of great interest to visitors. Craig's production, which won the first prize, was a walled-in Italian garden with a fine piece of lawn bordered with roses in bloom and with a central fountain. A stone seat with hat and sunshade carelessly thrown on it gave a very inviting appearance, and altogether it was a very attractive looking spot. The Pierson exhibit was enclosed with a rustic fence, over which climbing roses were trained and it made a very sweet picture, showing dainty arrangement. It was intended to represent an English cottage garden. In the rear there was a cozy looking rustic arbor and seat. In this garden was shown the new bright pink double-flowered climbing rose named Elizabeth Ziegler, which is to be disseminated in 1918 and which received a special silver medal.

Julius Roehrs Co. staged some magnificent displays. Their group of orchids arranged with a mirror imitation of a pool of water in which the flowers were reflected and with a beautifully flowered specimen Miltonia shown in an illuminated velvet frame made a very effective showing. Roehrs' rock garden was another very much admired exhibit. It was arranged with much skill and attracted many people who seemed to be particularly interested in the little rockery plants shown. Messrs. Roehrs were quite elated over the fact that they won a prize in every entry which they made, the rock garden, the orchid group and a number of individual orchid plants having scored first prize. Louis Burk also showed a rockery arrangement which was very effective. Orchids were banked up alongside of a waterfall, below which was a rocky pool with ferns and bog loving plants naturally planted. It made a very artistic picture.

M. H. Walsh's Rambler roses are always a center of much interest and his exhibit on this occasion was no exception. Quite a number of novelties were shown in trained pyramidal form, and here again much interest was evinced by the public in the names of the various varieties found there. W. A. Manda brought one of the largest exhibits. He had some very extensive groups of decorative plants and flowering bulbs, as well as orchids and other leading classes.

One of the best displays in the hall and one which attracted much attention was the big formal Holland bulb garden by Michell's Seed House. This was backed with a typical Holland scene with moving electrical illuminated mill wheel and a grass-lawn and pebbled walks fenced in with a rustic railing. This exhibit was in the trade display class, but its character was such that we cannot well omit mention of it right here. F. R. Pierson was as usual an unrivalled exhibitor of nephrolepis in all the many beautiful varieties which have emanated from his place. There were some very elegant specimens in this group.

The large plant groups from the Philadelphia estates really made the show from the standpoint of stately effect. Some of the palms were enormous. Among the big contributors of these gigantic specimens was Thomas Long, gardener to G. W. C. Drexel, who in addition to his other winnings captured a special silver medal for a beautiful plant of Dracaena tricolor. Another large contributor of stately foliage plants was Wm. Kleinheinz, gardener to J. E. Widener, and there were also many fine specimens from J. W. Pepper. We might briefly mention some of the other exhibits which were admired, as follows: W. Atlee Burpee made a superb showing of sweet peas, artistically arrayed, most of the varieties being Mr. Kerr's new Spencer seedlings. Sweet peas, including many new varieties were also shown for the first time by A. C. Thompson, New York. Some of the best tubs, grown for Mr. Zvolanek by Gude Bros., Washington, a beautiful white specimen in the form of a little vase with yellow and red markings by R. M. Thompson, for W. H. Thompson.

son, Yonkers; crotons and dracaenas in beautiful specimens from Robert Craig Company, aquatic plants with flowering specimens from Wm. Trick, etc. The results of these prizes being well shown in the fact that they looked well after being in flower a short time.

THE AWARDS

The first prize awards, taking up the classes as arranged in the schedule, beginning with the private growers' classes, were as follows:

Wm. Kleinheinz is recorded as winning first prize in all classes, including lilacs, rhododendrons, crotons, kentias, phoenix, palms, nephrolepis, orchids and bulbs, altogether thirty first prizes, besides quite a number of seconds.

J. H. Dodd, Lydenhurst, gardener for John Wanamaker, won first on anthuriums, gardenias, nemesias, pansies, Primula malacoides, cycas, dracaenas, kentias, palms and bay trees.

J. W. Pepper, Jenkintown, was another large winner, taking first on cyclamen, phoenix, stag's horn fern, hyacinths, narcissus, tulips, lily of the valley and callas, several classes being included in some instances.

W. L. Ellis, Bryn Mawr, first on amaryllis, heliotrope, primulas, group of blooming plants and selaginellas. Howard Gould, Fort Washington, N. Y., amaryllis hybrid. S. T. Bodine, Villa Nova, specimen anthurium, nepenthes.

Josef Goetter, Devon, cinerarias, primulas, group of flowering and foliage plants. Edgar Scott, Lansdowne, cinerarias. G. H. McFadden, Rosemont, genistas, astilbes, tulips, narcissus, Darwin tulips. John Gribbel, Wyncote, marguerites, schizanthus. Edgar T. Scott, schizanthus.

Thos. McKean, Rosemont, spiraeas, narcissus, tulips. Joseph Crowther, Devon, spiraeas. W. H. Smith, Bryn Mawr, flowering plants. Thos. W. Logan, Jenkintown, specimen wistaria, davallia, tree fern, Darwin tulips, breeder tulips.

John Dunn, Lansdowne, group of flowering plants arranged for effect. Mrs. Chas. Wheeler, Bryn Mawr, mushrooms. John Hobson, Radnor, crotons. T. W. Geary, Chestnut Hill, crotons. J. Goodier, Trenton, N. J., kentias.

Thos. Long, Bryn Mawr, phoenix, specimen foliage plant, adiantums, cibotium, fern groups, gleichenia, gonophlebium, polypodium, pteris. C. G. Roebeling, various orchid classes. H. A. Poth, hyacinths, tulips, Easter lilies. Thos. Gaynor, narcissus, tulips in many classes, callas. G. W. Elkins, Elkins Park, adiantums. Louis Burk, gardener J. C. Wurst, many orchid classes. Miss Thompson, tulips, narcissus. Eugene Burkhart, Torresdale, gardener for R. F. Forderer estate, miniature lawn with flower beds.

The foregoing were all more or less represented in the second premium list also.

In the plant section for classes open to all, Wm. Kleinheinz won on Easter lilies and H. A. Poth on geranium Helen Michell. On cut flowers, W. A. Manda won on display and collection of orchids, also on nine specimen flower classes. A. F. Smith of Newtown and Kessle Bros. of Penn Yan, won on antirrhinums. W. L. Ellis on freesias. A. J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass., on lupins, stocks and violets. J. L. Carter of Narberth, on mignonette. Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., on pansies. C. F. Cusper, Rhinebeck, N. Y., on violets. Charles Henry Fox, Philadelphia, Pa., on wall flowers.

On dinner table decoration open to private gardeners only, W. B. Thompson, Yonkers, N. Y., won the gold medal, the silver medal going to Miss Thomson, Merion, Pa.

In section K, devoted to plants in flower by commercial growers, Thomas Roland won all the prizes, first and second, in all the classes for acacias. W. A. Manda was first on anthuriums, and Azalea mollis. Robert Craig Company, bougainvilleas, cyclamens, group of flowering and foliage plants arranged for effect, hydrangeas three classes, rhododendrons four classes, astilbes two classes and wistaria. Julius Roehrs Company, collection of forced shrubs, herbaceous plants, etc., arranged for effect. Wm. Sim, bed of pansies. Knight & Struck Company, collection of ericas, etc.

In the section devoted to bulbs in flower, commercial growers, Robert Craig Co. was first on lilies, fifty pots, and A. E. Wohler, Narberth, narcissus twenty pans, while H. F. Michell Company won the gold medal and first prize for display of bulbs, etc., arranged as a Dutch bulb garden with accessories.

On ferns and selaginellas for commercial growers, W. A. Manda was first on twelve ferns, stag's horn fern, tree fern and specimen fern. F. R. Pierson Company, nephrolepis collection and specimens.

In the orchid section for commercial growers, Julius Roehrs Company won first prize and gold medal for group arranged for effect, collection of six plants, and six specimen classes of various orchids. W. A. Manda, first on twelve plants, on twenty-five cypripediums, six specimen classes including the gold medal for hybrid orchid raised in America. Lager & Hurrell, brasso-cattleya specimen and three other specimen classes.

On palms and foliage plants for commercial growers, W. A. Manda won on arecas, box trees, cocos, ficus, kentias, phoenix, specimen palm, stove and greenhouse plants, yew trees, forced shrubs and herbaceous plants arranged for effect, collection of conifers, collection of Japanese maples, eighteen prizes altogether. Robert Craig Co. won on dracaenas, Ficus pandurata, Phoenix Roebelinii, crotons and cycas.

For the sake of brevity, we have omitted the winners of second prizes in the foregoing classes, but the list was composed mainly of the names winning first prizes in various other classes.

ROSES.

Roses in pots and tubs by commercial growers were staged on Saturday, March 25th. Cut roses were staged on Monday, March 27th. As before mentioned, the principal interest attached to the display of rose plants arranged as a rose garden, any or all classes, covering 500 sq. ft. with appropriate accessories. First prize, $500, was won by Robert Craig Co.; second prize, $300, by A. N. Pierson, Inc.; third prize, $300, by M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass. On display of rose plants covering 200 sq. ft. of space arranged for effect, A. N. Pierson won first, $200, and Robert Craig Co., second, $100. M. H. Walsh was first with specimens Lady Gay, Hiawatha, Excelsa and Mrs. M. H. Walsh. A. N. Pierson was first on specimen Tausendschoen. The American Rose Society's silver medals were awarded to M. H. Walsh for unnamed seedling, A. N. Pierson, Inc., for Elizabeth Ziegler and R. Witterstaetter for Tausendschoen sport.

Competition was quite lively in the various classes of cut roses, staged on Monday, March 27th. In order to make room for the roses, it was necessary to rearrange a considerable section of one end of the hall to accommodate the exhibitors, so that many of the bulb classes which had been staged on Saturday were necessarily removed into crowded back quarters and other exhibits were condensed even more than they had been at the start. The exhibition of blooms was sensational in the extreme. The flowers were of the highest class throughout and it can safely be said that never before in this or any other country were such magnificent blooms of forced roses displayed. They came from long distances in some cases and really there was not a discreditable exhibit in the whole lot.

There were five entries for the prizes for vases of 100 American Beauties. Myers & Samtman of Chestnut Hill, Pa., won the first prize, George Burton, Chestnut Hill, second, and L. A. Noe, Madison, N. J., third. In the class for 50 American Beauties, Myers & Samtman were again winners, with F. R. Pierson Co. second. Mrs. Charles Russell was shown in unbeatable form by French & Salm, Union Grove, Wis., second going to Aug. Doemling, Lansdowne, Pa. For Mrs. George Shawyer, 100 blooms, John H. Dunlop, Toronto, won first, and A. N. Pierson, Inc., second. Winners in the various Killarney classes were A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa., Bedford Flower Co., Bedford Hills, N. Y., and Joseph Heacock Company, Wyncote, Pa., seconds going to A. N. Pierson, Inc., Joseph Heacock Co., F. R. Pierson Co. and John R. Andre.

Other prizes in the regular schedule for fifty blooms were as follows: Hoosier Beauty, Jos. Heacock Co., second, A. N. Pierson. Hadley, Jos. Heacock Co., second A. S. Burns, Jr., Spring Valley, N. Y. Lady Alice Stanley, John Welsh Young, Philadelphia, second, A. N. Pierson. Radiance, Jos. Heacock Co., second, Gude Bros., Washington. My Maryland, John Welsh Young, second, James Verner. Sunburst, F. R. Pierson Co., second, J. H. Dunlop. Mrs. Ward, Robert Simpson, second, Gude Bros. Any other red, F. R. Pierson Co., second, Gude Bros. Any other pink, Florex Gardens, second, F. H. Kramer. Any new rose not in commerce, Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., with Mrs. Bayard Thayer. The list of awards in the classes for twenty-five blooms appears to have been left out of the copy in our hands so that we cannot at the present time make any report thereon.

The sweepstakes silver cup for the best vase of fifty roses in the hall was won by Joseph Heacock Company with their vase of Hadley. The sweepstakes prize for best vase of twenty-five roses was won by A. S. Burns, Jr., with his vase of Hadley.

Roses in pots and tubs for private growers: first prize for six ramblers won by John Wanamaker, gardener J. H. Dodd; all the other prizes in this section, seven in all, were won by John W. Pepper. On cut roses, first prize winners were Wm. Kleinheinz, John A. Brown, Devon, E. S. Welsh, Chestnut Hill, Hamilton Farms, Gladstone, N. J., gard. J. Walker. Each of these exhibitors were winners in several classes.

THE CARNATIONS.

Carnations were staged on Tuesday, the terraced platforms on the side of the music balcony and opposite the rose displays, being devoted to them. As with the roses, it was necessary to remove a large number of miscellaneous plant displays to make room for the carnations. The quality of the flowers shown was "top-notch" and the visitors swarmed about them in admiration.

The classes for vases of 100 blooms made the most effective display. In the white class, Cottage Gardens was 1st and A. A. Pembroke 2nd; flesh pink, A. A. Pembroke 1st, Wm. Woundler 2nd; light pink and dark pink, A. A. Pembroke 1st, Cottage Gardens Co. 2nd in both classes; red or scarlet, Cottage Gardens Co. 1st, Wm. A. Dawson 2nd; crimson, J. W. Minot 1st, A. N. Pierson 2nd; variegated, Halifax Gardens 1st, E. F. Lieker 2nd. In the classes for fifty of specified varieties the winners of 1st prizes were E. F. Lieker, Strout's, Halifax Garden Co., Cottage Gardens Co., S. J. Goddard, A. A. Harvey & Sons, A. A. Pembroke, each of these exhibitors winning in two or more classes. E. G. Hill Co. got the Kroeschell gold medal for the twelve largest blooms in the show. The silver Jubilee medal was awarded to Cottage Gardens Co. for Crystal White and bronze Jubilee medal to A. A. Pembroke for Pink Sensation. Preliminary certificate to Evenden Bros., Williamsport, Pa., for white seedling, 86 points. Honorable mention to J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., for Aviator and Superb, Baur & Steinkamp for cerise seedling, Bassett & Washburn for Belle Washburn, H. A. Richards, Greenfield, Mass., for rose pink seedling and Peter Fisher for Flake Beauty.

THE SWEET PEAS.

Sweet peas were staged on Wednesday. They made a sparkling effect such as no other flower in mass produces. In this section there were 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes and most of the classes were filled up. In the color classes for twenty-five sprays Wm. Sim won seven 1st prizes, and one 2nd; John M. Barker, Morristown, N. J., four 2nd and one 3rd; Allan Harvey, Brandywine Summit, Pa., one 2nd and four 3rd; R. M. Isenhardt, Torresdale, Pa., one 1st and two 2nd; Gude Bros., two 1st and two 3rd; Mrs. A. Gontram, one 2nd, one 3rd; John H. Donlop, one 3rd. The same exhibitors were represented in the classes for fifty sprays, Wm. Sim capturing nine 1sts, and R. M. Isenhardt three.

In class for vase of 100 one color arranged for effect, John M. Barker was 1st, John H. Dunlop 2nd; 100, two or more colors, arranged for effect, Mrs. A. Gontram, Holmesburg, Pa., 1st, A. C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J., 2nd. The Michell silver medal for 100 Sensation was won by Wm. Sim, also the same award for Rose Queen, the bronze medal going to R. M. Isenhardt. The Michell gold and silver medals for vase of flowers without foliage were won by R. M. Eisenhardt and Allan Harvey, respectively. The $100 prize for 100 ft. display was won by Wm. Sim, with W. Atlee Burpee 2nd and J. H. Smith, Ridgefield, Conn. 3rd. J. H. Smith won 1st Zvolanek prize and Gude Bros. 2nd, for best and largest collection. Private gardener class, J. H. Smith 1st, Mrs. C. Bradley, Convent, N. J., 2nd. The table decoration prizes were won by London Flower Shop and Forrest Flower Shop, respectively; basket of sweet peas, Chas. Henry Fox and Ludwig P. Vollers; bride's bouquet, Forrest Flower Shop and L. P. Vollers; corsage bouquet, Forrest Flower Shop and Gude Bros.

NEW YORK DAY.

"New York Day" at the National Flower Show attracted 200 New York Florists' Club members and their friends to the special train that left the Penn. station at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning. The committee, of which A. L. Miller was chairman, was busy during the trip making everybody comfortable. Leaving New York under lowering skies we soon ran into the rain after a half hour's ride and arrived in Philadelphia at noon to find the rain falling hard. The delegation was met at the station by a committee of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, headed by J. Otto Thilow and escorted to the restaurant where the railroad company had laid covers for the crowd. After all were seated Mr. Thilow made a gracious speech of welcome and introduced the representative of the Mayor of Philadelphia, who very cordially welcomed the New York visitors. Mr. Holloran responded for New York.

After enjoying a very well prepared and satisfactory luncheon we made our way to the train for North Philadelphia. Drawn up on the station platform was a band of music behind which the visitors formed in procession and marched in the rain to the exhibition hall.

One very pleasant feature at the luncheon was the presentation to the Florists' Club of Philadelphia of a stand of colors—The American flag and one bearing an inscription from the New York Florists' Club. Most of the New York people returned to the city on the evening train.

The judges, Philip Breitmeyer, Alex. B. Scott and George C. Thomas, Jr., in reporting on their award of the Gold Medal for the Dreer Garden of Roses, prefaced it with the following preamble:

In awarding the Gold Medal for the Exhibition of Roses by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., the judges feel that a special word of commendation should accompany the award. Never before in the Flower Show of the United States has such a high level been achieved. The patience and interest required to accomplish this result is worthy of the highest appreciation.

The Exhibit as arranged deserves the approval of the most artistic and will surely be a factor in making Philadelphia famous.

THE TRADE SECTION

The displays, which were of the most elaborate and luxurious character, were not only attractive to the young lady attendants and all alert to talk business and bring in new customers. As usual in these trade exhibitions many novelties and up-to-date inventions are here given their first public introduction and the tradespeople swarm around them from morning until night.

Space will only permit a bare list of these exhibits, but much might be said in cordial praise of the goods and the manner in which they were displayed in many of the booths.

MISCELLANEOUS FLOWER SHOW COMMENTS.

The market of plant shows for which there were no cutting rooms to have been unusually large and there were many more in which there was no competition, so that the amount to be paid out in cash and other trophies will be called down to a considerable extent as compared with the aggregate value represented in the schedule. It is just as well that it so happened as the addition of more entries would only have added to the task of finding room for all, which on the opening day seemed an almost hopeless one. The space left for visitors, as it was, was very inadequate for comfort or for a proper inspection of the exhibits. Had the plants been spaced so as to appear to best advantage there really would not have been a foot of room left for passage-way. It was the opinion of many visitors that the material contributed might have been made to fill two such buildings as Convention Hall. Yet, doubts were at one time expressed as to whether it would be possible to get sufficient together to properly fill the vast structure, which occupies an entire city square. It was a huge affair indeed.

The lectures have been well attended and have proved an excellent educational feature in connection with the exhibition. On the opening evening W. N. Rudd, of Chicago, talked entertainingly on Home Grounds. Monday afternoon Richard Rothe, of Glenside, Pa., gave a talk on his pet subject—Rock Gardens, and on Monday evening Prof. E. A. White of Ithaca, gave a lecture on Orchids. On Tuesday afternoon Max Schling of New York, on Flower Arrangement and Color Combination, and in the evening Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., on Roses, had large audiences. Wednesday's lecturers were Miss Caro Miller on School Gardens and Frank N. Meyer of the Agricultural Department at Washington, on Exploration in China. Other interesting lectures are scheduled for the remaining days. All the foregoing were illustrated with stereopticon slides except Mr. Schling's talk. Mr. Schling was his own illustrator and demonstrator in his inimitable manner.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery put through a big stunt in its plan for telegraphing flowers to the mayors of all cities in which it has members. Telegrams of appreciation and praise came in fast. Another act which brought big publicity in the daily papers all over the country, was the sending of a big bunch of Radiance roses to the recently born granddaughter of President Wilson.

On Saturday evening March 25, a dinner was given to the Board of Jurors and other invited guests in the basement of the Widener Building. Chas. H. Totty, presided. On Wednesday night, March 29, a banquet was given to the visitors, in Horticultural Hall. It was a large, representative and merry assemblage.

Two rose novelties not mentioned in the prize lists were Rosalie, of the midget type, color similar to Mock, shown by Heller Bros. and a cherry red seedling shown by Robert Scott & Son, a shapely, medium sized flower.

The Darwin and May-flowering tulips were quite well represented in the various flowering plant groups and their stately beauty added very much to the general effect of form and color.

James Farquhar, who is an invalid, and has spent the winter in the south, was an interested visitor for a few hours on Saturday, on his way home from Charleston, S. C., to Boston.

The aquarium exhibit, for which we have only room for a line or two was a potent attraction. It was said by experts that its equal had never been shown anywhere.

Mr. Cowperthwaite's Information Bureau just inside the hall was a well planned and efficiently carried out convenience for the exhibitors and other visitors.

The Tea Room in charge of ladies of the Civic Club and others was a social centre of no small distinction. Sweets were devoured in large quantity.

One of the most impressive and pathetic scenes in connection with the show was the visit of little crippled children from the hospitals.

NEW YORK SPRING SHOW

This event, known locally as the "International," has now come to be an established annual affair. The National Flower Show at Philadelphia has, naturally, overshadowed everything else in the show line up to the present time. Now we look forward to the opening next week, on Wednesday, April 5, of this second big flower show for the year 1916 and it is very gratifying to be able to announce that, from all indications, this will be in all its features as great a triumph as any of its predecessors, horticulturally, artistically and financially. The exhibition will be held, as heretofore, at the Grand Central Palace, under the joint auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club and will have the support of the leading people in the social and philanthropic activities of the city. The schedule lists 410 regular classes. On Wednesday will be staged the flowering and foliage plants, roses in pots and tubs, bulbous plants, orchids, etc., etc. On Thursday, cut roses. On Friday, carnations. On Saturday, sweet peas, table decorations, etc. On Monday, violets and table decorations. On Tuesday table decorations. The prizes offered are generous and many of them are "specials" contributed by wealthy patrons of horticulture. Copies of the list may be had on application to Secretary John Young.

FRANK R. PIERSON

A very large amount of exhibition space has been contracted for by trade growers, manufacturers and dealers, who recognize the superlative value of such an opportunity to reach out for the trade of the world's metropolis.

Among the many attractions planned as accessory to the exhibition is a series of lectures on horticultural subjects at 11 A. M. each day in the Tea Garden. On the list of lecturers are E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, Geo. V. Nash, A. Herrington, Royal Dixon and other gentlemen well known among the horticultural fraternity.

"Brooklyn Day," as before, will be one of the prominent features. Friday, April 7, has been chosen by the Brooklynites for their big demonstration. Large preparations are being made, with A. L. Miller as the main feed wire and all who know the hearty enthusiasm which that gentleman puts into whatever he undertakes will realize that under his infectious leadership Brooklyn Day at the Show will be "some" day.

Entries for the New York Flower Show are coming in very nicely, and there is little doubt but that it will eclipse its predecessors in every way. The space available for trade exhibits has been freely reserved, and late comers will be lucky if they are able to find quarters.

Additions to Final Schedule.

Special Class. Commercial Growers—Best group of Dwarf Evergreens, 50 plants, 50 varieties. To be staged Wednesday, April 5th. Prize: The George A. Zabriskie Special Premium. Silver Cup, value $50.

Special Class. Open to All.—The most beautiful window box, of wood, 42x11x9 inches, filled with flowering plants that will last through the summer months outdoors. To be staged Wednesday, April 5th. Prize $25. Offered by Miss Georgie Wayne Day.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the meeting in Glen Cove on March 8, notwithstanding the very inclement weather and reduced attendance, a goodly array of flowers and plants adorned the exhibition table. The judges awarded 1st for antirrhinum and cyclamen to Robert Jones; carnations, James McDonald, and 2nd James McCarthy; certificate of culture for violets and high commendation for gardenias to Robert Jones. By request Mr. Jones gave an account of his method of growing violets which was followed by an interesting discussion. James Holloway favored us with an essay on "Outdoor Fruit" which proved to be of more than ordinary interest.

An essay on "The Use of Native Plants for Ornamental Planting," by L. P. Jensen of Missouri, was listened to with great interest. Arthur Herrington was a welcome visitor and spoke on the coming International Flower Show in New York.

Beginning next month, April, our meetings will be held in the evening at 7 P. M. instead of in the afternoon.

JAMES MCCARTHY, Cor. Sec.

The next and last stop was at the Weaver establishments at Ronks. Two brothers, Charles and Elmer, are running two separate bank and expense accounts, but with greenhouses so intermingled that one never knows on whose ground he is treading. Chas. M. Weaver is the sweet pea grower and has them in three hundred-foot houses, about fifty feet wide, and apparently miles high. In addition to the standard sorts he has some of his own production and unless Zvolanek, Burpee and the other California growers have some surprises in store for us they have nothing on Charles Weaver, for he is growing by the thousand a beautiful blue and two pinks that are head and shoulders over all others of the same color. Elmer Weaver is the carnation end of the place and has added ten-week stocks with wonderful success. He is going into the perennial plant business in an experimental way. Asters are a feature here and there are now somewhere close to a million plants started in paper pots, and when these are in their prime a summer trip will be arranged to look them over. Mrs. A. M. Herr kindly acted as hostess to our distinguished visitor, Richard Vincent, Jr., until we came back to Lancaster, when a little party of nine took dinner with him and immediately thereafter adjourned to the club rooms for the evening meeting.

The business end of the meeting was hastened through and at the instigation of the writer the club voted a donation of $50.00 toward purchasing a site for an Armory building, which could be used for flower shows, etc. Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., was the speaker for the evening, his subject being "The Bulb Fields of Holland." The ladies had been invited and quite a goodly number were present.

Mr. Vincent showed a wonderful collection of slides. They showed what the Hollander does with his hard-fought for ground and how he uses every inch of available space. His pictures of the Harlem exhibition gave us an idea of how to make attractive the bare spots under trees with beds of bulbs and the indoor or tent exhibit gave us some pointers that will be used in the next Lancaster Flower Show this fall. Mr. Vincent's remarks connected with his slides of the Convent Garden Market so thoroughly coincide with what I have been preaching for some years myself that they are given as nearly as I can remember them here. "This is a wonderful market where plants and flowers of all kinds are sold in quantities unbelievable by us Americans. The Englishman with a much better climate for the growing of flowers in window boxes and for his home ornamentation, does not plant a window box in the spring and expect it to be a floral picture all summer with its limited area of space and soil, but when a plant begins to lose its beauty he goes to market and buys another to replace it. This is a thing we should educate our American people to do and the result would be not only the sale of more plants but their greater use, as the buyers would in this way get more satisfaction and we should get increased sales."

A unanimous vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Vincent. The next meeting night of the club will be Ladies' Night, at the Brenneman Building and the date April 27th.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the regular meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society on Friday evening, March 10, J. F. Huss made a splendid display of cinerarias. Alfred Cebelius, showed Cineraria stellata. Mr. Huss was awarded a first-class certificate, and Mr. Cebelius a certificate of merit. Mr. Huss dilated on the merits of the Cineraria and how readily they grow from seed to maturity and bloom. A most interesting talk was given by E. A. Brasill of his trip to Cuba, New Orleans, Chicago, Cleveland, and Niagara Falls.

Friday evening, March 24, had been advertised as "Grafting and Pruning Night," but the absence of our leader made it necessary to postpone same until the next meeting, April 14th. There was some discussion on pruning grape vines, noted gardeners stating that it made no difference whether they were pruned after March 1st or before; while others were very positive that they should not be pruned after March 1st on account of the bleeding of the vines. Fred Boss, head gardener at Elizabeth Park, got a certificate of merit for calceolarias and Warren S. Mason, Farmington, a cultural certificate for Eupatorium lanthium.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Medford, Mass., Horticultural Society, was held in the Medford Woman's Club House on the evening of March 20. Very encouraging reports were read by the secretary and treasurer. The President, Mrs. Lester B. Williams, gave a short and inspiring address. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Lester B. Williams; vice-president, Hon. Wilton B. Fay; secretary, Mrs. Ruth Wales Randall; treasurer, Miss Laura P. Patten, and a board of directors representing all sections of the city. Maurice Fuld gave a talk on Perennials. A reception was held at the close and refreshments were served.

GEORGE F. STEWART.

The Worcester County (Mass.) Horticultural Society held a spring flower show in Horticultural Hall, Worcester, on March 9 and 10. Prize awards were as follows:

Cut flowers, H. F. A. Lange and Charles Potter; carnations, Alfred H. Knight, William M. Estabrook and Paul Brigham; orchids, Mrs. John C. Whittin; Azalea indica, H. F. A. Lange and Miss Lucy M. Coulson; cineraria, H. F. A. Lange; A. W. Hixon and Worcester Conservatories; cyclamen, H. F. A. Lange and A. W. Hixon; hyacinths, Miss Lucy Coulson and A. W. ## AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY

The annual meeting of the American Rose Society was held in a side room of the Convention Hall, Philadelphia, on Saturday evening, March 11. President S. S. Pennock opened the session with an address full of optimism and inspiration which was attentively listened to and cordially received by a good sized audience. Reports of secretary, treasurer and committees followed. The report and recommendations of the special committee on system and standard measurements for the classification of cut roses, which was presented by Harry O. May for the committee was assailed by several members and a spirited discussion was precipitated, with the result that the report was finally referred back to the committee. George C. Thomas made an exhaustive report on the scales of points for use in judging outdoor roses. He admitted that the scales as suggested are somewhat experimental and that after being tried out in practice modifications would doubtless be found desirable and it was decided to adopt them for the present as read.

The old officers were unanimously re-elected to serve for the coming year, viz.: S. S. Pennock, president; L. J. Reuter, vice-president; Harry O. May, treasurer; Benj. Hammond, secretary. Admiral Aaron Ward was elected to fill the unexpired year of Eber Holmes' term and E. Allan Peirce succeeds John A. Dunlop for a three-year term. Robert Pyle was re-elected for three years. Admiral Ward made a most delightful speech in acknowledgement of his election, extolling the dignity and honor of working in the garden with one's own hands. J. Horace McFarland was elected an honorary member. A proposition to make the retiring president an ex-officio member of the executive committee for one year was favorably acted upon. The award of a gold medal to H. A. Dreer for the beautiful garden of roses in the Flower Show as recommended by the judges was duly sanctioned. Selection of the place for the next annual meeting was left to the executive committee.

Secretary's Report.

This is the 17th annual meeting of the American Rose Society. It is twelve years ago since this society held its last annual meeting in the city of Philadelphia, and in the years which have elapsed since then the development of the American Rose Society as evinced at this time by the exhibition in this Convention Hall is wonderful. Since our last visit to this city the society has been in Boston four times, to Washington, Chicago, Buffalo and Detroit once; New York City three times.

Our membership varies from year to year. The past year, 1915, we had the pleasure to receive another life member, R. Witterstaetter. The life membership helps us in building up our permanent fund which now reaches the sum of three thousand two hundred dollars ($3,200.00). Our annual meeting is held in a room at the Hotel at this date, under 100 of whom 40 are honorary members.

The Test Rose Garden, which began in Hartford, Conn., and now embrace a garden at Washington, D. C., at Ithaca, N. Y., and at Minneapolis, Minn., which are watched over with special committees appointed by the American Rose Society and which certainly have awakened much practical interest, the bushes to be tested being furnished gratis by rose growers. Two lots were sent from Europe, one from Kallen & Lunnemann, of Boskoop, Holland, embracing 29 varieties, 168 plants. These all went to Ithaca. Messrs. Hugh Dickson, Ltd., Belfast, Ireland, sent ten each of four varieties. These are for competition in the test gardens and were divided, half going to Hartford, and half to the Washington gardens. The detail of the results in these rose gardens is presented in the "Rose Annual" together with the awards made. Municipal rose gardens are being pushed in England as things of popular beauty. Under date of January 23, 1916, a letter from Waratah, England, came to the secretary saying: "You people are far more progressive in America as regards municipal rose gardens than we are over here, and should be gratified if you could send me details of any public rose gardens established in America." This writer is an amateur and holds the championship both for exhibition roses and decorative of all England. Our amateur societies are looking to the American Rose Society for information and recognition. The affiliation membership rate was first placed at ten cents each, but this sum was not sufficient and has by the executive committee been changed to 25c. for each member.

There is in supporting members of the Rose Society a lack from the men growing outside roses; at every show we hold there is more or less expense and the support of the society has hitherto been mainly from the cut flower producers.

The broadening of the membership of this society involves a great deal of detail work, and one piece of work that has at last come to pass is the printing in first class style of the annual report of organization work of the society in book form, with various essays complimentary thereto. This work of publication involves a greater amount of outgo than hitherto the revenue of this society warranted, but J. Horace McFarland assumed the work and risk of cost attending the same, and for this service we are certainly indebted to him. The proportion directly paid for this work by the society was $200.00 and customary postage; beyond this the cost has been assumed by the publishers.

For this spring's exhibition the number and value of special prizes contributed by individuals has not before been equalled. All this is clear evidence that our society is full of vigor and the gathering together of citizens of our common country in associated work which tends to bring beauty to the homes of all the people is to be highly commended.

"A Rose for Every Home, a Bush for Every Garden" is emblematic of Peace and Beauty from Ocean to Ocean.

HORTICULTURAL LITERATURE.

Leonard Barron, of New York, addressed the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday, February 26, on the subject of horticultural literature, past, present and future. The address was a splendid effort, evidently prepared with much thought and a finished literary production in itself. We have space only for a short abstract.

Of the future for garden writings, the lecturer said:

"It may indeed be said that a knowledge of gardening is a necessary part of a liberal education across the sea, whereas with us an intelligent acquaintance with gardens is indeed quite exceptional. How many American ladies will naturally invite you to stroll around their gardens to see the latest novelty in herbaceous plants, or the newest shrub from China? How many American men will invite you to stroll into the conservatory or greenhouse after dinner? Until these things or something like them happen garden writings of the expository kind cannot be successfully produced among us because the publishers cannot afford to produce them for an unresponsive public."

He said that garden writing in America may be claimed as a feature of the last 25 years. Many of the earlier productions were printed from sheets or plates imported from Europe, he explained, leading to much confusion.

"This city of Boston," he declared, "is inseparably associated with the beginning of gardening here in America, of which fact the organization under whose auspices we are now gathered is in itself sufficient proof; and today this section of the country still stands as perhaps the most advanced center of garden interest in the United States."

"The period of textbook writings has, I feel, reached its zenith, but other books of a more imaginative type have reborn the interest in garden work, and are making it something far ahead of what it was 50 or even 20 years ago. The appearance of this particular kind of writing has been marked by the development of a new type of garden writer—the skilled observer—the professional teacher or experimentalist.

welcome him, do we not also need the matured conclusions of the worker whose experiences are an end to themselves? It was largely by his contributions that the garden craft of the past was enriched; it is his writings we need now, and which future students will need in order to understand and measure up the conditions of today, just as we ourselves try to reconstruct the past by studying the writings of the old-timers."

The lecturer said of writings of record, description and imagination they are "the book of the future; yet that it will come is certain." He looks here to the highest type of work both as regards subject matter and method of presentation; literary quality, not mere manufacturing perfection. Of this class he said:

"Books of record carefully written in the light of all contemporary available knowledge, yet inspirational and practical, are the ideals that we set before us.

"Just as real, permanent progress in our widespread American horticulture (of the garden) must rest on the development of the amateur as distinguished from the mere trader, so too, must we look to a literature of enthusiasm based on the amateur's keen interest in others of the same class to develop and at the same time to reflect the present day condition. Authoritative gardening writings come to us from England today even as in the earlier times. But as yet we send very few thither.

"A canvass of the publications of the last 10 years reveals that out of about 200 different titles issued and classified in the publishers' trade lists, within the class and group headings of gardening and horticulture, 47, or about 25 per cent, are devoted to fruit growing, which evidently still claims a large share of attention; but various phases of pleasure gardening, apart from landscape work, claim a slightly greater proportion, being represented by 50 titles. Others are: Landscape 11, vegetables and truck gardening 31, literary 13, children's garden work 9.

"A comparison of the contents of the earlier and present day periodicals is illuminating, though it practically parallels what has already been discovered in regard to garden books. I have heard it held as an indictment against the contents of the periodicals today that the garden writings now being offered in their columns are, on the one hand, too amateurish, catering too much to the ununiform; and at other times that they are too technical and erudite, catering too much to the technician."

Mr. Barron held that this depends on the individual's point of view, and asserted that the periodical is at once teacher, educator, reporter and idealist, and that it is the public in large measure that edits the periodicals. He urged that writers come forward and avail themselves of the offers of the editors for the expression of all phases of thought and differing viewpoints of all interests.

Mr. Barron is a graduate of Chiswick, Eng. He was assistant editor of

Obituary

William Bayersdorfer.

Wm. Bayersdorfer, father of Harry Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, a retired merchant, died on March 26, aged 80 years.

Frank Buffinton.

Frank Buffinton, pioneer florist of Fall River, Mass., died suddenly at his home in that city on Saturday evening, March 18. He was stricken ill, presumably with an internal hemorrhage, while in his greenhouse about 9 o'clock Saturday evening, and though he succeeded in reaching his house death followed about 15 minutes later. Physicians were summoned, but Mr. Buffinton was beyond all aid when one arrived.

Mr. Buffinton's death, following so closely upon the sudden death of his brother, Waldo A. Buffinton, comes as a particularly sad blow to the surviving members of the family and they have the sincerest sympathy in their deep sorrow of a wide circle of friends. The brother, Waldo, was found dead in his bed the previous Tuesday morning from heart failure.

Frank Buffinton was a member of one of the oldest families of the city, and was born July 8, 1846. As a young man he taught school, but he early took up the study of floriculture and eventually made it his life business. Few men were better known in the community or more implicitly trusted or more highly respected. He was a man of unbending integrity, of large intelligence, of wide sympathy with that which was good. His love for flowers was the passion of his life. The surviving relatives are a sister,

FRANK BUFFINTON

Miss Mary E. Buffinton, and a nephew and niece, William H. Buffinton and Mrs. Annie E. Ferguson.

ST. LOUIS RETAIL FLORISTS.

On Monday night, March 20, the St. Louis Retail Florists' Association held their annual banquet at the Mission Inn Garden. A splendid menu was served, with a cabaret and music, and the affair was much enjoyed by all. President Chas. Young was toastmaster and called on everyone for a short talk.

During Recess

Boston Florists' Bowling League.

The Boston Florists' Bowling League wound up the season with a riot of mirth at their first banquet at the Hotel Georgian on Thursday evening, March 23. The festivities began at 8.00 P. M. with Toastmaster Julius Zinn at the helm. A short business session followed, in which Seymour Grosse was re-elected president. John Dow was elected vice-president, defeating Maurice Hambro. J. Sloane was re-elected treasurer and secretary.

Feasting and speaking followed. W. H. Elliott, J. J. Cassidy and Seymour Grosse made interesting speeches, especially Mr. Cassidy, who talked on the American Flag and our duty toward it. Prizes were awarded by Mr. Elliott, who threw in a little oration on the rapid strides made by bowlers all over the country. Bresnahan of The Boston Cut Flower Shop received a medal and cup as best string man, with Montgomery second. Individual prizes were given to nearly everyone for one reason or another.

The keynote of the affair was struck by Toastmaster Zinn in his opening address when he declared that harmony in the florist ranks had made its beginning and was coming fast. Mr. Elliott reiterated the same sentiment.

Local talent was much in evidence. Singing by John Lynch and readings by Mr. Mahoney were enjoyed by all and at 12 P. M. the affair drew to a close, thus terminating a highly successful season.

A Great Bowling Event.

Washington florists are deeply interested in the coming bowling tournament of the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association, to be held in the National Capital, starting April 3rd. Florist night during the tournament will be one grand occasion. William F. Gude of Washington is President of the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association and it is his intention to interest the florist bowlers visiting the National Flower Show at Philadelphia in Washington's big bowling tournament. Traditionally a sociable clan, a pilgrimage of the florists to the National Capital, as participants in this tournament will be a gala occasion. The mammoth building in which the tournament is to be held was the home of the Grand Army encampment, and is commodious enough to hold the equivalent of four army corps. Room for every conceivable need of the bowlers and their friends is thereby provided.

Entries in the bowling tournament close March 25, and the florists should get busy at once. As the Philadelphia convention closes April 2, and the tournament starts April 3, florists day at the National Capital could be worked in as a side trip of the convention, and allow the florists to get back to their business in ample time to care for the Easter rush.

Further information concerning the A. C. B. A. tournament can be obtained from Secretary Tom Grant of the Chamber of Commerce, 1202 F street, northwest, Washington, D. C.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; First Vice-President, L. L. N. Y.; First Vice-President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Second Vice-President, L. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. L. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. J. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.; Chicago, Ill., June 20-22, next meeting place.

New Seed Laws.

HORTICULTURE

Gentlemen—New seed laws have been passed in Kentucky and New Jersey within the last few days. The New Jersey seed law is quite unsatisfactory to the seed trade. It requires labeling of agricultural seeds, mixtures of such seeds, and vegetable seeds. The label on the first two classes of seeds mentioned,—briefly stated—calls for the name of the seed and if a special variety or strain of such seed is used, it must be the true name,—percentage by weight of purity or freedom of such seeds from foreign matter, or from other seeds distinguishable by their appearance,—a percentage of germination—the number per pound of the seeds of noxious weeds, if present, in excess of one seed in each five grams of the agricultural seed,—the name of the seller. The vegetable seed must have a label stating the name thereof, and the percentage of germination—the percentage of inert matter if in excess of 5 per cent. of the total weight of such seeds—the name of the seller.

The administration of this law is turned over to the Board of Managers of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station and its appointee, the seed analyst, who are not public officials, and are not responsible to state control. The seedsmen have also felt aggrieved by the unhappy methods of the proponents of the bill in driving it through the legislature.

The Kentucky bill is rather a close copy of the views of the Association of Official Seed Analysts in respect to uniform state seed bills. The bill affects agricultural seeds, and requires a label stating the name of the seeds, name and address of the seller,—the approximate percentage by weight of purity, meaning freedom from foreign matter or from other seeds,—the approximate percentage by weight of the different species of foreign seeds when sold as mixtures, and so labeled. The bill affects agricultural seeds. The approximate percentage of germination as shown by laboratory tests. No agricultural seeds containing more than one of certain named noxious weed seeds to 2,000 agricultural seeds shall be sold.

Garden and flower seeds in sealed packets must be labeled with the approximate percentage of germination and with the year in which the packet was filled.

Yours truly,
CURTIS NYE SMITH.

One Week's Imports.

Imports at the Port of New York, of horticultural material for the week ending March 17th, were recorded as follows:

Bulbs—France, $586; Netherlands, $13,459; England, $48; Hongkong, $677.

Plants—Netherlands, $48,155; England, $1,532; Scotland, $562; Ireland, $41; Bermuda, $31; French W. I., $79; Colon, $33; Japan, $100; France, $2,761.

Red Clover Seed—France, $152,432; Netherlands, $15,057.

Grass Seed—Spain, $4,467; England, $3,579; Scotland, $535; Ireland, $2,807.

All Other Seeds—Denmark, $1,757; France, $9,898; Netherlands, $587; England, $14,757; Ireland, $148; Brazil, $96; Colon, $32; British East Indies, $13,999; Hongkong, $136; Italy, $278; Spain, $4,333; Japan, $52.

Carbonate of Potash—Hongkong, $67.

Nitrate of Soda—Chile, $9,528.

Other fertilizers—Netherlands, $28,000; England, $5,960.

One of our readers calls our attention to the fact that the statement on page 412 of our March 25 issue that the next convention of the American Seed Trade Association will be held in Cincinnati is incorrect, as the place of meeting has been changed by the executive committee and the session will be held in Chicago, Ill., on June 20, 21, 22.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE*CHICAGO.

Chas. Erne is out of the hospital and lost no time in getting down to the market where he was warmly welcomed.

Quite a party of florists, which included local and outside florists, left on Saturday afternoon, March 25, for the National Flower Show at Philadelphia.

Wm. Graham, who came from Philadelphia this winter to be manager of Fleischman's, could not be spared to assist at the National Flower Show as planned.

Frank Oechlin's new house on W. Jackson boulevard is now completed. It is a beautiful place and the grounds will be suitably laid out as soon as spring opens.

Seven thousand dollars will be spent this year in Chicago on school grounds and vacant lots. This work has become quite a factor in Chicago's summer industries.

Wm. Keimel, president of the Chicago Florists' Club, is in the Quaker City and will bring home to his club a report of the show. Guy French, secretary, is also taking in the sights at Philadelphia.

The greenhouse construction companies are all having many inquiries for prices, &c., as well as booking many orders for spring building. That it is to be a busy summer in their line is an assured fact.

Some of the largest Killarney Brilliant roses of the season were seen at E. C. Ameling's this week. The buds were nearly three inches long and the heavy stems measure from 30 to 36 inches. This rose is seen in all the houses and is making a good record for itself.

Chicago florists are keeping a close watch on their greenhouses these days when the loss of Easter stock would mean so much. Between the sudden changes of temperature and the downpour of rain they have to be constantly alert. No one claims a previous record showing thunder and lightning in a genuine blizzard as occurred March 21.

O. A. and L. A. Tonner are now nicely settled in the Atlas Block, where the wholesale cut flowers and florists' supplies make a good combination. L. A. Tonner, who has also large holdings in the pecan belt in Georgia, makes the selling of pecan orchards a part of the regular business. Samples of the pecan nuts can be purchased here.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The officers elected at the March meeting of the Florists' Club are to be installed on April 4. It is expected that the newly elected president, Lloyd Jenkins, will be able to attend. Mr. Jenkins has been confined to his home suffering from scarlet fever.

Gude Bros. Company has a very attractive window display in honor of the commencement in this city of the national tournament of the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association. One side of the window is covered with a trellis upon which is entwined pink and white ramblers and at the base of this is a small rockery. The main decoration is that produced by a bowling alley upon which are set candle, duck and bottle pins, each bearing the crest of the association. At the front end of the alley is a bowling ball with a silver plate properly inscribed and a large placard which announces that this ball has been "presented to William F. Gude, national president, A. C. B. A., by P. B. Fletcher, to be rolled at the opening of the national tournament, Emery Building, April 3, 1916."

PITTSBURGH.

C. C. Phillips, for the past four years in Winnipeg, Manitoba, entered the employ of The McCallum Co. last Monday.

DeForest W. Ludwig, who has been seriously ill since the first of the year, left on last Saturday night for an indefinite sojourn at Southern Pines, N. C.

Oliver Marvin Crosby, formerly in the employ of Peter Henderson & Company, is now associated with the Pittsburgh Branch of the Inside Bureau as psychological lecturer.

Miss Catherine Friel, manager of the Ray J. Daschbach Co., is convalescing from a severe illness. Mr. Daschbach, manager for Kaufmann's has returned from a trip East.

John R. Bracken, a young State College man, who has been recently assistant landscape architect for the A. W. Smith Company, today assumed a similar position in Philadelphia with Oglesby Paul.

Cincinnati—The A. Sunderbruch Sons' store has moved to Fourth street, near Race. It had been in its old location for 38 years.

The Reading Florists' Association, Reading, Pa., will hold their fall show in the Auditorium, Nov. 2, 3 and 4.

J. Delay, formerly in business for himself on Beacon St., and lately with Penn, is now in the employ of Max Fishelson on Winter St.

A. A. Pembroke returned from the show this morning and brings back the news that he captured more prize money than any other single carnation exhibitor.

Mayor Curley has received and accepted the resignation of Charles Gibson from the Park and Recreation Board. Mr. Gibson was an unpaid member, appointed by Mayor Curley early in his administration.

McAlpine & McDonald, wholesalers on Devonshire street, are preparing to move into their new business quarters, directly across the street from where they have been located. Work has been started on the ice chest, and the old Boston American office will soon be filled with their stock. They will be installed there not later than April 10.

At a gathering in Elizabeth Park, Thursday evening, March 2, twenty-two gentlemen connected with the work of landscape design or landscape planting met as the guests of G. A. Parker, superintendent of parks of Hartford, Conn. After a get-together meeting, luncheon was served. Informal talks were given by several, with E. M. Brown as master of ceremonies. The committee, appointed to draw up a scheme for organization consists of C. H. Sierman, T. H. Desmond, H. G. Clark, E. M. Brown, W. W. Hunt of Hartford and L. F. Prouty of Springfield.

Portland, Me. — H. S. Rogers has been appointed manager of the Portland Flower Store, 631 Congress St.

Eben S. Haskell, florist, of Lebanon, Vt., and Mrs. Haskell, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary March 21st.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The mid-Lenten calm has struck this market and stock is moving more slowly than last week. Roses and carnations are over-abundant and as the demand is weak prices cannot be maintained. Bulb stocks are doing fairly well and jonquils seem to have a slight edge on the other varieties. The warm weather will in all probability tend to increase the supply and perchance the demands as well. Violets are running slowly. Callas and Easter lilies are plentiful and sluggish. It is impossible to forecast accurately the tone of next week's market because of the uncertainty of the weather, but in comparison with the corresponding week of last year prices are lower and stock more plentiful. Relief is expected, however, in a cold snap which will curtail the supply and make higher prices possible.

The early part of last BUFFALO week was discouraging but the last half was better. Stock has been plentiful and prices right, but weather conditions have held down the sales. There was no speculative buying until the change to the milder temperature and then there was a hustle on and very satisfactory outcome. Last Saturday saw the best cleanup so far during the Lenten season. Milder days means double the volume of business.

The week closing March CHICAGO 25 did not make a high record financially. Prices did not come up to quotations, excepting in small orders, while on very large orders great concessions were made. It seemed to be accepted as the better policy to sell the accumulating stock at a low price and give the buyer the benefit, rather than to sell a portion at a higher figure and throw the rest away. All kinds of stock, with one or two exceptions, are coming in rapidly. Sunday, the 26th, sales were almost nothing, on account of the general downpour, which lasted all day, and Monday, the 27th, was of the same type. Fortunately, shipments were not large or the market would have been swamped. A good supply of large, fine carnations comes daily and the price averages very well for spring time. All kinds of roses, except American Beauties, are to be had in almost any quantity and the price varies greatly according to size of order or the persuasive powers of the customer. A great many lilies are in the market. The early and late crops of peas are overlapping, making an extra quantity just now. Single violets are scarce. Calendulas, mignonette, snapdragons, daisies, tulips, jonquils, pansies, &c., furnish variety.

The supply increased greatly last week and as a result the market is easy. The call for stock is fair, but not large enough to take up all receipts and prices have dropped. Roses are very plentiful. American Beauties are in a fair supply. Carnations have become plentiful. Easter lilies are scarce and sell very well. Sweet peas are in so heavy supply that it is impossible to move all even at bargain prices. Lily of the valley has a poor market while orchids have practically no market at all. Snapdragon has been meeting with a pretty fair call.

Great accumulations of flowers are seen in the wholesale places without exception, this week. Up to the advent of springlike weather the majority of stock sent in met with a fair sale. This was true even of tulips and daffodils which are usually congested at this season. But now they are all held up and there is only a small demand. Sweet peas and miscellaneous flowers, so called, are heaped up in the wholesale windows together with lilies and other bulb stock where they excite no interest, spurned even by the street fakir. Roses have moved fairly well and so have carnations according to quality, which varies much but all are doomed to a scaling down in value regardless of quality. Tuesday, New York Day at the National Flower Show, was the dullist day the business has experienced for a long time.

Finally we have begun to feel the Lenten season, business having "slowed up" considerably during the past ten days. Stock has likewise been less plentiful, practically everything, with the exception of American Beauties and violets, cleaning up nicely as the days go by. There have been some southern daffodils coming in, which naturally have their effect on the sale of the far superior home-grown flowers. Prices remain very much as they have been for some time.

The cut flower market ST. LOUIS is very much overcrowded and prices much lower on good quality stock. Lent seems to hurt some, as many of our prominent retailers say that funeral work is their only business of late. Sweet peas are in heavy and are sold at low prices. Roses and carnations are holding their price in fancy grades, while the great majority are much lower. Colored stock, unless cheap, is left over. Bulbous stock does as well as any other.

Roses of all kinds WASHINGTON are selling well and the market is about cleaning up daily. There are more American Beauty roses than there have been and this has brought the price down considerably. There are still more violets on the market than can be absorbed by sales to the stores and these consequently find their way into the baskets of the street men. Sweet peas also are in oversupply with the same result. Lily of the valley is not as good as it might be regardless of the fact that the price is a dollar per hundred higher than normal in this locality. Carnations are selling fairly well. There is a good market for callas and lilies.

A SHREDDED MANURE HUMUS COMPOST

MAGIC HUMUS is a pure plant food, made from the finest quality of manure, which has been thoroughly dried by Nature. This process gives it a rich, earthy odor so peculiar to other fertilizers, is sanitary and agreeable to handle.

MAGIC HUMUS is spread on the top of sand or hard ground as a soil, or cultivated into the ground in the garden with a hand cultivator or plow.

Ordinary commercial fertilizer contains no Humus, cannot spread its fertilizing properties and is only available to the soil in the spot where the material is drilled in.

MAGIC HUMUS spreads itself and enriches the soil all around. It comes to the garden after a period of careful preparation, thoroughly dried by Nature. This process gives it a rich, earthy odor so peculiar to other fertilizers, is sanitary and agreeable to handle.

MAGIC HUMUS is spread on the top of sand or hard ground as a soil, or cultivated into the ground in the garden with a hand cultivator or plow.

The garden receiving a liberal application of MAGIC HUMUS Compost is permanently enriched with plant food and soil.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE NOTES.

Farmer's Week this year far eclipsed any previous one at this college. The Department of Floriculture is especially to be complimented on the excellent program of speakers, all men well-known to the trade. F. E. Palmer, gave a lecture on The Selection and Care of House Plants. G. H. Sinclair gave an intensely interesting talk on Minor Crops of the Florist and during the talk showed a beautiful colonial bouquet made up of the largest possible number of the less popular flowers. Robert Pyle gave a lecture on Roses at Home and Abroad, in the course of which he showed a large number of excellent slides. Maurice Fuld also talked. Professor F. A. Waugh gave an interesting lecture on Fashions in Plants. Professor P. J. Anderson handled the subject of Floricultural Diseases, and H. E. Downer the difficult subject of Plant Propagation in a most interesting and instructive manner. All the lectures were largely attended in spite of the cold weather and snow.

The classes in floriculture worked at bunching violets and making magnolia wreaths last week.

Lowell, Mass.—The Board of Trade will hold a flower show in Colonial and Middlesex Halls on April 6th and 7th, in conjunction with the Middlesex Women's Club.

The Truth Shown Up About Raw and Prepared Humus

THERE are a lot of people being stung on humus. Being stung just because they seem to think all humus is practically alike. Or if there is any difference, it is only the difference in price.

They apparently totally ignore the fact that most humus in its unprepared state, just as dug from its watery bed, is generally injuriously acid. They lose sight of the fact that any humus that is sold from a dry sample and delivered wet, is a mighty expensive way to buy water.

They seem altogether to fail to grasp the fact that raw humus has absolutely no plant foods added to make it a balanced fertilizer.

They ignore totally, the fact that it takes four tons of our raw humus to make one ton of concentrated Alphano Humus, that has first been sun-dried and then further dried by expensive mechanical methods until 75 per cent. of the moisture is driven out.

They forget that humus that is sold from a dry sample and then delivered in lumpy, chunky, water-logged shape, contains just one-quarter the plant foods that a dry analysis shows.

Come To Our Exhibit At The New York Show

and let us tell you all the facts and give you all the figures about this important humus question.

Protect yourself against water at humus prices. Or buying humus that is low in plant foods and liable to be highly injurious because of its acidity.

PRICES

Our sun-dried, composted, acid-free, raw Alphano Humus, we will sell to you for $4 a ton, by the carload.

Our prepared Alphano Humus, with 75 per cent.

of the water driven out, abundantly enriched with potash, nitrogen, phosphate and lime; and then inoculated with billions of nitrogen-gathering bacteria, we will sell to you for

AN EFFICIENT DORMANT SPRAY.

The San Jose Scale is no longer dreaded by those who do careful spraying with any of the several standard spray mixtures, although some give better results than others with a minimum of labor, and labor is the greatest expense in the spraying game. For this reason, the most desirable spray is the one that will accomplish the most in one operation.

You spray with—say Lime-Sulfur. If the work is thoroughly done and no shirking by the men, you can hold the San Jose Scale and Oyster Shell Scale in check. But there are other troubles equally serious that are not controlled by Lime-Sulfur or any combination of Lime-Sulfur, such as Aphid, Bud Moth, Fruit Tree Leaf Roller, etc., and even the most thorough summer spraying with combinations of Arsenate of Lead and Nicotine will not save the fruit from injury.

There are a number of very serious fungous troubles that are found on the trees in their dormant state that Lime-Sulfur might control if it had the proper powers of penetration, but unfortunately it cannot penetrate into the diseased tissues of such troubles as collar rot on apple trees, apple canker (Sphaeropsis Malorum), and the brown rot spores on peach trees. It has been demonstrated that all of these other insects and diseases may be controlled by one dormant spray; with a miscible oil known as "Scalecide." And the manufacturers claim that there are indications of a still wider range of usefulness for this spray, for in many orchards where a thorough spraying has been done for years with "Scalecide," other forms of canker and blight have almost entirely disappeared, but conclusive data has not yet been obtained; but proven fields of its activity together with the apparent stimulating effect on tree growth, go far beyond anything that was ever promised or expected of it.

The B. G. Pratt Company, 50 Church street, New York City, have prepared an interesting booklet, "Proof of the Pudding." They will send this helpful book free on request and we suggest that our readers send request accordingly.

We'll Be Looking For You At The New York Flower Show

IT'S being whispered around that as fine as the Philadelphia Show most certainly was; that they won't have anything on New York.

It seems that the management have kept a few rather startling things up their sleeves, that from what we can learn, will make the Show a good bit more interesting than former years.

Surely that's saying a lot; for last year's was a wonder show. Our snug little cozy comfort booth will be wide open for you to turn it into your headquarters.

We shall be looking for you.

LORD & BURNHAM CO.

Some of the Little Things that Count Big in Our Reconstructed Construction

WITH the spacing of the rafters 12 feet 2 inches apart instead of the old 8 feet 4 inches, it was not so all that more than, safely, lightening the structure sufficiently to carry the additional weight left by reducing the number of rafters a third.

If we had followed it out that way, what we had gained in lightness by decreasing the number of rafters would have been more than made up by the shade cast by the heavier members.

The entire framing had to be re-adjusted so as to safely distribute the weight.

The rafters and purlins were made some heavier, and to give an additional stiffening to the purlins we made a special long armed fitting which bolted them to the rafters.

Now take the ridge—the stretch from rafter to rafter is a long one.

To put a heavy piece of angle or other shaped iron under it would add a serious amount of shade.

So we used the old time tried truss of one-half inch round iron which stiffens the ridge all that's necessary and makes a neat workmanlike job.

And while we are talking about the ridge, just let us call your attention to that good husky piece of galvanized steel with which we bind the ventilating sash together.

None of your thin narrow strips held in place by too few screws.

Of course you and I both read a lot of things about greenhouse engineering. But after all is said and done the best engineer is experience.

The fact that every single one of all the iron frame greenhouses that we have built in the last 30 years is still standing staunch and strong, is quite the best of evidence that facts and figures—not theories, are on our side.

You know we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

Rose Garden

At the Grand Central Palace is acknowledged by all, including competitors, to be the most artistic and finished exhibit of its class ever staged.

Our display of roses in the Commercial Section of the exhibition shows the high quality of our plant and cut flower product. These and our great group of Nephrolepis are worth coming to see. Then extend your visit to Tarrytown and our nurseries at Scarborough.

Trains leave the neighboring Grand Central Station for Tarrytown and Scarborough at short intervals, and we have much at both places to interest you.

Hardy Perennials

For many years one of our most important specialties, our stock this season is again in prime condition, more extensive than ever, with a complete assortment of both standard varieties and novelties.

Roses, Two Year Old Plants for Outdoor Planting

Our Roses are all field grown plants which were dug in the fall, and which during the winter months were potted into 5 and 6 inch pots, they are stored in cold houses and frames, being retarded as much as possible, and are just the sort of stock that will please your retail customers. We are particularly strong on Hybrid Teas but carry also nearly all other types.

Aquatic Plants

Eight acres of Ponds are devoted to Hardy Nymphaeas and Nelumbiums alone, a large assortment of Tropical Nymphaeas, Victoria Regia, etc., as well as sub-aquatic plants for marginal planting. If interested in these, send for our book "Dreer's Water Lilies," it is not only descriptive, but gives full cultural directions.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Crotons

Cuttings will root readily in a pretty warm propagating bed. When they are rooted pot up and give them some bottom heat in connection with hot-house conditions. Even after their second shift into three-inch pots the combination of bottom heat and fairly warm quarters is by no means to be despised. Great care will be needed to equalize as far as possible the temperature inside. During sunshine it can run up to 78 degrees and at night stay at or about 68 degrees. Spray on all good days and damp down the house two or three times a day for they like a superabundance of moisture in the air all the time.

Dieffenbachias

These plants make very fine foliage subjects for the florist. As the season advances the spring and the humidity of the house should be increased. Keep them as near the glass as possible. They will need some shade but don't overdo it. These plants want a good brisk heat and will never attain their proper size and appearance without the full amount. Now that spring is here, increase the temperature up to 65 to 70 degrees during the night with from 10 to 15 degrees more during the day. Keep the atmosphere moist by damping down the walks two or three times a day and give them a good syringing on all bright days.

Easter Preparations

The show house display should be re-arranged every day during the two weeks preceding Easter and every unsightly flower or plant removed. When a plant is sold remove it to a cool shed, tag it and put another in its place. Have a good lot of madeup plants in pans, baskets, etc. Much of the advice extended in previous paragraphs may yet be followed to good purpose. Any lilies more backward but showing rapidly swelling buds and lengthening stem will need a high temperature and regular sprinkling to bring them in line with the rest. A short week of continued forcing at 65 to 70 degrees will bring these along. Lilies already showing opening flowers and white buds are ready to go to a cool shady place where they will carry through in perfect condition until the Easter trade begins.

Gloxinias

Gloxinias that were started in flats will now begin to make considerable roots and when the young growth has made one or two inches across they should be potted before they get crowded. A mixture of equal parts of loam, cow manure and leaf mold, with some fine charcoal and sand, is what they like. 5 or 6-inch pots are sufficiently large if the tubers are of ordinary size. Drain the pots well and press the soil moderately firm, leaving the tops of the tubers just level with the surface. Put them in heat immediately in a temperature of about 60 degrees at night. Do not spray the leaves, and shade from the direct sunshine. As soon as they begin to move, stand the plants near the glass.

Palms from Seed

It is a good plan where there is room to spare to sow some palm seed every year. Always make it a point to get fresh seed as they are imported from their different sources and plant from time to time as received. Palm seed germinates very irregularly. While some will come in two months time, there are others that will not show for many months and for that reason I prefer pans to sow in as flats are liable to rot before they are large enough to pot off. Fill the pans with a mixture of equal parts of loam, leaf mold and sand and provide free drainage for each pan. The seed should be covered twice their depth and pressed down firm to help retain the moisture. The pans should be covered with moss. Place where they can have a bottom heat of 85 to 90 degrees and with an atmospheric temperature of 70 to 75 degrees.

Starting Cobaea scandens

For a fast growing climber, there is nothing better than Cobaea scandens. Sow the seed in pans in a light and sandy soil. Place the seed edgewise and deep enough so the edge of the seed is just even with the surface of the soil. When large enough they should be potted into 2½-inch pots and staked as they may require.

Next Week:—Asparagus Plumosus; Callas; Cocos Weddelliana; Ferns; 1917 Ramblers; Seedlings.

...to have been done in a more satisfactory and books, or recommended by friends?" Possibly the proportion of our subscribers is not so small as is supposed that many buyers of garden material know what they want without reference to catalogue illustrations. But, on the other hand, there is also a large proportion of would-be buyers who are not so well-informed and who are undoubtedly influenced largely by the descriptions and pictures which they find in the catalogues of nurserymen and seedsmen. Of this class there is a new crop every year and it is surely good business to cater to them and to every buyer who tries to select their appetites for beautiful garden material. All will agree that good pictures of cheap quality and art and all exaggerations in illustrations or text should have no place in the publications of an otherwise good house.

Rose Society progress

In that very interesting book, "How to Grow Roses," we read that "Ten years ago the American Rose Society was in no very prosperous state. Amateurs had almost no part in it. Little attention was given to out-door roses or to rose gardens. All that is changing." The change referred to, such as it is, will meet with universal approval. But it was much better that the Rose Society existed as it did ten years ago than if it had not existed at all. We assume that the author above quoted did not intend to cast any reflections on the efforts of the commercial men who at that critical time assumed the responsibility of carrying the struggling organization through its days and years of adversity—a condition which was due in a large measure to the indifference of the so-called amateur element of those days, of which much had been expected by the founders but which proved a broken reed. Had it not been for the commercial rose lovers who, following Roosevelt's precept, "Do what you can with what you have where you are," there would probably have been a defunct rose society. In the meantime the Society has been doing pioneer work and conditions are different now from what they were ten years ago. President Pen-nock in his address before the American Rose Society, which appears in full in this paper, tells of one eminent amateur rosarian who asserted that he had left the Rose Society "because it offered the amateur so little." That is scarcely the spirit which builds up useful and prosperous organizations. Years ago when the writer was an official of the Society of American Florists the question he was most frequently called upon to answer was "What use is the S. A. F. to me?" The answer was "Isn't that a selfish attitude to take? Better ask 'What can I do for the S. A. F.?' " A spring cannot rise higher than its source. If the American Rose Society is to attain the desired prestige and influence and reach a position worthy of the name it bears the support of all interests is indispensable. The British National Rose Society is frequently held up before us as an example of what a rose society should be. There is no good reason why our Society should not be equally prosperous. This cannot be accomplished in a day but the outlook certainly is more promising now than ever before. Let us minimize as far as possible class distinctions. All love the rose and should be eager to assist.

A correspondent raises the question, "Who are the members of purchasers, particularly of nursery stock, who place substantial orders depend to any considerable extent on elaborate catalog descriptions and illustrations of standard stock when placing their orders? Are they not more generally guided by what they have

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Earth Worms in the Benches

In the spring of the year there may be benches that do not dry out as they should and the result is that the plants do not thrive. The cause of this can generally be traced to earthworms in the soil in such large numbers that the soil is full of them, and their plying through it makes it sticky, stopping the pores, excluding the air and preventing proper drainage. To rid the soil of these pests a dose of fresh air-slacked lime will have to be applied and watered in at once. Or to save a good deal of labor and time, a barrel of lime can be dumped into the manure tank and well mixed and then applied same as liquid manure. After this the benches should be let go until they are fairly dry and then watered again with clean water, or following this with liquid. As long as the number of earth worms is not very large they will not do any harm; in fact, many growers claim them to be good for the plants as they take the manure down into the soil. Some will remain after the lime, as it is impossible to get them all the first time, but their number will be reduced so that they will not do any harm. To test the soil for worms lay a lump of partly decayed cow manure on the bench here and there and if there are very many worms in the soil they will quickly collect in this manure, so that it will be alive with them.

Shading the Cross Houses

Cross houses devoted to greens will soon have to be shaded, especially those on the east side which are exposed to the sun from early in the morning. There is nothing better than a little whiting and kerosene, with a drop of drier added. This will not injure the paint and will last much better than lime. A little green paint can be used instead of the whiting, and this will make the shading green and much more soothing to the eyes, at the same time making the houses a little darker than the white shading. To remove this in the fall, a little caustic soda put into water and applied carefully with a brush on a rainy day will take off all the shading. If applied carefully it will not come into contact with the sash bars, so that there will not be any danger of taking the paint off these too.

Disbudding.

As the plants will be making a rapid growth, following the feeding which they should be getting, there will be more disbudding now than ever. The days will be much warmer and the buds will get smaller even if not burdened with several side buds. Go over the plants regularly and carefully and see that all these side buds are removed. It will also be well to see that some growth remains on every plant, and if while disbudding a plant should be found with only a short bud on it, take this bud out so that the plant will have better chance with the others. It may also pay to take the top out of the bottom shoot while it is only about ten inches high, for if the shoot is a strong one three top eyes will break and there will be three nice roses on the one stem in almost the same time that it would take to grow the one. Then the growth following after the three roses are cut off will be greater than if the bottom shoot were allowed to grow to maturity. There will be a great many of these bottom shoots from now on, and if they are pinched out on time and not too high the roses cut will not only be better quality but there will be more of them.

The Young Plants.

It will be necessary to look over these carefully every day to make sure that they are not coming to any harm, for it is these little plants that will make or break the place the coming season. See that all the plants in the small pots are repotted on time so that they will not get pot bound and thus receive a check, not only to the roots but to their growth as well. The plants that were shifted into larger pots early in February may need more space at this time, and they should get it if they are to stay healthy. In giving more space to four-inch stock it is best to sink the lower half of the pot into the ashes and if there is not enough ashes in the bench to do this, apply some more. If the pots are not plunged it will be very hard to keep them wet and the plants will suffer. Even if it may not be possible to give more space it may be possible to go over them and clean them up a bit, taking out any weeds that may have started and removing any green scum that may have formed, with a wooden or steel scraper. When setting the plants back on the bench see that all the taller ones are set to the rear and all the smaller and weaker plants to the front of the benches. I have frequently explained why this should be done and yet there are many growers who lose a good many plants because this does not receive attention. Set the pots firmly on the ashes or sand and make sure they are level, and by all means keep them in straight rows. The work will look much better when it is done and it will be better for the plants.

THE LIFE OF A CATTLEYA.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Would like to know from your orchid experts how long cattleyas may be kept in a paying condition with average ordinary good care, and what per cent. loss annually can be expected that has to be replaced in order to keep up the stock.

I am well aware that one can do a great deal better than another, but merely want to get at a fair basis.

New Jersey.

A. J. P.

In reply to Mr. Paul's letter would say that cattleyas can be kept for eight to ten years in a paying condition with ordinary care. Some will do better and others not quite so well but this is about the average. The annual loss in plants after the first five years would average about 20 per cent for the next five years.

Yours very truly,

F. J. DOLANSKY.

Lynn, Mass.

At the regular meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, Orange, N. J., on Monday evening, March 20, it was voted that a Rose night be held in June, prizes to be offered for the best collection of outdoor roses. Awards for the evening were as follows: Max Schneider, violets, 25 points; Begonia Cinnamini, 75 points; carnations, 90 points; Golden Spur narcissus, 85 points. Emil Panuska, cultural certificate for Scilla Clusii.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

No one familiar with horticultural matters during recent years could visit the Fourth National Flower Show without being strongly impressed with the fact that in the brief time since the series of National Shows was inaugurated by the Society of American Florists the Flower Show idea has developed amazingly as a vital force in horticultural progress and has already become a landmark in the horticultural history of our times. Its eventual effect on the time-honored mid-summer convention cannot be foreseen but many wise heads have come to the conclusion that ultimately the spring flower show will entirely supersede the August meeting. The astounding results of the Philadelphia affair have nonplussed even the shrewdest guessers and it is not out of the way to say that the outcome of the series of flower shows which have now been held indicates that the S. A. F. can successfully put through an annual exhibition wherever it chooses to go. Exact figures of the attendance and the cash receipts up to closing time Sunday night have not yet reached us but suffice it to say that all records were broken in both respects and that a generous surplus will be realized after all accounts are settled, and this, too, notwithstanding the grievous disappointment in the Sunday closing edict. The trade exhibitors, who are so important a factor in assuring a safe financial result, were pleased with the business done, so far as we have ascertained, the trade attendance exceeding numerically as well as in extent of territory represented, some of the recent August conventions. The Sunday difficulty was overcome, in part, on the second Sunday by a plan put into effect by the Executive Board whereby associated memberships were sold to the public at 25 cents each at various points on Saturday and badges were issued accordingly which were good for Sunday admission. Nearly 10,000 temporary members were thus enrolled. By 1 P. M. Sunday, most of the badge holders had seen the show and then word was sent broadcast that the doors had been thrown open to the general public and that everybody could see the display free of charge until 6 P. M. An hour after George Asmus, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, had telephoned this announcement to the newspaper information bureaus and hotels. Broad street and Allegheny avenue were jammed with eager thousands on their way to the hall.

During the week 80 policemen had been on duty daily to handle the crowds, but on Sunday the number was raised to 100. To avoid congestion the entire display was quickly rearranged and the main aisles widened by at least six feet. This had hardly been done before the advance guard of the free list arrived, and for nearly five hours the crowds surged through the building like a flooded river. The extra policemen, with 15 detectives and a dozen firemen, were scattered about through the vast exhibit to hold the throngs in check, but there was no disorder. So ended the great exhibition.

CLOSING PRIZE AWARDS.

Our account of the exhibits and awards, previously published, was complete up to Wednesday night, March 29. On Thursday some big rose competitions were scheduled. The three prizes aggregating $500 for the best display of cut roses covering 200 sq. ft. by commercial growers brought out some superb groups. A. N. Pierson, Inc., won 1st, his flowers being arranged by G. E. M. Stumpp. The display by Joseph Heacock Co. arranged by Habermehl came in 2nd, and that by F. R. Pierson Company, 3rd. There were some artful rose decorations by retailers, F. P. Vollers taking 1st and Forrest Flower Shop 2nd for corsage bouquet; Forrest Flower Shop 1st and Vollers 2nd for bridal bouquet, Chas. Henry Fox 1st and London Flower Shop 2nd for basket of roses, Forrest Flower Shop 1st and London Flower Shop 2nd for table decoration, and E. H. Slattery of Buffalo 1st for mantel decoration.

On Friday the carnation men had their second innings. Wm. Kleinheinz was 1st and Miss Ann Thomson 2nd on vase of blooms by private growers, Cottage Gardens Co. 1st on vase of 300 blooms and Strafford Flower Farm 1st, $200, for best display of carnation blooms not to exceed 1500 blooms. In the retailers' carnation classes 1st, 2nd and 3rd for table decorations were won by Forrest Flower Shop, Gude Bros. Co. and T. P. Vollers, respectively, on basket arrangements to London Flower Shop, T. P. Vollers and Forrest Flower Shop.

Wm. Tricker won the Foley Mfg. Co.'s silver cup for 100 square feet of aquatic garden and one blue ribbon for display of semi-aquatic plants.

Dreer & Co. won two blue ribbons for lace plant (Ouvirandra fenestralis), and small aquatic garden.

THE LECTURES.

The lectures were very well attended, those toward the close of the week attracting a crowd which taxed the seating capacity of the room. The lecturers and their subjects were as follows:

Thursday, March 30, 3.30 P. M., Richard Vincent, Jr.—Dahlias, Illustrated. 8.00 P. M., J. Otto Thilow—Flowers from Snow to Snow, Illustrated. Under the auspices of the Garden Clubs of America.

Friday, March 31, 3.30 P. M., Miss Elizabeth L. Lee—School of Horticulture for Women, Illustrated. 8.00 P. M., J. Horace McFarland—Civics for Home and Municipality, Illustrated.

Saturday, April 1, 3.30 P. M., E. I. Wilde—Bulbs for Summer Bloom, Illustrated. 8.00 P. M., Arthur Cowee—Gladioli, Illustrated.

MISCELLANEOUS MENTION.

The following communication was received:

Philadelphia, Penna., March 30, 1916.
National Flower Show Committee (Now in Convention), Philadelphia: Mr. George Asmus, Chairman.

Dear Sir: Cleveland desires the honor of having the next and Fifth National Flower Show in the Spring of 1918.

The central location of our city, making it of easy access to the East, West, North and South, does not have to be argued. It is also within a minimum of express and freight rates for the exhibitors.

We have an organization that is capable of handling the undertaking and making good. For reference: Cleveland Flower Show—1915.

Whatever financial backing is necessary will be forthcoming from our interested organizations in Cleveland.

We ask for a favorable decision during the present week, if possible.

Thanking you for considering the matter at your earliest convenience, I remain,

Yours truly,

H. P. KNOBLE, Chairman.

Committee on Invitation: Cleveland Florists' Club, Ohio Horticultural Society, Garden Club of Cleveland.

The exhibition of fish proved one of the delightful and surprising features to the thousands of visitors. The specimens of the finny tribe were entered through the Aquarium Society of Philadelphia, the oldest organization of the kind in the United States. Franklin Barrett, with entries representing many divisions of the fish family, led all contestants. He was awarded 35 cups and 22 ribbons. Mr. Barrett won the prize for having the four best lion heads on exhibition and also carried off the grand prize for the largest and best collection. In the lion head class he had scaled and scaleless entries.

Scaled and scaleless nymphs, of the telescope, ribbon-tailed and veil-tailed varieties, proved consistent winners for Mr. Barrett. Harry Peters and William Peck carried off four cups each for their entries. Charles E. Visel, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was awarded six cups for his collection of Japanese varieties. William T. Innes, John Andsley and Dr. Herman Burgin were other winners. The latter was awarded a cup for the best 24-inch household aquarium on exhibition.

Three thousand of the carnations shown earlier in the week went in the hands of visitors who desired to purchase the flowers in order to help boost the fund to be turned over to Miss Anna Jarvis, founder of Mother's Day. The flowers were readily disposed of at the tea garden, and over $300 was raised in this way. Of the other cut flowers, the great majority were distributed among the hospitals of the city after the show closed Sunday night.

A mistake due to obscure copy got into our report on the carnation awards for Tuesday, March 28. In the class for best vase in the 100-classes, the silver medal was won by A. A. Pembroke with Pink Sensation and the bronze medal went to Cottage Gardens for Crystal White, thus reversing the order as first reported.

The magnificent group of acacias exhibited by Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass., numbering 118 plants, was sold to Joseph E. Widener through his head gardener, Wm. Kleinheinz, and their home will be in the Lynnewood Hall collection at Ogontz, Pa.

Silver medals were awarded to H. A. Dreer for the two Nymphae novelties we described last week, also for Peteris Rivertoniana, and the same for an improved form of Cyrtomium Rochfordianum.

A special gold medal was awarded to R. & J. Farquhar & Co., of Boston, for their group of the new hardy Azalea Kaempferi.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY

Address by President R. Vincent, Jr., at National Flower Show, Philadelphia.

After some preliminary remarks in reference to the organization of the Dahlia Society and its work thus far Mr. Vincent proceeded to give some cultural advice on dahlia growing, with stereopticon slides, as follows:

"The most suitable soil for growing Dahlias is a sandy loam. Heavy soils can be lightened by the use of coal ashes or sand, anything that will help to make the soil porous. Whenever possible the land for dahlias ought to be plowed or spaded up the fall previous, the action of freezing helping to make the soil more pliable.

Fertilizer or Manure.

We ourselves use very little manure, preferring bone meal with the addition of a little potash. If the ground is spaded in the fall or early winter the bone could well be mixed with the soil at that time. In using manure we would rather use it as a mulch. Put it on any time after the plants or roots are set. Any kind of material used for mulch around the plants will retain moisture and save watering and if watered will keep the soil from baking. By using bone we get a more stocky growth and more flowers,—at least this is our experience.

Planting.

We find that the June-planted dahlias invariably give us the finest or exhibition blooms. The early plantings have the extreme hot weather to contend with, very often causing an indifferent growth; the stalks get hard and the plant forms a mass of small weak limbs with poor flowers if any, and more subject to disease and insect pests. This condition can only be remedied by a vigorous use of the knife, cutting back hard so as to cause the plant to make a new and strong growth.

The above troubles are often ours, but there are some years when there are exceptions. You may ask then why do we have these troubles. My advice is "do as I say not as I do," as it generally takes us six weeks to plant our crop, even by using machinery in planting.

Insect Pests.

The dahlia is not exempt from insect pests any more than other flowers; and the growers will find that a few sprayings, especially during a drought, are an advantage. Tobacco solution, soap, etc.,—almost any insecticide will answer; except that for the black aster bug, which feeds on the flowers alone, hand picking, if not too numerous, is the best remedy. They can easily be seen as they very seldom touch the dark colored flowers but always white or pink.

Staking

To have the dahlia grow and show up to the best advantage they ought to be tied up to a strong stake, and to get large flowers thin out when too many limbs start out from the stool or main stalk, also disbud (as per figures shown upon the screen.)"

Mr. Vincent then gave a list of varieties which his experience led him to recommend as the best in their classes, as follows:

Six Best Peony-Flowered—Bertha von Suttner, Geisha, Germania, Gloire de Baarn, Queen Wilhelmina, Queen Emma.

Six Best Show A. D. Liveni, Chas. Lanier, Ethel, Maule, Souve. Mme. Moreau, Yellow Duke, Zebra.

Nine Best Cactus—Countess of Lonsdale, Golden Gate, J. H. Jackson, Kalif, Marguerite Bouchon, Rene Cayeaux, Sweetbriar, Wodan, Wolfgang von Goethe.

Six Best Pompon—Alewine, Aille Mourey, Indian Chief, Little Beauty, Little May, Snowclan.

Six Best Decorative—Delice, Hortulanus Flet, Jack Rose, Jean Charmant, Le Grand Manitou, Papa Charmant.

Six Single Century—Ami Barillet, Fringed 20th Century, Rose Pink Century, Sensation, Setting Sun, White Century.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston will hold a Field Day with the William W. Edgar Company, Waverley, Mass., on Saturday, April 8, 1916. The display of Easter plants here is always a notable one.

INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

Grand Central Palace, New York

The first spring exhibition in the Grand Central Palace, which opened on Wednesday afternoon, April 6, is the most beautiful and artistically arranged flower show ever been our pleasure to see. From Day one, the interest in the opening day led us to see more than a very brief comment on the various displays or other than a very incomplete list of the winners in the first day's judging. The great interest centered about the Rose Gardens and the groups of plants arranged for effect by the private gardeners. All previous rosegarden display in this country pale in comparison with the winner in this great competition. 1st prize was won by F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., whose exhibit was a triumph of simplicity, color harmony and perfect finish. Standard roses were used with splendid effect in this exhibit. A. N. Pierson's entry in this class, which was awarded 2nd prize was a very dainty arrangement enclosed with a rustic railing. Bobbink & Atkins' entry was quite original, the garden being enclosed with a low brick wall with stone posts and pedestals. Julius Roehrs Co. also showed originality in their rose garden entry. There were five entries for the great class of flowering plants and bulbs by private gardeners. As the prize awards show, Adolph Lewishohn, gard. J. Canning, was the winner of 1st but it took the judges a very long time with added referees to decide. A more explicit statement in the schedule as to what is intended by "arrangement" is needed. The winning group was a perfect galaxy, full of sparkle and fragrance. Buddleia asiatica made a very fine effect here. F. E. Lewis was the winner of the second prize and W. B. Thompson, 3rd. Special mention was awarded to P. W. Popp, gard. for Mrs. H. Darlington, in this class.

The rockery gardens were also a great attraction. A. N. Pierson's entry, with primulas, heucheras, daphnes, etc., was a beautiful conception. Bobbink & Atkins' rock garden was also a gem, rich in alpine plants, irises, etc. Julius Roehrs Co. was another competitor in this class, putting up a very extensive arrangement.

Among the cut flower displays a vase of Farquhar's Giant antirrhinums shown by J. B. Urquhart of Newport was a centre of wondering admiration. Most of the cut flowers were displayed on the second floor. Here were also schizanthus, cyclamen, primula, tulip, hyacinth and daffodil groups. In tulips we noticed particularly the Van Wavren novelty De Wet orange scarlet and Narcissus Van Wavren Giant and Olympia.

In the fern classes the specimen Adiantum Farleyense by J. D. Urquhart of Newport was the gem.

The orchid displays were unprecedentedly fine. Julius Roehrs Co., Clement Moore, Lager & Hurrell, and others, showed glorious collections arranged with consummate taste.

We have only touched upon a few of the outstanding features of this unprecedented flower show. Next week we shall try to do it justice.

The trade section is, as usual, well filled with exhibits, some of the booths being very spacious. These, too, we shall give in detail in our next issue.

PRIZE AWARDS.

Plants in Flower—Private Growers.

Flowering plants and bulbs covering 200 sq. ft. arranged for effect: 1st, Adolph Lewishohn; 2d, F. E. Lewis; 3d, W. B. Thompson; special mention, H. Darlington Mamaroneck, N. Y., gard. P. W. Popp.

Arrangement: 1st, Mrs. F. A. Constable; 2d, William Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa. Bay trees; 2d, Mrs. Pauline Boelger, Riverdale-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Crotons, 12 plants: 1st, W. B. Thompson; 2d, Mrs. J. Hood Wright, New York City, gard. C. W. Weber.

Dracaenas, 3 plants: 1st, W. B. Thompson; 2d, B. H. Borden, Oceanic, N. J., gard. F. C. Honeyman.

Kentia Forsteriana: 1st, Wm. Ziegler, Jr., Newport, C. I.; 2d, A. Bueckler, 2d, Wm. Kleinheinz.

Kentia Belmoreana: 1st, Wm. Ziegler, Jr.; 2d, Mrs. J. Hood Wright.

Six foliage plants: 1st, W. B. Thompson; 2d, D. G. Reid.

Foliage plant, specimen: 1st, W. B. Thompson; 2d, D. G. Reid.

Group of foliage plants: 100 sq. ft.: 1st, W. B. Thompson.

Cineraria, hybrid, 6 plants: 1st, C. K. G. Billings, Oyster Bay, N. Y., gard. Jas. Bell; 2d, A. N. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., Supl. J. Canning.

Calceolaria, 12 plants: 2d, G. D. Barron, Rye, N. Y., Supt. Jas. Linane.

Chrysanthemum, 6 plants: 1st, Adolph Lewishohn; 2d, W. B. Thompson, Yonkers, N. Y., gard. W. F. Johnston.

Schizanthus: 1st, C. K. G. Billings; 2d, Ralph T. Pulitzer, Manhasset, N. Y., gard. F. Hitchman.

Astilbe: 1st, Mrs. J. Murray Mitchell, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; 2d, Chas. Wason, 2d, D. G. Reid.

Wistaria: 1st, F. E. Lewis, Ridgefield, Ct., gard. J. W. Smith; 2d, C. K. G. Billings.

Any other specimen flowering plant: 1st, J. F. Lewis, 2d, Louis Roepke, Hagerstown, N. J.

Flowering plants and bulbs covering 200 sq. ft. arranged for effect: 1st, Adolph Lewishohn; 2d, F. E. Lewis; 3d, W. B. Thompson; special mention, H. Darlington Mamaroneck, N. Y., gard. P. W. Popp.

THE KEWITE MEETING.

The Kew graduates held a very enthusiastic meeting and banquet at Shanley's, New York, about 25 Kew men with their wives being present. A permanent organization was effected and the annual meeting will be held in New York each year at the time of the International Show. Montague Free was elected president, S. R. Candler, secretary and treasurer; vice-president Mr. McPherson, reputed to be the oldest Kew man in America. There were short speeches and songs, the singing by Mrs. Blanche being particularly enjoyed.

The Newport (R. I.) Horticultural Society listened to a very fine lecture on "How Plants Feed," by Prof. B. L. Hartwell, of the Kingston experiment station, at its meeting on Tuesday evening, March 28. President Urquhart exhibited some splendid lilies, for which a silver medal was awarded. At the next meeting, V. A. Vanicek will read a paper on "The Propagation of Shrubs."

THE PANAMA CANNA

Antoine Wintzer's Most Distinctive Creation

ANTOINE WINTZER has bred the Panama Canna to suit the requirements of gardeners. It is a new and distinct type of Canna, with a long, narrow, lanceolate leaf, and a very large, double flower, with petals that are most round and as broad as they are long, and with an enormous spread of individual blossoms.

The Panama Canna Wintzer has bred a type that makes it superior in his variety of panache-making. He counts it among the most worthy of his Canna offspring.

The Panama is uniquely different from other Cannas. It is more strikingly beautiful, more thoroughly charming in its gorgeous colorings. The Panama is of a doubly distinct and individual type, a type that is destined to be popular with Canna lovers. The color of the flower is a most distinctive rich orange red, with a well marked edge of bright golden yellow. The blossoms are very large, with petals that are most round and as broad as they are long, and with an enormous spread of individual blossoms.

No one who has seen this splendid Canna in bloom, be it said to wonder at the sweeping recognition it has received at the leading Horticultural prize-winning events both here in America and in Europe.

EASTER PREPARATIONS AT WAVERLEY, MASS.

Every Easter lily grower knows how prone the plants are to come too short in stature, many bulbs blossoming at the height of twelve inches or even less. At the W. W. Edgar place in Waverley, Mass., where lilies are a large crop, none of these undersized plants are to be seen, bench after bench running uniform at 18 to 24 inches. Mr. Bartsch has a theory based on experience that as lilies make roots and tops at the same time it is a mistake to give the bulbs any preparatory cool treatment after potting, for the purpose of making roots. He places his bulbs in a temperature of 60 degrees at once and holds at 60 to 65 right along from start to finish. The lilies which look so fine at the present time, with abundant buds and perfect foliage from the base up, were potted after Christmas and placed immediately on a bench at 60 degrees and covered with a couple of inches of straw, which was removed when the growths had reached two or three inches. Dwarfed plants are often caused, Mr. Bartsch says, by the check given in repotting. Where the plan of starting in small pots is followed transplanting should be done while the growths are still small and the roots have not yet reached the pots and they should be kept steadily at 65 degrees without any chance to relax active growth. The French hydrangeas are a leading Easter specialty here this year. There are several thousand plants, largely Mme. Mouillere, and they are superb. For Easter they have entirely outclassed the old Otaksa, but for later use for summer decorative work Otaksa is more durable and is still without a rival. A very satisfactory novelty is Astilbe America, which, in color and habit, is well ahead of Queen Alexandra. Even since the Edgar exhibit of standard heliotropes in the Boston Convention Garden a big demand for this specialty has been developed for summer bedding use.

Extensive improvements in this noted plant growing establishment are planned for the coming season, including the erection of two or more modern plant houses, new service buildings and new residence. Thus does prosperity wait upon industry.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers: President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; First Vice-President, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; Second Vice-President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary, Treasurer, C. E. Kenschel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. L. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O. Chicago, Ill., June 30-27, next meeting place.

Onion Seed.

The delayed and cheap seed, rather than the yellow variety, continues to be in the market and a seed of high quality has become exceedingly scarce. There has been much complaint about the unsatisfactory germination of some lots of onion seed this season, and where the vitality has been low some seedsmen have adopted the plan of sending an additional quantity sufficient to make up for this lack. This plan undoubtedly will not be followed by the trade as a whole as it is too expensive. Most dealers, and particularly the mail order houses placed their prices at too low a figure to enable them to do this without serious loss.

Embarrassing State Enactments.

Just how the seed laws of the various states which prescribe arbitrary standards of germination can be met this year in the matter of onion seed will prove something of a problem. When the legislature attempts to regulate a product of nature, it is like passing laws forbidding grasshoppers to cross a state line, and quite as sensible. If the men who pass such laws were blessed with a little more "horse sense," and were less ready to play the role of the demagogue to obtain farmers' votes, such laws would never be passed. No doubt the farmers should be protected from deliberate fraud, but with all respect to this important element of our population, many of the evils they complain of have their birth in their own midst and they are largely responsible. Being a privileged class exempted from the operations of laws that will send other worthy citizens to jail, they are beginning to feel that no restrictive law should apply to them while the other part of the population should be subjected to laws little short of an inquisition.

The Disclaimer Controversy.

HORTICULTURE, Boston:
Gentlemen:

Your last issue, containing the article in regard to the non-warranty clause of the American Seed Trade Disclaimer, meets with our hearty approval. Mr. Leonard was very sorry indeed after the meeting of this committee was over that he did not get up and make a strong protest, but the feeling was that it would be better at the time to uphold the very good committee we had in this matter, who were trying to do the best they possibly could to arrive at a satisfactory agreement for all concerned, and while a great many who were present and voted for the report of the committee, after thinking it over feel that it would have been better indeed for the seed trade in general if a more decided stand had been taken.

At the same time, the committee is not committed and are desirous of every credit for their endeavor to keep matters pleasant between all parties, and the understanding seems to be that this matter should and will be brought up before the Seed Trade Association at its next meeting in June, which is undoubtedly the proper place for it, as this Chicago meeting was one without any authority at all, as we understand it, but simply a gathering of seedsmen to protest against anyone selling goods without the non-warranty clause, which, in our opinion, should be used by everyone in the association.

Yours very truly,

LEONARD SEED CO.

Chicago, March 31, 1916.

Lifting the Embargoes.

Curtis Nye Smith, counsel of the Seed and Nursery Trade Associations, had on April 3 a conference with the railroad officials of the New York Central and New Haven Railroads and also with the Eastern Freight Accumulation Conference concerning the lifting of embargoes on seeds and nursery stock. As our readers were heretofore advised the New Haven embargo on seeds was lifted March 1st and on March 28th a permanent order against embargo on seeds was made. On the same road, on March 31st, the embargo on nursery stock was lifted. The New York Central lines and Boston & Albany have lifted embargoes on seeds and nursery stock. The Boston & Maine also had no embargo on seeds or nursery stock. The Pennsylvania has co-operated in the lifting of embargoes.

It is of the greatest importance that seeds and nursery stocks shall go forward promptly as the planting season is at hand. The railroad officials have shown an earnest desire to assist in this movement. If any seedsmen or nurseryman finds any delay in shipments, telegraph his complaint at once to the Vice-President in charge of Traffic of the railroad complained of, with copies to Mr. Smith.

One Week's Imports.

Imports at the port of New York of horticultural material for the week ending March 24, were recorded as follows:

Bulbs—Denmark, $2,984; France, $51; Germany, $2,550; Netherlands, $24,678; England, $945; Hongkong, $200; Japan, $829.

Plants, etc.—France, $662; Netherlands, $79,781; England, $1,536; Ireland, $2,363; Japan, $1,501.

Red clover seed—France, $59,809; Germany, $4,000; Italy, $107,533; Netherlands, $418.

Other clover seed—France, $3,083; Canada, $4,758.

All other seeds—France, $13,643; Denmark, $185; Netherlands, $28,158; England, $27,881; Hongkong, $10; Japan, $210.

Nitrate of potash—England, $72,761.

Nitrate of soda—Chile, $5,561.

Sulphate of potash—Peru, $5,954.

Other fertilizers—Scotland, $313; British West Indies, $6,390.

Customs Decision.

Merchandise described as phlox or other herbaceous plants with fasciculated non-bulbous roots, imported by McHutchison & Co., were the subject of a decision handed down on April 1 by the Board of United States General Appraisers. Duty was taxed on these plants as nursery stock not specially provided for, at the rate of 15 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 211, tariff act of 1913. The board finds that duty should have been assessed under the provision in paragraph 210 for "all other bulbs, roots, root stocks, and tubers, which are cultivated for their foliage, 50 cents per thousand."

Notes.

A. T. Boddenham states that his new location on Chambers street has greatly increased his counter trade. He is expecting an excellent business this season.

The Dutch have raised their embargo on round spinach seed, carrot, onion and leek seed, according to a telegram from the American consul general at Rotterdam.

The reliable old house of William Elliott & Sons speak enthusiastically of their business thus far this season. It has shown a marked increase over last year or the year previous.

Business is brisk at Thorburn's, Vaughan's, Weeber & Don's, Burnett Bros., and we must not overlook W. E. Marshall & Co., who are working overtime to keep up with their orders.

The MacNiff Horticultural Company finds their three stores none too large for their increase in business. Most of these stores are crowded during certain hours of the day and the large staff of clerks kept very busy.

A glance in the store of Peter Henderson & Company would disclose to any one familiar with the spring business of this establishment that spring was once more on us. It is crowded to capacity much of the time, and the management wears a placid and satisfied smile.

The sudden advent of spring has been a most welcome surprise to the seed trade as well as the public in general. We understand that most of the dealers have been very busy during the past week and much night work has been found necessary. While the loss of the month of March to the retail trade can scarcely be made up this spring, all indications are that they will be pushed to their limit of capacity during the next sixty days, and some of the lost ground may be regained.

CHICAGO.

Wm. Mathes, formerly at Vaughan's Nurseries, will now have charge of the summer home of A. Pabst at Oconomowoc, Wis.

Wm. E. Tricker, who has recently been with Vaughan's Greenhouses, has accepted the position of superintendent at Holm & Olson's, St. Paul, Minn.

Quite a good many florists are passing through Chicago enroute for their homes after visiting Philadelphia and New York. Much praise of the National Flower Show is heard from each one. As one expressed it, she had seen a real flower show for the first time.

P. J. Foley recently returned from Duluth, Minn., where he was called in connection with a law suit. Mr. Foley says he was impressed with the fact that florists should be very careful what kind of leases they sign. In this case Louis Visias rented a store and greenhouses from Lumm & Stevenson at Duluth and signed a lease for a term of years, promising to turn over the property in as good condition as he found it. The houses burned and the suit was to recover the value of the buildings. The lessees lost their suit and Visias had to pay only $32.50 for removing the debris.

Frank Oechslein has bought the ten acres of land with range of carnation houses known as the Lynch place at 22nd street, and Harlem avenue. The houses have been built about five years and are in good condition and well adapted to the growing of young stock. Mr. Oechslein's business has grown steadily since its foundation ten years ago and the difficulty of securing young stock, especially of ferns, made this expansion necessary. The price is not made public but the purchase came at a most opportune time as the Metropolitan Elevated secured rights of way to La Grange the following day, passing close to the new place.

PITTSBURGH.

Carl T. Jacobson has been secured as assistant and Norman Kann, architect, for the landscape department of A. W. Smith Co.

Employees of Randolph & McClements are experiencing an epidemic of tonsillitis, Miss Bertha Hughes, Miss Gertrude Miner and Walter H. Breitenstein, all being victims.

Mrs. Jean Falconer Kirkpatrick, the daughter of William Falconer, began a weekly department dealing with the culture of flowers and beautifying of home grounds last Monday morning in the Pittsburgh Post.

Nicholas Cassalucia, gardener for the Penn. R. R., has commenced grading the grounds for planting surrounding the new Wilkesburg station and elsewhere. Mr. Cassalucia is at present handicapped, owing to a scarcity of workmen.

An illustrated lecture on "Beautiful Gardens at Home and Abroad" was given by J. Wilkinson Elliott on Tuesday afternoon at the William Penn Hotel. Mr. Wilkinson's lecture was illustrated with pictures of European gardens, including that of William Robinson of Sussex, England, California gardens and some good examples of those of Pennsylvania.

The three largest cities of Pennsylvania have over two hundred men in the agricultural school of the State College, Pittsburgh being second in the list. During the college year of 1904-5, there were only 73 students, while during the last year there were 1,337, the majority being city-bred.

Horticulture, forestry and agricultural chemistry are greatly favored courses.

BOSTON.

Henry Comley has extended his Philadelphia trip to the Capitol City. Del. Cartwright did likewise and thoroughly enjoyed his little vacation.

William Sim, of Cliftondale, returned from the National Flower Show loaded with prizes, both firsts and seconds. Altogether he gathered in fifteen of the coveted medals.

Neal Boyle, of Malden, played host to a number of business friends at his greenhouses last Sunday. The party was escorted through the houses and then enjoyed a light refreshment. Many orders were booked by Mr. Boyle, who certainly showed some originality in getting the trade to come to him instead of vice-versa.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

John M. McCabe, while operating a Ford delivery wagon, struck and fatally injured an elderly woman. The victim died a few hours later in the Casualty Hospital. Young McCabe was arrested, but was later exonerated of all blame by the coroner's jury. The machine was going slowly and McCabe sounded the horn, but the woman became confused and stepped in front of the car.

An appropriation of $30,000 is sought to grade and terrace the grounds adjacent to the memorial arch at Valley Forge and to construct a road leading to the grounds and through the arch, in a bill just introduced by Congressman Butler. In a bill introduced by Senator Sheppard the sum of $100,000 is asked to be used in the study and control of diseases of cotton, potatoes, truck crops, forage crops, drug and related plants.

Obituary

F. H. Fisher.

F. H. Fisher, who was a florist of Nantucket, Mass., died on March 29. Funeral took place at Foxboro, where he formerly resided.

Alpheus Packard.

Alpheus Packard, for many years engaged in business as a florist in West Hanover, Mass., died on Monday, March 27, in his 74th year. He had been ill for more than a year. He leaves a widow and four children.

Robert Greenlaw.

Robert Greenlaw, brother of the late Alexander Greenlaw, of Boston, and father of Robert Greenlaw, Jr., traveling representative of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., died in Worcester, Mass., on March 29. He was 87 years old and a native of Banff, Scotland.

John R. Shein.

John R. Shein, florist, of Atlantic City, N. J., died at Atlantic City, N. J., on March 31, after an illness of several months. He was in business formerly in Philadelphia, but moved to Atlantic City many years ago.

Mrs. B. R. Burchel.

Mrs. B. R. Burchel, head of the Riessen Floral Co., and wife of Edward Burchel, associated with her in the company, died on March 30, at the Lutheran Hospital where she has been for the past three weeks, being treated for liver trouble. Her death was unexpected and the trade was greatly shocked when it became known that Mrs. Burchel had died.

Mrs. Burchel before her marriage was Bertha Riessen and was employed by the old Michel Plant & Bulb Co. 25 years ago, where she learned the trade and afterwards opened up the Riessen Floral Co. on Broadway a few doors from the old Elleard establishment, which she later bought out and combined the two stores into one. Mrs. Burchel was born in St. Louis and was 46 years old. She was well known in the trade all over the country and especially in Chicago among the wholesalers who supplied the company with flowers for many years.

She leaves her husband, mother and two brothers. The funeral took place Sunday, April 2d. Many beautiful floral pieces were sent by members of the trade and friends.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Boston, Mass.—Harry M. Walfish, florist, 476 Columbus avenue, is a petitioner in bankruptcy. He owes $1272 and has no assets.

NEWS NOTES.

Sewickley, Pa.—Thomas Evans has purchased the greenhouses of W. E. Patton and will continue the business under the name of the Valley Greenhouse Co.

Warwick, R. I.—The Maplehurst Greenhouses, Inc., have acquired the Longmeadow Golf Club grounds, comprising 82 acres, which it will devote to the extension of its gardening property.

The Ginger Jar

The Philadelphia boys have reason to feel proud of themselves! They worked to the best of their ability—even if they were short of bedroom and kitchen accommodations. And now that the fathers and mothers of the kid have come and taken it away from us—with a small nest egg in its fist—we sincerely give it our blessing, and wish it good luck for its future development. We had our doubts and fears, but the seemingly impossible has been accomplished, and like the immortal rebel, Washington, we have crossed the Delaware in spite of ice and snow and short skirts and small boats. And, while on the subject, we must not forget to say a word for the local committees. There were about forty members and every one of them worked like a demon for months in advance. They had an uphill fight, but in the face of almost insufferable difficulties they pulled victory out of what seemed to many almost certain defeat.

When the kid comes back to us—say 10 or 15 years from now—we will have a real convention hall in the center of the city and will be prepared to welcome him like a Roman Emperor, with no doubts or fears or apologies, but with frills and confidence. Vale! G. C. W.

Providence, R. I.—The Burke Rose Company of this city has changed its name to the Hillsgrove Racing Association and has acquired the Hillsgrove Race track 10 miles from this city where it proposes to hold horse and other races and all kinds of outdoor sports.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Despite the favorable weather which has prevailed during the past week market conditions have not changed since last week, or if any change has been recorded it has been unfavorable. Carnations are numerous and sluggish. Roses are a trifle stronger and taken altogether are doing the best of anything. Violets are shortening up, singles being the only variety to be had. Lilies, Easter and Callas, are both going slowly; with the market flooded. Sweet peas are doing nicely—in fact as well as roses—but as the weather conditions have been rather unfavorable for them there are not many to be obtained. Taken as a whole the demand has decreased during the week and with the supply plentiful a surfeit has resulted.

The Chicago market is in a very fair condition, with plenty of stock and not an excess. As Easter approaches, the tendency is not to hurry the crop and so far the cool weather has been helpful to that end. Roses are coming freely and there is a large supply of medium grade stock which is always most in demand. Prices are not high, but most of the stock is moved at satisfactory figures. Carnations are a close second in respect to quantity and with these, too, large numbers are sold at special prices. A good shipping trade relieves the market of a great quantity of stock each day and local trade is also able to take care of a large amount. Bulbous stock is decidedly thinning out and the chances are there will be little left for Easter week. Lily of the valley is scarce. Lilies are very plentiful and there is the usual supply of miscellaneous stock, which includes calendulas, pansies, snap-dragon, etc.

The market is well supplied in all seasonable lines of flowers and prices are very reasonable. Roses are in good supply and carnations are plentiful. Easter lilies are in a better supply than they were and are selling well. Callas have a fair call. Sweet peas meet with a good demand but the supply is so overly large that only low prices are realized. Bulbous stock has a fair market. Lily of the valley are fairly plentiful but meet with a poor demand. Smilax is a little scarce.

The market is very quiet, as is always the case during the Flower Show week. There is very little doing by retailers and wholesale places are badly overcrowded. Roses and carnations are over abundant and prices have receded twenty-five per cent. since last week. Bulbous flowers are not so cumbersome as they were, lilies have increased in quantity and improved in quality, but there are far too many snapdragons.

We had two poor days here in the middle of the week, but by the windup there was a vast improvement and there was a fairly good cleanup, especially on carnations and the better grades of roses. There is an oversupply of sweet peas and daffodils and other stock of that kind. The new week has started in with good demand; but everything is in large supply and even a brisk trade makes but slight impression on the heavy receipts.

PITTSBURGH Business is extremely quiet, having finally settled down to a regular Lenten routine. There are plenty of flowers of all varieties, and far too many of some. Lilies, which have been particularly scarce all winter, are now coming in such quantities that it is impossible to dispose of the majority. Long-stemmed roses are rather more plentiful than the short-stemmed ones. Glaudioli, which have been coming in from the south for the past fortnight, are in inferior condition.

PROVIDENCE Florists in this city are in a quandary as to what will be the outcome of the Easter trade this season. The fact that Easter comes so late this year and the peculiar atmospheric conditions as between indoor and outdoor stock present an unusual state of affairs. Lilies, carnations and roses are plentiful. The season on this stock is about two weeks ahead of former years.

The wholesale market ST. LOUIS has been crowded all the past week. All varieties seem to be on crop at present. The damp rainy weather has had a bad effect on the retail business all over the city and the wholesalers experienced great difficulty in disposing of their daily consignments and a great deal of it had to be dumped. Prices are cheap and only the very best quality sells, the greatest glut being in roses, carnations and sweet peas.

Stock of all kinds WASHINGTON is arriving in larger quantities with the possible exception of American Beauty roses, orchids and gardenias, and there are enough of these to go around. Despite the fact that we are in the midst of the Lenten season, business has been good. The price on American Beauty roses holds well up. Gardenias are still bringing $3 per dozen and cattleyas sell at 50 and 60 cents each. Sweet peas are overplentiful and a great percentage of the incoming stock goes to the pedlars. Carnations are also almost without price. A few good ones bring $4 per hundred but the average is far below that figure. Easter lilies are in fair supply. Southern daffodils fill the market but meet with a fair demand.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY

Address of President S. S. Pennock at Annual Meeting in Philadelphia, March 27, 1916.

Members of the American Rose Society.

Another year has rolled by and we meet again in Annual session, this time under most favorable conditions, holding our show and meetings in conjunction with the Fourth National Flower Show, giving the American Rose Society an impetus and uplift that will be far reaching, making for the future of the Society.

This show, I feel sure everyone will agree with me, is not only the largest and most beautiful, but the best and most complete ever held in this country.

I am going to say to you, and not boastfully either, that the American Rose Society is taking no small part in making this show the success it is, for you will, I know, after viewing the plants, cut flowers, rose gardens and other exhibits, feel it is not only an honor but a privilege to be a member.

These shows, whether a national flower show, an annual rose show, or an amateur show in June of outdoor roses, mean more to the future of the rose than any other medium the Rose Society can foster and encourage. A show like this creates a love for flowers; flowers from the flower store in winter, flowers from the garden in the summer, flowers for every flower lover for every day in the year and that is what we want to encourage.

For some years the Society has gone along mostly on commercial lines and as such it has appealed to the commercial man more than to the amateur. The rose industry of this country is a large industry and must not be lost sight of—at the same time, the amateur is another phase that cannot be lost sight of and the amateur rosarian is becoming more and more of a factor each year. Not only is his work a benefit and an inspiration to the commercial man, but it is popularizing the rose as no other means can or will and the amateur, I feel, is the one we must look mostly to in increasing our membership and bringing the society up to a standard and more on a level with the National Rose Society of England, which has a membership of over 6000, and is a flourishing society.

I want to make a strong appeal for the amateur, believing a large amateur membership is the only way we can bring the society to that state of efficiency which every member, whether active or associate, wishes it to attain.

A month ago I had a visit from Dr. Robt. Huey about this very amateur business, and, by the way, Dr. Huey ceased being a member of this Society on account of its offering the amateur so little, but glad to say he is again with us. He brought with him a letter from W. E. Davis, a rose enthusiast of New Haven, with a very strong appeal for the amateur in our Society, asking that this matter be taken up in a vigorous manner at our annual meeting.

We have with us today a number of members who we will be glad to hear from later, members who are recognized authorities on roses. I think with the assistance and the material we have among our members there is no doubt we can map out a campaign that will give such value to every member that we will have no trouble in securing new members and let us hope this time next year we will have a membership of more than a thousand.

Publicity.

Along the lines of publicity we are doing all the society at this time can do financially, and believe for what money we are spending we are getting splendid results. An increased membership and a better treasury balance will enable us to offer our members more in the way of literature and general rose information, giving them such value that they will feel an increase in associate membership dues in the next few years will be thoroughly justified, so let every member, whether active or associate, strive to help our publicity campaign, to increase the membership, and give us a society worth while.

I note with pleasure that we are having more societies affiliating with us each year. I believe it is only a matter of time when a great many of these affiliated members will not feel satisfied to be simply affiliated members but will want to be something more, either an associate or active member. Should not the secretary of each affiliated society have a voice in the Rose Society the same as an active member? I make this as a recommendation. These affiliated members will mean new friends who will join with the old in making this society a tower of strength, and make it truly national in scope and character as well as in name.

Another point in publicity; we believe our friends, the rose catalog men, could be instrumental in bringing in new members in large numbers, by making mention of the Rose Society in their catalog, setting forth its aims and purposes—points that would appeal to the amateur.

Rose Annual.

This year's Rose Annual, which has been so ably edited by J. Horace McFarland, is not only a credit to the society, but as well a treatise on roses invaluable to every member, both the commercial and amateur rosarian, and will, we are sure, make for new members wherever it goes, and add new life to our society.

In circulating the Annual, it will only go with a membership, either life, active, associate or affiliated. We feel the Annual too valuable a book to be sold just as an edition, and it should be well worth the price of membership in the society. In the annual each year the aim will be to give to our members literature that will be an inspiration and a real help to them, articles from the pens of recognized authorities, making it a book to be treasured and kept as a rose library.

Test Gardens.

The American Rose Society, in establishing test gardens in various parts of the United States, is working out a feature that will become a most valuable and far reaching asset to rose growing. These test gardens are now firmly established in Washington, in Hartford, at Cornell University (Ithaca, N. Y.) and in Minneapolis.

A committee has been appointed to look after and take charge of each garden. The plan in these test gardens is to have at least five plants of a kind in the case of teas, and two of a kind in the case of climbers, of every known variety that can be obtained not only from this country but from foreign parts as well. Accurate records are to be kept as to how they flourish, the climatic conditions, the amount of bloom, and whatever statistics as to temperature, soil, etc., that may be deemed necessary by the committees in charge.

Any one contemplating the growing of a certain variety—for instance, in the same climate as Washington—might refer to the appropriate test garden reports and see how that variety has done, whether it was hardy, whether it was able to stand the hot summer, and so on. These records, as summarized each year in the Annual, will become invaluable.

These test gardens as they will be established from time to time in the various cities of the United States and Canada will make one of the many interesting features fostered by the Rose Society.

Scale for Judging Outdoor Roses.

The official scale of points for judging outdoor roses as adopted by the Rose Society some years ago, has been thought by some of our rose enthusiasts to be insufficient and not covering the ground completely. Dr. Huey, Jesse A. Currey and Geo. C. Thomas, Jr., have had some correspondence on this subject and have made up a scale of points which they consider makes a better scale to judge by. This will later be reported on.

Registration of Roses.

Accurate registration of roses is a very important matter. We can go back only a few years and find incomplete and at times very inaccurate records of roses of American origin. The Department of Agriculture at Washington has under way the compiling of a record of roses of American origin and sports, and, with the registration as kept by the American Rose Society, we believe we will have records better and more accurate than could be gotten together in any other way.

Renaming of Roses.

The renaming of roses, whether of American or foreign origin, is to my mind a pernicious habit, and one that the American Rose Society is not at all in accord with, believing that it does more harm to the rose than good, and with this aim in view the society at one of its executive committee meetings appointed Robt. Simpson, H. O. May and Robt. Pyle, who will make a report at this meeting, and I sincerely hope that you will adopt their report, believing that it will make for the good of the society and for the good of everyone who wants to do business on honorable and straight lines.

Plant Pathology.

It has occurred to a number of those interested in roses, particularly those interested in the Society's future, that we should have a department of plant pathology, where information could be gotten by the members who are in trouble with diseases of any nature or any character, whether it be indoor or outdoor grown, and advice as to how to handle this disease, and how to avoid a recurrence. A great many rose lovers, particularly the commercial men, know how to cure certain diseases but they do not always know the fundamental principles, or what causes these diseases; if they did know they could probably handle them in much better shape. How many of the amateurs would welcome a suggestion of how to prevent their roses from mildewing or other diseases. They generally know what to do after they are diseased, but a very much better way would be to prevent the disease in the first place.

What we would like to do would be to establish a fund to take care of such a department and do it on a basis so that it would be profitable to every rose grower in the United States and Canada, and I feel that every rose grower, if for nothing else, should be a member of the Rose Society to help a department of this nature, feeling that they would get back in returns far more than they ever invested.

There is not a grower in this country but who would give money, and liberally, if he could prevent black spot, mildew, or any of the many other diseases which rose plants are subject to, and if we had this department on a solid footing we believe it would be only a matter of time when experiments could be made that would eliminate most of the diseases, possibly not eliminate them but remedy them to a great extent. So the department, no matter what it would cost, instead of being an expense, would be a saving to the rose business as a whole.

This work could be taken up with any of our agricultural State colleges, or preferably by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and carried on in a businesslike manner. This would be much the better plan to pursue, as it would then be national in its scope, and not confined to any one state.

At the annual meeting last year a committee was appointed to look into the grading of roses, and the naming of those grades. The committee appointed by President Pierson was S. S. Pennock, P. Welch and Frank Traendly. H. O. May has been added to that committee, and he will make the report of its recommendation, and I trust same will be adopted by the society.

In conclusion I want to add a word of praise for our secretary who has labored all these years unselfishly and untiringly with the thought always of what was best for the society. He has spent time and money for the society wherever and whenever needed, and has been one of its mainstays, taking hold of the secretaryship when no one wanted the job, and when the society was almost down and out. To him we owe, I believe, more than to any other one person, the bringing of the society where it is today. All this work has been for love as there has been no remuneration whatever in it for him.

Let us hope that our society can be put on a financial basis, that will allow us to pay our secretary a salary in the future and that every member will work for a larger and better society is the wish of your president.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The subject for the April meeting, Tuesday night, April 5, was, "A symposium on the newer roses; what they think of those they have tested during the past few seasons," assigned to Stephen Mortensen, Edward Towill and Martin Samtman. The three speakers made very interesting addresses. Donations of twelve blooms each of all the standard and new varieties available were made by Messrs. Mortensen, Towill, Doemling, Samtman, Casper Pennock and Leonard. Robert Scott & Son exhibited the new red Dickinson rose which will be sent out next year, magnificent in every way and unique in color.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held Monday, May 10th, at Hotel Gibson.

Because of the success of the fall flower show last year an effort is being made to arrange one for the spring in Collingswood, N. J.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Annual Report for the Year 1915 of The Chrysanthemum Society of America has been distributed by Secretary Johnson. It includes a full account of the proceedings of the fourteenth annual meeting, held at Cleveland, Nov. 10-14, 1915, also a very useful list of the varieties, foreign and domestic, disseminated during the year and a review of the work of the examining committees.

Bulletin of the American Dahlia Society—Published for the Society by J. Harrison Dick, Brooklyn, N. Y. Vol. 1 No. 2. A regularly appearing bulletin may be made a strong asset for any society and the document here noted is a good example of how it may be done. There can be no question about the interest such a publication will create among the dahlia fanciers and enthusiasts and its influence for the upbuilding of the Dahlia Society. There are eight pages of pertinent matter including a complete list of the members of the society.

Bulletin of The New York Botanical Garden, Vol. 9, No. 33, has been issued under date of March 20, 1916. It is a very complete document, giving the reports in full of the various officials for the year 1915. In the report by George V. Nash, head gardener, we learn that the collections in the herbaceous grounds are rapidly growing and now embrace no less than 3,095 species and varieties. In the conservatories the collections of tender plants number about 9,240 species and varieties. Large additions have been made during the year in the pinetum, deciduous arboretum, and fruticetum. Over 31,000 bulbs were planted in the decorative beds.

Nebraska Horticulture, Vol. 6, No. 1, for March, 1916, is a volume of 276 pages, filled with good practical matter for the advancement of horticultural knowledge and development of gardening taste in that big state. J. R. Duncan, secretary of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society is editor of this volume which is published monthly at the State Capitol Building, in Lincoln. We note with pleasure that differing from the tactics of most of the western state societies the Nebraska society devotes its energies to all phases of horticulture—orcharding, small fruits, market gardening, floriculture, home gardens, forest planting, etc. Nebraska is to be congratulated on having an organization so broad gauge in its activities and in the years to come the horticultural prosperity of the state will surely bear testimony to the wisdom, foresight and liberality of the pioneers.

How to Grow Roses. Published by the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove,

Pa. Twelfth edition revised and enlarged. Here is a book which will delight the heart of any rosarian. Seldom do we find so much "meat" compressed in a 122-page book as in this comprehensive little volume. Every phase in the literature, science, culture and general knowledge of the Queen of flowers is covered in a concise straightforward manner. For the beginner in the growing of roses we should unhesitatingly recommend this work as the one he should first procure for it answers about every question and problem that will confront him and by the time he has fully learned and put into practice the information and advice found in it he will be the possessor of a rose garden of which he may be proud.

In perusing its pages we find one item alone on which we would raise a question. In the list of Wichuraiana hybrids the variety Lady Gay is classed as synonymous with Dorothy Perkins. Well authenticated history as to the origin of these varieties and generally recognized differences in color of bloom and character of flower truss would seem to call for the author's basis for his conclusion.

There are many beautiful illustrations of which sixteen are full page size in colors. The price of the book is $1.00. It may be ordered direct or through HORTICULTURE.

The Cherries of Japan, by Ernest Henry Wilson. This book is Publication No. 7 of the Arnold Arboretum, issued March 30, 1916. One of the objects of the Arnold Arboretum expedition to Japan in 1914 was an investigation of the Japanese cherries, a class of plants on which great confusion had hitherto existed. These cherries are of much garden importance and the disorder in their nomenclature has really cheated our gardens of much desirable material. This work by Mr. Wilson, the outcome of his journey to Japan, while technical in character will consequently prove of much value to American nurserymen and the experiment stations as showing what we have not yet got in ornamental flowering cherries and establishing a reliable nomenclature for what we already have under various names. It should awaken a greater public interest in these beautiful trees and in due time a lively demand for them. The admiration called forth by Prunus subhirtella var. pendula, of which there are now some notable specimens in the vicinity of Boston, when in bloom in early spring, is a foretaste of the coming popularity of the many other lovely species and forms which have been the glory of Japan's springtime, as soon as they become better known in this country. The publication now under review is really Mr. Wilson's magnum opus up to this time and it will have a permanent place in our botanical literature. There are eight full-page pictures of cherry trees in bloom.

This is a list of great value to the planter or dealer who wants material of assured hardiness and sturdy vigor. We are especially impressed with the illustrations in this very attractive book. They are all from photographs taken on the premises and are fine examples of photography and engraving. The cover is unique, bearing on the front page a reproduction of a Japanese painting of a pure white Iris laevigata on a soft blue ground.

Repeating About Repeaters

CLOSE to fifty percent of our business last year, was repeat orders. Orders from growers who were satisfied with our houses and our way of doing business.

Everybody knows that the real test of a firm, is the repeat orders it gets.

Take our Chicago office for example. Right off the reel, there comes to my mind three rather interesting repeats.

DAVIS BROS.

THERE'S the Davis Brothers. We have had no less than 10 repeat orders from them, and recently three more came along. Two houses, 76 feet wide and 600 feet long, for the J. W. Davis corporation at Terre Haute, Indiana; one 76 feet by 600 feet for the J. W. Davis corporation at Davenport, Iowa, and one greenhouse 41 feet 9 inches by 309 feet for the Davis Floral Co. at Bettendorf, Iowa.

Thirteen repeat orders never come from dissatisfied customers. It's a pretty well understood fact that there are no more consistent investigators, careful planners or keener buyers than those Davis Brothers. Our relations with them have throughout continued to be most cordial.

JOSEPH HILL

TWELVE or fifteen years ago we sold a 40-foot iron frame house to E. G. Hill of Richmond, Indiana. It was among the first iron framers in the West.

Since then, we never sold him another house. In the meantime, he has been doing some interesting building experimenting, which has resulted in his son, "J. H.," coming back to "E. G.'s" conclusions of so many years ago—that Lord & Burnham Co. build the best house. His order is for an iron frame house, 60 feet 7 inches wide and 400 feet long, and one 26 feet wide and 212 feet long. The rafters will be spaced 12 feet 6 inches apart for 60 feet 7 inches wide house and 8 feet 4 inches apart for 26-foot house.

ALOIS FREY

WHEN Mr. Alois Frey of Crown Point, Indiana, decided to start business on his own account, he unfortunately made the same mistake as a great many other people have done, by trying to cover as much ground space with his new greenhouses as he possibly could for the least outlay. The consequence was that he erected wooden greenhouses which proved to be very unsatisfactory and in the long run far from economical.

In December, 1913, he placed an order with us for an iron frame greenhouse, 40 feet wide by 200 feet long. In January, 1916, he placed a repeat order for a greenhouse 60 feet 7 inches wide by 200 feet long.

So much for recent repeats in the Chicago territory; and not a word of mention about those received by our New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Rochester, Toronto or Montreal offices. But of that at another time.

For many years one of our most important specialties, our stock this season is again in prime condition, more extensive than ever, with a complete assortment of both standard varieties and novelties.

Roses, Two Year Old Plants for Outdoor Planting

Our Roses are all field grown plants which were dug in the fall, and which during the winter months were potted into 5 and 6 inch pots, they are stored in cold houses and frames, being retarded as much as possible, and are just the sort of stock that will please your retail customers. We are particularly strong on Hybrid Teas but carry also nearly all other types.

Aquatic Plants

Eight acres of Ponds are devoted to Hardy Nymphaeas and Nelumbiums alone, a large assortment of Tropical Nymphaeas, Victoria Regia, etc., as well as sub-aquatic plants for marginal planting. If interested in these, send for our book "Dreer's Water Lilies," it is not only descriptive, but gives full cultural directions.

Hardy Shrubs and Vines

A full assortment including Hardy Azaleas, Rhododendrons, New Ruddleias, Daphne Cneorum, Hydrangea Paniculata and Arborescens, Japanese Maples, Altheas, Deutzias, Philadelphus, Viburnums, Weigelas, Boxwoods, Ampelopsis, Clematis, Wisterias, etc.

Decorative Plants

Our strong specials, Palms and Ferns, also a full line of Bay Trees, Crotons, Dracaenas, Ficus, Pandanus, etc.

Bulbs and Roots

Amaryllis, Begonias, Caladiums, Dahlias, Cannas, Lilies, Tigridias, Gladiolus, Tuberoses, etc.

All of the above and many others are fully described in our current Wholesale List, January to June, which will be mailed upon request to anyone in the trade.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Asparagus plumosus

When an abundance of new growth starts up it will be desirable to give the surface a sprinkling of bone meal and wood ashes, and then a mulch of cow manure and soil in equal parts put on an inch or two deep. When they have made a fairly good growth they should be given liquid manure once or twice a week during the summer, which helps to keep the soil from becoming exhausted. Bench-growing Asparagus plumosus that has been pretty well cut down should be kept on the dry side, by diminishing the quantity of water somewhat but not to dry the soil clear through. This will allow the plants to make a fresh start and gain strength by giving them a partial rest of three or four weeks. Damp down two or three times a day and on all suitable occasions ventilate freely. Keep them strung up and go over them often and wind the new growth around the strings.

Callas

Callas will need to be fumigated once a week from this out as flies and thrips will now increase very fast. The one thing to be borne in mind is to ventilate whenever possible. Keep the temperature up to at least 60 degrees at night. Give plenty of water at the roots and keep up a vigorous syringing every day to keep the plants clean of thrips and red spider. Callas should now be generously fed not only with liquid manure, but good top dressing of a rich mulch on all those grown in benches.

Cocos Weddelliana

The one imperative thing is, in giving ventilation, to avoid all cold draughts from striking these palms. The temperature of the house should run from 65 to 70 degrees at night, and in the day-time it can run up to 78 or 80. These plants require plenty of atmospheric moisture. Where such accommodation is possible they should have at least a bench for their exclusive occupancy and still better a house for themselves. When watering is done without great care the plants will soon be showing yellowish foliage which makes them stand almost stationary for weeks and even if they finally resume a vigorous growth they rarely become a profitable plant. Considerable care will have to be exercised in watering from this out. They like a nice even amount of moisture at the roots.

Ferns

Ferns will now need lots of water at the roots. If they are in small pots they should be plunged in sifted coal ashes which will hold the moisture and prevent their drying out. Large ferns that are pot-bound can be assisted by moderate doses of liquid manure once a week. Shading should now be increased but not too heavy—just enough to prevent burning or taking the coloring out of the foliage. The general run of ferns will do well in about 60 degrees at night. Dampen down two or three times a day, and see that they have plenty of air. Give ventilation with great care so as not to cause cold drafts. Ferns in flats should be kept up near the glass and when they become crowded they should be removed to other flats or potted up.

1917 Ramblers

To have fine Ramblers for next Easter get some one-year-old stock and pot them into 6 or 7-inch pots now. Use fibrous soil three parts, and one part well-decayed cow manure, adding about a 5-inch potful of bone meal to a wheelbarrow load of the mixture. Pot firmly and give them a good watering so that the whole soil will be made moist. They can be headed back quite hard, leaving 6 or 7 good eyes. Give them a bench in the coolest house where they can have plenty of light and ventilation. When they have made enough growth to indicate the strongest canes leave five or six of the best. All the other ones should be rubbed off. When the growth becomes high enough give wire stakes for support. On all good days see that they get a syringing, for if this is neglected red spider will very soon assert itself. Keep them under glass until July, during which time they will want careful attention with regard to watering, syringing, ventilating and fumigation.

Seedlings

To promote healthy growth these will need careful ventilating, watering and spraying, always guarding against any excess. When seedlings show the character leaf they should be transplanted as soon after as possible.

Next Week: Begonia Gloire de Lorraine; Bedding Plants; Dahlias; Memorial Day; Tulips; Orchids; After Easter

Kerria Japonica as a Pot Plant

Kerria japonica is not grown as a pot plant nearly as much as it should be. Soft-wood cuttings rooted June-July and potted three in 5-inch or five in 6-inch pots will make nice plants for flowering the following March-April. After potting they should be kept close in cold frames until established, gradually hardened off and plunged out doors until hard frost, then kept in cold frames or cellar until required for forcing. They may be slowly forced any time after February 1.

Geo. W. Wyatt

Far Hills, N. J.

Mr. Wyatt enclosed a spray of flowers which had been out nearly two weeks. He stated that a 5 in. pot will carry seven or eight like it and several smaller ones. Unlike most deciduous flowering shrubs the leaves open with the flowers which adds greatly to its beauty. The flowers seem a more brilliant yellow than those grown in the open and the effect with the light green foliage, in graceful sprays is simply charming.—Ed.

Competition

The Western Union Telegraph Company's announcement of a new service for the delivery of flowers, candies, etc., at distant points has somewhat the appearance of a menace to the business and growth of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. Just how this competition will work out remains to be seen, but the elimination of the florist at the initial point for such business looks ominous. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery has been worked up by slow and laborious stages and we should be sorry to see it lose out of the ground which its persistent endeavor has won for it. But competition is always ready to jump in, and it is to be hoped that it will be met in any line of activity with a spirit of fair play and courtesy, wherever our toil may be.

THE HORTICULTURE and Easter Sunday
 Joyous and it is our pleasure to extend greetings Easter to the trade and cordial good wishes for a successful business in the goods which count for so much in making the joyous spring festival what it should be. The tardiness of the season this spring seems quite in keeping with the late date of Easter Sunday and, unless an unprecedented spell of high temperature should yet intervene, the many disadvantages usually attendant upon a late Easter will not intrude. Our best wish for the trade, especially those firms who have chosen HORTICULTURE as a medium in which to advertise their goods—is that their product may come in exactly on time, the goods be the best ever, the buyers liberal, the express companies prompt, the weather perfect and, finally, the storage rooms and ice chests empty and the cash box full.

 triumphs of 1916

The two surpassing flower shows just completed—one in Philadelphia and the other in New York—have tellingly opened our eyes to the possibilities in such enterprises and added some very useful experience for the benefit of those who may undertake such in the future, in those cities or elsewhere.
 We are yet young in the business of show management.
 The public press on faster than our ability to keep pace with them. Suitable halls for these vast displays are few and far between. Schedules are puzzling and definitions and requirements far from clear for intelligent judging of exhibits. But it is not our purpose to try to point out here what may have appeared to us or to others as shortcomings to be remedied. For the present it is glory enough that the old perplexing problem of how to make a show pay seems to have been effectually solved and the solving appears to have been accomplished on the lines which HORTICULTURE has for many years been insisting upon as the only way. It has now been demonstrated that a flower show intelligently conducted with a view to securing popular interest and support is just as safe a proposition financially as any horse show, auto show or other enterprise of like character. When Philadelphia, heavily handicapped in many respects, was able to make a record of 102,000 paid admissions—more than the combined attendance at the successful New York and Cleveland shows of last year—the stupendous possibilities in the way of horticultural entertainment and education begin to dawn upon us. The full returns from New York are not yet in but we believe that another surprise is in store when the returns are all in and it is acknowledged that in the dignity and art of floral and sylvan arrangement the New York exhibition has far outclassed anything heretofore done in this country. That all this could be attained in a period of less than ten years and expose no weak spots or openings for amendment and elaboration is not to be expected and we can confidently look for still greater triumphs than those over which we now rejoice.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Packing Beauties

In packing long stemmed Beauties be careful to put paper between the layers of specials as they are packed in the boxes. In using wooden boxes, one hundred to a box, and with the standard paper boxes, seventy-five to a box, twenty-five to a layer with paper between the layers is the way we have always packed them. The paper should never be omitted, for if no paper is put in the thorns are bound to puncture the leaves badly, thus making the roses less valuable. As soon as the warmer weather sets in (we had a snow storm on the 8th and 9th, snow still on the ground) ice will have to be put into the boxes, and surely no place depending on a home supply will be short of natural ice this coming summer. In icing use wooden boxes; crush the ice to pieces about the size of walnuts and scatter them among the stems of the roses at the foot of the boxes. Care should be taken not to have the ice come in contact with the buds, as they would be apt to spot badly. Use plenty of paper lining as this will help to keep the roses cool and they will arrive in a much better condition. Do not lay the buds too close to the end of the box and be sure to put in a tissue paper cushion between their heads and the end of the box. It is also well to tie them fast by putting a rope around the bottom of the box on the outside and running it through the sides, and tying the ends together over the stems of the specials. This will keep them from sliding around and getting broken and bruised. This same thing can be done in packing the long grades of the Tea roses, for they break even easier than the Beauties and they certainly show the bruises more. Avoid lining the boxes with waxed paper, for this makes ideal sliding grounds and as soon as the box is moved the roses slide at once. With paper going up, it is almost as well to use only newspaper in the boxes, putting only a sheet of manilla paper around the heads.

Watering Potted Stock

It will be necessary to watch the potted plants very closely for they will dry out very quickly on the bright sunny days when the ventilators are up and the air in the house quite dry. The plants in the edge rows will dry out first and they may have to be watered even though no water is given to the rest. When the whole batch is to be watered water the edge rows first and then water all the plants, so that the front rows will get two waterings. This will make them about even, for the soil in the first few rows of pots being drier than the rest, will shed the water more, and it will run right through without saturating the soil thoroughly. In watering use a rose nozzle and not very much pressure. Beginning with the first rows water these all the way across the bench and come back with the next two. Do not skip all over the bench as it is impossible to water evenly in this way. To keep the plants watered evenly is a great item in successful propagation, so it is necessary to be very careful. Careful potting will help a great deal for if the pots are all filled up to the same point the remaining space will be the same, and if these spaces are filled evenly with water there should not be much difference in the moisture in the different pots. Mixed pots should never be used for potting roses, as some of them are hard, some soft, some porous and others not, and the result will be that the plants will never be even.

Syringing Young Beauties

Great care will have to be taken in syringing young Beauties, especially those which have been potted into fours, and have grown quite tall. If this work is done in a haphazard fashion, many of the plants will be knocked loose in the pots and will lay down, after which it will be impossible to keep them free from spider. They will also grow weak and spindly, thus rendering them useless for growing on. By careful syringing, using a steady spray with slow side to side motion, no harm will be done and the plants can be kept free from insects. If there are any that are too tall for the pots they should be tied to a hyacinth stake or something similar to help hold them in place. All syringing should be done as early in the morning as possible so that the plants will have every chance to dry off before night. It is very easy to get a dose of spot into potted Beauties, and it is very hard afterwards to get rid of it. To protect against this, and to insure stronger growth, space the plants if at all possible, sinking the pots about half into the ashes to keep them from drying out too fast and from falling down when syringing. This method will take up a great deal of space but it will pay in the long run, as plants thus grown will be of much better quality and have far more vitality than if crowded together any old way. It will be necessary to syringe four-inch stock from both sides and every time there is a chance for the young plants should be kept clean at all costs.

Watering Asparagus and Smilax

These two greens will take a lot of water, especially if they are growing at all well. Unlike roses, they enjoy a warm moist atmosphere and to give them this it will be necessary to dampen down the walks in the cross houses three or four times a day in addition to the watering. They will take water about every other day if there is nothing wrong with the drainage, and if there is it will be as well to water them anyhow from now on, thus insuring a good supply of fresh water for the plants at all times. Plenty of feed can be applied either in the form of liquid manure, mulch or sheep manure, tankage, bone, almost anything that has plenty of food in it. A little nitrate of soda sprinkled over the benches when the tops of the plants are dry will help a good deal, but too much should not be put on at one time. The plants should not be dry at the root, but their tops or foliage must be dry or the fine particles of soda will stick to them and burn them badly. Watch out for spider on the plants from now on, for if it should get into them it will nearly ruin either smilax or asparagus, as it is difficult to clean them out once they gain a foothold. Fumigate regularly too, for both asparagus and smilax are often used in decoration of dinner tables and it is no credit to the flower trade to have insects crawl out on the table from the greens.

Keep the Bench Fronts Mulched

The mulch applied to the benches will dissolve very rapidly along the front and unless more is applied the plants will suffer from exposure. We apply three coats of mulch to the bench fronts where the rest get only one. At times some of the front benches, or the top benches in the old three-quarter span houses, need the mulch much sooner than the rest of the house. In that case apply it. At this time of the year it will not matter so much. It is only in the fall that it is best to keep the whole house even if it is possible. Feed the plants all they will take being only careful not to use material containing too much nitrogen, as this would make the growth soft, and likely cause a dose of mildew.

INTERNATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

Grand Central Palace, New York

Following up our remarks last week on the character and scope of this exhibition which continued until Wednesday night of the present week we are glad to be able to state that every promise held out in the opening day, was more than fulfilled and those who predicted a record breaking outcome have the pleasure of knowing that their judgment has been fully ratified in the results and in the endorsement of every visitor. Many who attended the previous show at Philadelphia and felt that their time would not justify a longer absence from business express great regret that they did not wait to see this remarkable exhibition which touched the highest pinnacle yet reached in artistic completeness. But we believe it to be only a stepping stone to even better things and greater triumphs, not necessarily in New York but wherever the ambition, the will and the ability are present. Progress is the order of the day and New York has done her part nobly and effectually.

The big sensation of Friday afternoon was the visit to the show by ex-president Roosevelt. He was received with tumultuous acclamation by a dense throng outside and inside of the hall. Hands were stretched out to him on all sides. The escort and a hard task to press back the crowd, and the party fought its way upstairs. The officers of the show, F. R. Pierson, chairman; John Young, secretary; Frederic R. Newbold, treasurer; R. G. Holloman, and G. E. M. Stumpp, received Colonel Roosevelt at the door, and Mr. Stumpp presented him with a red, white and blue boutonniere. Commissioner Woods asked the Colonel on the way up to the Tea Garden, how it seemed to be so popular. "I might say, with the Duke of Wellington: 'How they will yell when I am hanged,'" returned Mr. Roosevelt.

The Colonel was much impressed with the exhibition, said it was better than last year and was allowed to walk over the gravel walks of F. R. Pierson's rose garden, which had taken the group status prize, a silver trophy for the best exhibit in the show. The trophy was standing in the centre of the garden and Colonel Roosevelt admired it and the flowers. "This garden would look fine at Oyster Bay," he said.

The class for dinner table decoration by New York hotels brought out but three competitors—the Manhattan, Vanderbilt and Billmore—but it was easily a leading attraction of the show on Monday, the staging day. The Manhattan won the prize worthily with a piece of work of outstanding merit. It was one of the daintiest and most artistic table decorations we have ever seen. The slender central vase was filled with acacia sprays, purple and lavender iris and purple pansies, on a base of Farleyense fern fronds. There were smaller vases arranged with yellow primroses, pansies and acacia and the corsage bouquets were of pansies yellow and purple alternating, with Farleyense fern. The boutonnières were all of white pansies. The table ware was of crystal and gold. There was no second prize but the judges voted a silver medal to the Vanderbilt table.

The orchid section was a potent attraction for the public. Julius Roehrs' big group covering 200 sq. ft., which won the first prize, was a stunner, containing a large variety of species artistically arranged. Arthur N. Cooley's entry, winning 1st in the private gardeners' class, was a most elegant group, with long arching sprays of phalaenopsis, odontoglossum and odontioda used with graceful effect. There were many sensational novelties shown by Clement Moore, gard. John P. Mossman, Hackensack, N. J. Another very rich display was staged by George Schlegel, gard. Stephen E. Milosy, his exhibit receiving honorable mention. Lager & Hurrell, as usual, were represented by a first-prize commercial group.

The greater part of the main floor was devoted to the decorative plant groups and gardens, the trade booths being arranged on the side aisles. The smaller plants, such as primulas, cyclamens, tulips, daffodils, schizanthus, etc., as well as the cut flower groups, tables, etc., were all located on the mezzanine floor, where there was an abundance of light. Cinerarias, pansies, daisies and some other material overflowed to the third floor where many visitors failed to find them.

Saturday, April 8, was sweet pea day and the displays were grand. William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., was, as usual, the largest exhibitor and the quality of all the exhibits was very fine. The sweet pea table decorations by private growers were admirable. A more tasteful arrangement than that by Adolph Lewisohn, gard. J. Canning would be hard to imagine.

Gretna Kluis, for which a certificate of merit was awarded, is a polyantha rose of much beauty. It is in effect a "baby" form of Tausendschoen, the flowers being very similar in size, color and gradation of tints according to length of time the flowers have been open.

The cut roses staged on Thursday made a fine showing. Killarney Queen, Hadley, Ulrich Brunner, American Beauty, Ophelia and Sunburst leading in sensational interest. There were no outstanding novelties. The big rose displays by A. N. Pierson, Inc., and F. R. Pierson, were magnificent.

One of the most notable plants in the show was a Medinella magnifica, which was the central feature of Julius Roehrs' 1st prize group of flowering and foliage, stove and greenhouse plants, covering 300 square feet. The Medinella was a superbly bloomed specimen and, indeed, the entire group was far above the ordinary.

The carnations were staged on Friday, April 7, Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y. and A. A. Pembroke, Beverly, Mass., being the most liberal contributors of blooms. The silver medal for new variety not in commerce was won by Cottage Gardens' Cottage Maid.

The German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, was the guest of honor on Saturday afternoon at the Grand Central Palace. The German War Relief Committee shared the receipts of the tea garden with the New York County branch of the American Red Cross.

The Tausendschoen rose has now taken its place as the most useful of all the rambler class for garlanding rustic bowers and fences. Without it the rose gardens would have been robbed of much of their beauty.

The recent progress in hydrangea culture was well evidenced in the wonderful groups of blue, white and pink specimens of the new French varieties staged by Fritz Dressel, Julius Roehrs Co., and others.

The customary dinner to the judges was given on Wednesday evening, April 5, at the Manhattan Hotel. A large number of other invited guests were present and the occasion was one of unusual jubilation.

James Bell, gardener for C. K. G. Billings, was awarded the National Association of Gardeners' medal for the most meritorious exhibit made by a private grower for six plants of schizanthus.

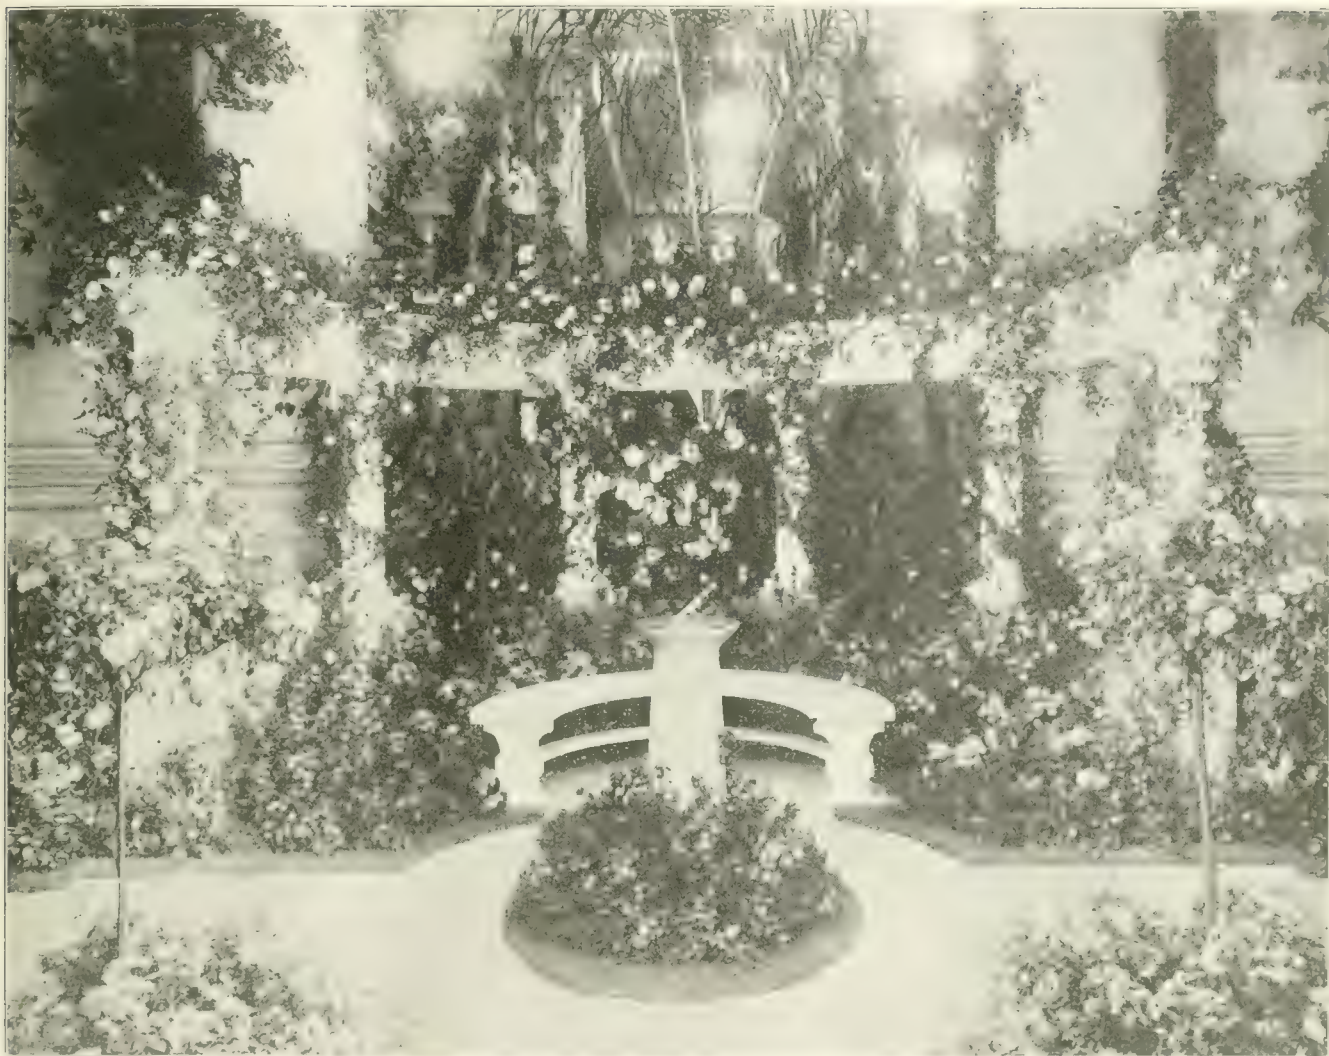

The Department of Parks sent a very large and stately group of plants of all the greenhouse classes. It was skillfully arranged and added greatly to the general effect of that section of the hall.

In our estimation one of the most beautiful plants in the whole exhibition was James Stuart's specimen Genista Andreanum. It was a graceful fountain of gold and bronze.

On Friday morning, April 7, George V. Nash of the New York Botanical Garden delivered a lecture with illustrative slides, on Water Gardens and the Reclamation of a Swamp.

The beautiful narcissus Van Waveren Giant which was so much admired in the New York show is said to be also on the market under the name of Hillegom Giant.

The rich collection of sweet peas which won 1st prize for P. M. Warburg, were the product of Boddington's Reselected Winter Flowering Spencers.

The cyclamens were of the finest quality ever seen in a New York show. As one-year-old plants they would be hard to beat.

The amaryllis groups made a gorgeous color effect and attracted much vociferous admiration from the visitors.

The famous General DeWet tulip was a conspicuous feature of the Thorburn trade exhibit.

The "allied interests" did a lively business in their booths on the mezzanine floor.

We have never seen finer mignonette than that exhibited by August Sauter of Nyack.

EXHIBITION AT LOWELL, MASS.

The second annual flower show under the auspices of the Lowell Board of Trade and Middlesex Women's Club and the florists and nurserymen of Lowell and vicinity, was held at Colonial and Middlesex Halls on April 7 and 8. Admission was free to the public and the attendance was very large. The display was the most brilliantly beautiful spectacle ever presented in Lowell. As compared with the flower show of a year ago, this year's exhibition was larger, more complete, better arranged and far more attractive. The orchestra, screened behind banked palms on the stage, added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Among the florists contributing were Harvey B. Greene, plants and flowers; Backer & Co., Billerica Centre, carna-

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

The growing abuse of the charity of the florists was the principal topic of discussion at the April meeting of this Club. The complaint has been made that an increasing number of people are taking advantage of the florists by baiting one against the other in the effort to secure donations of money and flowers for this or that purpose. The practice has come to be of such magnitude as to form a factor in the overhead expense account. It was suggested that rules be adopted whereby no member shall make or consider any donation or subscription scheme of any kind unless the same shall have the approval of the advertising committee.

Not only are the florists the victims of those who ask donations of flowers, or who even ask them to provide decorations, but they are continually called upon to advertise in mediums of doubtful value, and there is also the third scheme of selling them tickets under which they are parted from their rightful earnings. The rules will be extended to cover these schemes also. As a part of the plan, placards bearing the rules are to be distributed to be hung in conspicuous places in the stores.

There was a considerable talk on malpractice with respect to gardening following remarks by Harry B. Lewis, of the Department of Public Buildings and Grounds, wherein he told of how a thirty-foot Rambler had been so badly mutilated by would-be gardener that it would require fully ten years for it to be returned to its former beauty. He declared that the people of the city should be warned against employing the services of men who do not understand the business.

HOLYOKE AND NORTHAMPTON GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB.

The regular monthly meeting was held April 4th with F. D. Keyes and son, Florence. The topic was Easter Plants, which was handled by Harold Keyes in a comprehensive manner. A good discussion ensued. Messrs. Thurston and Sinclair entertained the less fortunate members with descriptions of the National Flower Show.

Exhibits were made by Keyes & Son, who staged some extra good callas, a pink sport of carnation Enchantress, and Primula obconica gigantea. Butler & Ullman showed Hydrangea Radiant and sweet pea Yarrowa. G. H. Sinclair showed Silver Pink snapdragon in top form. H. E. Downer showed plants of Nemesis strumosa Suttoni, an easily grown annual which should make a useful pot plant for the florist.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The April meeting last Monday evening was the slimmest on record for many a year, only twenty-five members attending. All business except the nomination of new members was shunted over until the May meeting. Three applications were received tions; John S. Haynes' estate, plants and floral decorations; R. P. Christofferson, So. Lowell, roses; H. J. Chandler & Sons, Tewksbury, carnations and other flowers; F. P. Putnam, North Tewksbury, carnations, palms, etc.; Albert Roper estate, North Tewksbury, carnations; Shepards' Garden Carnation Co., carnations; Patten & Co., Tewksbury Centre, carnations, antirrhinums, Godfrey callas, etc.; John T. Gale, Tewksbury Centre, violets, sweet peas, lilies, etc.; H. L. Shedd, So. Lowell, carnations; Morse & Beals, Easter plants and flowers.

Middlesex Hall was devoted to the nursery exhibits. Here were Robin Hall Nursery, So. Chelmsford, J. J. McManmon, Dracut, and others; also Ervin E. Smith Co., Adams Hardware & Paint Co., Thompson Hardware Co. and W. T. S. Bartlett, showing seeds and garden sundries.

Melrose, Mass.—A. M. Tuttle has purchased several acres of land on Water street, to be used for nursery purposes.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Paterson (N. J.) Floral Society at its meeting on April 5 appointed a committee to prepare a schedule for a show in June.

At the meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society on Monday evening at Hotel Gibson, R. Witterstaetter, who presided, gave an interesting talk on the Philadelphia Show.

At the meeting of the Lenox (Mass.) Horticultural Society on Wednesday night, April 12, J. Frampton read an essay on "The early masters of the garden art." This was Carnation Night and some nice exhibits were staged.

The Chicago Florists' Club meeting on Thursday, April 6, was uneventful, the chief interest centering in the raffling of a silver punch bowl, which was one of the prizes purchased by the Greenhouse Construction people for the last flower show, and was not awarded. The lucky winner was A. Benson, Downer's Grove, Ill., formerly orchid collector for Poehlmann Bros. Co., and now with J. H. Kidwell & Co., Peter Kohl, of Morton Grove, and Edw. E. Schmeltekopf, Park Bridge, was elected to membership.

At the meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club on April 4th two blooming plants were shown, one a Clarkia elegans and the other a Schizanthus, each five feet high and a mass of bloom, showing the wonderful possibilities in these plants for greenhouse culture. M. Curran, of Sewickley, the exhibitor, received a first class certificate for the Clarkia.

Jas. Murphy of Sewickley received a certificate of merit for calceolarias and a first-class certificate for a new snapdragon. Cultural certificates were awarded to Neil T. Forsyth for Formosa lily, seven feet high, and Carl Becherer, for a Gloxinia.

As it is near the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Club there was some talk as to the proper way in which to celebrate it. A banquet held in connection with a chrysanthemum show was one of the tentative propositions.

Messrs. Falcouer and Ludwig who had attended the Philadelphia Flower Show gave their impressions, which were very favorable.

H. P. JOSLIN, Sec'y.

COVER ILLUSTRATION

The sweet little lady whose portrait appears on our Easter cover, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Wemple, of Albany, New York. Mr. Wemple has been for many years in charge of the office in the flower store of H. G. Eyres on North Pearl St., Albany. Little Elizabeth loves flowers.

Admiral Aaron Ward has given the use of his garden at Roslyn, N. Y., for June 8 to the American Ambulance Committee for an entertainment in the interest of the American Ambulance Hospital at Neuilly, France. E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, will lecture on Roses. Last year on a similar occasion enough money was made to buy and support an ambulance for the entire year. Mrs. Robert Bacon is chairman of the ambulance committee in this country.

OBITUARY.

Charles W. Ross.

Charles W. Ross, for 25 years previous to 1914 street commissioner of Newton and a former state highway commissioner, died on April 11 at his home in Newton Center, Mass. He celebrated his 67th birthday a little more than a month ago. He was widely known as an authority on roads and highways and in 1914, after 25 years of service, resigned as street commissioner of Newton.

NEWS NOTES.

Rockland, Mass.—W. H. Wyman, of North Abington, has acquired 30 acres of land on Summer street, which will be devoted to nursery use.

Toledo, Ohio—W. C. Knowles of Portchester, N. Y., has purchased the greenhouses formerly owned by S. Peek and will conduct them himself, doing a general florist business.

Beware Turnip Rape Seed.

Two hundred thousand pounds of turnip rape seed, or enough to sow approximately 50,000 acres, have been imported from Argentina and Japan and are being sold as winter rape. The seed specialists of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, therefore, are again cautioning farmers to avoid the purchase and seeding of turnip rape—which is not winter rape and is not suitable for the foliage purposes for which winter rape is grown.

The seeds of turnip rape are smaller and have a more deeply pitted surface than those of winter rape. The young plants are easily distinguished by the difference in habit of growth and the character and color of the leaves. Winter rape produces a definite stem with the leaves occurring along it at intervals. Turnip rape does not produce a definite stem, the leaves all growing in an apparent whorl at the surface of the ground. The leaves of winter rape are thick and succulent, free from hairs, and covered with a greyish bloom. The leaves of turnip rape are thin, hairy and bright green like those of the garden turnip.

Persons purchasing rape seed may submit samples to the Seed Laboratory, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for determination as to whether the seed is that of the turnip rape or winter rape. Samples of both turnip rape and winter rape seed, for comparison, will be sent on application to the Seed Laboratory.

WARNING TO MUSHROOM GROWERS.

As a result of a serious case of mushroom poisoning in a mushroom grower's family recently, the mushroom specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture have issued a warning to commercial and other growers of mushrooms to regard with suspicion any abnormal mushrooms which appear in their beds. It seems that occasionally sporadic forms appear in mushroom beds, persist for a day or two, and then disappear. These are generally manure-inhabiting species and may be observed shortly after the beds have been cased. In the instance cited, however, these fungi appeared in considerable numbers at the time the edible Agaricus campestris should have been ready for the market, and the dealer supposed it was probably a new brown variety and tried it in his own family. As a result, five persons were rendered absolutely helpless and were saved after several hours only through the assistance of a second physician who had had experience with this type of poisoning.

In the opinion of the Department, this case is peculiarly significant and demonstrates that the grower must be able to distinguish Agaricus campestris from any of the wild forms of mushrooms that may appear in the beds. Under the circumstances, the Department strongly urges every grower to make himself thoroughly familiar with the cultivated species. Complete descriptions, with pictures of poisonous and cultivated species, are contained in Department Bulletin 175, "Mushrooms and Other Common Fungi," which can be purchased for 30 cents from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. (The Department of Agriculture has no copies of this bulletin for free distribution.)

WELL PREPARED FOR A RAINY DAY

Protect your BOYS and GIRLS with this Outfit. RAINCOAT-CAP SCHOOLBAG
Sent Parcel Post Prepaid. Price Complete, $4.75 Sixes 4 to 16

No Boy or Girl of School age should be without the protection of this splendid School Outfit, especially when it can be purchased complete for the very low price of $4.75. The Caps and School Bags are made from the same materials as the Coats, and make this Rainy Day Outfit exceptionally attractive. The Black and White Shepard Check trimming on our Girl's Outfit is a very handsome and attractive addition, and makes this Outfit one that both Mother and Daughter will be proud of.

THESE OUTFITS MADE FOR SERVICE AS WELL AS APPEARANCE

The Girl's Outfit is made from a high grade Gros Grain Plaid, a single breasted with a substantial rubber coating, making it light in weight yet wind and rain proof. The Boy's Outfit is made from a strong durable material in the popular Olive shade, thoroughly waterproofed, and reinforced with a serviceable plaid lining. All seams are reinforced, strapped, and cemented, and both the Boy's and Girl's Coats have ventilation eyelets under the arms.

Satisfaction Guaranteed or Money Refunded

We guarantee every Hamilton Watertite Raincoat to be exactly as represented, and if when it is received, it is not entirely satisfactory, it may be returned to us, and we will cheerfully refund the purchase price.

A NEW DISCOVERY IN FABRICS
 A Material from which Wrinkles Disappear Without Pressing
THE HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER

PROTECT YOUR CLOTHING WHILE AUTOMOBILING OR DRIVING

HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTERS are made from a new fabric. The Dusters can be used in the Auto all day, placed upon a hanger at night and all wrinkles will have disappeared in the morning.

This fabric is soft in finish, heavy enough to withstand the hardest usage, yet light in weight and cool.

The fabric is linen color and is exceptionally attractive, and as it has been shrunk, the Coats may be washed when necessary, and will look like new.

The Women's Coat is made with a full skirt, single breasted, patch pockets, and collar that can be buttoned up close to the neck. It is trimmed with very attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

The Men's Coat is made double breasted, side slashed pockets, sleeve tabs, high collar, finished with attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED

We guarantee every HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER to be exactly as represented, and if it is not entirely satisfactory when received, it may be returned to us, and we will cheerfully refund the purchase price.

CHICAGO.

Flowers & Seeds who went into the growing of Russell roses exclusively, last winter, are rejoicing over the award of 1st prize on their vase of 100 at the Philadelphia show.

A. Henderson Co. has his retail seed store in good running order and the place contains about all that is needed in the garden. The wholesale business is about over, but they are still pushing the sale of gladioli, caladiums, etc.

The Alpha Floral Co. has increased the depth of its windows by two feet. This store already had the largest display windows of the "loop" flower stores. A. Cronis, of Johnson & Cronis, purchasers of the interest of the late Geo. Economopolous, says the store is doing a good business for the Lenten season. The new manager, Julius Schnapp, well known to the trade, is getting nicely settled in his work.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner has one of the busiest places in that home of busy people, the Atlas Block. The partnership was formed only this spring. One side of the store contains the cut flowers and this department has been well established for several years. The other side has samples of florists' supplies. The baskets are attractive, including the latest shades to match the flowers. At the end is the office. Visitors will be welcomed at any time and the sight of the pecan nuts and photographs of orchards shown here by Mr. Tonner will well repay a caller.

PITTSBURGH.

August Wilhelm Weber, who has charge of the greenhouse and grounds of Michael L. Benedum, has returned from an eastern business trip.

Mrs. Mary Averill, of Boston, spoke last Friday before the Garden Club at the home of Mrs. Roy A. Hunt, on Japanese Flower Arrangement and Japanese Gardens.

Miss Eliza McKinley, who has been away from Randolph & McClements since the first of the year owing to illness, has resumed her duties as head saleswoman for the firm.

Harry Gibson, manager, and Samuel J. Frompton and Harry Ackerman salesman for the Zieger Company have returned from the New York Flower Show. Harry E. Graves, now in California on account of a nervous breakdown, has recovered sufficiently to resume work and is in the employ of Hortines, Los Angeles.

BUFFALO FLOWER SHOW.

One of the notable events of this season is a Flower and Fashion Show. This is being given in Buffalo by the B. P. O. Elks in conjunction with the florists. The display of carnations, roses, snapdragons, sweet peas, lilies, tulips, daffodils, narcissus, azaleas, rhododendrons, pansies, spirea and hydrangeas are without exception the finest specimens of horticulture ever beheld in this section of the country. The judges, consisting of Henry F. Elbers, of South Park conservatory, George Kayser, of Delaware Park conservatory, and Charles Keitsch, of Humboldt Park, were loud in their praise as they made the following awards:

Sweet peas—100 pink—1st, David Scott Co., 2d, C. J. G. Co., 3d, H. H. Co., N. Y. 4th, 100 white—1st, W. J. Palmer & Son, 2d, C. J. G. Co., 3d, H. H. Co., 4th, W. J. Palmer & Son, 5th, C. J. G. ### BOSTON.

Julius Zinn, Jr., known to his friends as "Brother," has moved with his wife and family to Scituate. He intends to follow the Copper King's example and name his estate Dreamwold II.

Elliott Filson, salesman for Peirce Bros., Waltham, personally confirms the rumor that he is to be married directly after Easter, but is extremely reticent regarding the full particulars.

B. A. Snyder & Co. have had the good fortune to secure the services of Wilbur Osgood, formerly with P. Welch. Mr. Osgood is an old member of the trade and is well known in Boston.

Miss Fannie Taylor is now in the employ of Houghton, Gorney Co., and invites her friends to visit her at any time. Miss Taylor was formerly in business for herself in Melrose but was forced to retire by a severe illness.

A strike of the workmen, largely foreigners, in the nurseries of the American Forestry Company at West Natick caused considerable trouble on Tuesday of this week and a police guard was placed to protect the property.

What was pronounced by all beholders to be the most beautiful specimen Acacia pubescens they had ever seen was sold by the W. W. Edgar Company to D. MacRorie of San Francisco for $300. Mr. MacRorie made the trip from New York to Boston specially to see the plant.

Some unusually long-stemmed irises are to be seen in the market on the bench of W. B. Southworth, Stoughton. One stem when measured proved to be nearly 45 inches and the others were not appreciably shorter. On inquiry, the name of this variety proved to be the old stand by, "King of the Blues."

The Horticultural Club of Boston held its regular meeting at the Parker House on Wednesday evening, April 12. Col. W. W. Castle, W. E. Fischer and E. A. Bause of Cleveland, were guests. The table was beautifully adorned with Primula veris elatior—plants and cut flowers—by William Sim, and a central vase of carnation Doris was contributed by S. J. Goddard.

Roslindale's premier grower, A. Leuthy, gladly puts himself on record with the statement that the older varieties of azaleas are in danger of being supplanted by any of the recently introduced novelties. The Schruy-verianum, Vander Cruyssen and Madame Jean still prove to be the most popular for the early spring trade, for Mr. Leuthy has sold more of these this year than ever before, and he can well be quoted as authority on azaleas. Owing to the late Easter, Mr. Leuthy has given his lilies the minimum of heat, with the result that each blossom is firm and full. He corroborates the statements of Henry Penn and Julius Zinn when he claims that his white azalea—the A. Leuthy—is the prize package in the white line.

Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston to the number of more than one hundred participated in the annual Easter visit to the plant growing establishment of W. W. Edgar at Waverley, on Saturday, April 8. After a pleasant and profitable stroll through the plant houses, gay with hydrangeas, lilies, azaleas and other timely products, a social hour was spent as the guests of Mrs. Edgar, who extended open-hearted hospitality. There was a big surprise for her, however, in the form of a handsome mahogany tea wagon stocked with a hand-painted afternoon tea set, and also a mahogany "mussing" stand. The presentation was made by President Methven on behalf of the visitors and was appreciatively responded to by the hostess. Brief addresses were made by several gentlemen, including Herman Bartsch, to whose skill and industry as manager much of the success of this establishment is due.

PHILADELPHIA.

Commodore John Westcott has just returned from his first spring visit to his farm at Waretown. Habitués of that delectable resort will be pleased to learn that he reports all well—no births, deaths nor marriages to speak of. The derelict, McTavish, is still high and dry on the rocky shore near the club house. Jaunty and Charley Chaplin both alive and on speaking terms. The Ailanthus trees are all killed off by the winter storms, but the Tamarisks are holding their own very well. Spring plowing and seeding is now the order of the day on the farm.

PERSONAL.

Thomas Watson, formerly at Hamilton Farms, Gladstone, N. Y., has taken a position as gardener for A. L. Norris, Lawrence, L. I., N. Y.

Samuel R. Prentiss, owner of "Elm bank," an estate noted for its beautiful grounds has been appointed park commissioner for Bangor, Me.

Gerhard Bleicken, who has occupied a place as superintendent of an estate in Plymouth, Mass., for a number of years has started in business as Expert in Garden Craft and Landscape Work in West Natick, Mass.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON A welcome change has been noticed during the past week in this market.

Without exception salesmen report an increased volume of business and a sharp rise in prices. Carnations are plentiful and strong. All varieties of roses are going well except the very short lengths. The usual spring demand for novelties has assumed gigantic proportions with tulips and jonquils heading the list. Sweet peas are doing well, though they are rather scarce. Easter lilies are in big demand and callas are a close second. A few anemones are on hand, but are not being called for to a very great extent. Iris and gardenias are plentiful and are moving well, but orchids cannot be obtained at any price, and a shortage of the last mentioned blossoms is predicted for Easter.

The tone of the market CHICAGO is weak. Not that there is a glut or that any great number of flowers are thrown away, but these conditions would exist if there were as large an amount of stock coming as usually is cut in April. Prices have been reduced to just meet the supply and demand and the retailer and wholesaler are as near to a state of agreement as is apt to occur. The demand for the newer varieties of roses is marked and the preference shows clearer as all varieties are more plentiful, and selection is not influenced so much by cost. Carnations are not selling as well as roses and the demand for them is not increased in proportion to the dropping of the price. Bulbous stock is scarce. A few good tulips are coming now, but the great bulk of tulips is through for the season. Southern daffodils are not so much in evidence and greenhouse grown ones are nearly gone. A good variety of other stock is to be had. Ferns are now quoted at $3.00 per M. The greater disparity exists in predictions as to the Easter supply. Many growers will be off crop, having had their stock ready for early cutting and are consequently through early. Others will be just in time. That there will be a fair supply and no extremes in prices is probably a safe prediction. There will be plenty of Easter lilies and the prices will cover a wide range according to quality.

Demand is steady CINCINNATI but more stock comes in than is really needed and low prices are the result. Shipping business, particularly in greens and supplies, is good. The outlook for Easter is very good. Lilies, roses, carnations and sweet peas are in a heavy supply. Jonquils, daffodils, Dutch hyacinths, callas and tulips have been enjoying a fairly ready sale. Other offerings include violets, orchids, rubrums, lilies, snapdragon, lilac and calendulas.

The market condition NEW YORK is quiescent with little to suggest any probable change either way until Easter opens up, and when that does occur there is nothing to show what course the situation will take. There is an abundance of everything but no

FLOWERS FOR THE EASTER PARADE

To complete the Easter costume a corsage of flowers gives it just that finish and touch that makes it complete. Any of the following in quantity:

Hudson River Double Violets	$1.00 per 100
Gardenias	$3.00 & 4.00 per doz.
Valley	5.00 & 6.00 per 100
Spencer Sweet Peas	$2.00, 2.50 & 3.00 per 100
Cattleyas	7.50 & 9.00 per doz.
Daisies, White & Yellow	1.50 & 2.00 per 100

Besides these, a splendid lot of other flowers, particularly EASTER LILIES, at $10.00 and $12.50 per 100.

great accumulation unless we may except the sweet peas which seem overabundant on all sides but generally of exceptional quality. Cattleyas are abundant if we include Schroederiae but not so as to the deep colored varieties. Roses have never been offered in better quality or in equal variety of type and color. Lilies are plentiful and many of them inferior in size and substance. In general there is a buoyant feeling prevalent in the flower markets even though customers are none too plenty and none too eager.

There is not much PHILADELPHIA change in business here from our last report. Demand only moderate and supplies of all kinds more than enough. The storm at the end of last week accentuated the unfavorable conditions, as the usual clean-up did not materialize. Roses show up very good, especially Russell, Hadley and Ophelia. Beauty and Killarney are also very good. There is a shortage in cattleyas, especially the darker shades of Trianae and Mossiae. Carnations are still plentiful, although not quite so abundant as they were. Violets very plentiful, especially doubles, with demand rather slow. Prices on sweet peas are ruling low, notwithstanding the splendid quality of most of the stock. Although there is only a sluggish demand for lily of the valley, prices hold firm and seem to have an upward tendency. Easter lilies are quite plentiful and rather more than the market can absorb, which, of course, has a depressing effect on prices. No doubt many growers with crops intended for Easter have got some of their plants in flower too soon, and have thus upset the equilibrium of the market. Southern daffodils very plentiful, but no over supply of other bulbous stock. Spanish iris, in lavender, white and yellow, is one of the newest comers, and meets with popular demand. Smilax scarce.

The Lenten quiet in PITTSBURGH business continues of course. Good stock of all kinds is coming in plentifully. Prices remain the same and promise to do so throughout the Easter season, with the exception of carnations and sweet peas, which will probably advance slightly.

The wholesale flower market is pretty much the same as reported last week—plenty of good stock, low prices and the demand slow. Most in abundance are the sweet peas, roses and carnations. These are selling in 1,000 lots at remarkably low prices. Good roses in assorted varieties go as low as $7.50 per 1,000. Sweet peas at $2 per 1,000. In bulb stock tulips of the Darwin variety bring $5 per 100. Smilax is still scarce.

Spring and winter weather intermingled last week to the detriment of the outdoor stock. It had been thought that summer was at hand, when the city was visited by a snow storm and attendant dropping of the temperature. Pansies, hyacinths, crocuses and other flowers had been appearing in the gardens in profusion. Prices have been dropping with the increase in the supply of flowers. Thousands of carnations have been sold at prices set by the purchaser, and extra fine sweet peas have gone begging. Local violets are about off the market. Hudson River stock is not selling well because of the condition in which it arrives. Lily of the valley is both scarce and poor in quality. Roses are selling fairly well, with white leading. There are plenty of spring flower blossoms at reasonable prices. Gardenias were sold on the streets last week at ten cents each. Callas and lilies are both plentiful.

Cincinnati—Ed. Schumann injured a foot and ankle last week. Henry Schwarz has been on the sick list for several days.

The glass manufacturers of the U. S. are constantly on the alert for a satisfactory substitute for potash, the most important single ingredient in the making of glass. Various chemical properties have been experimented with, and while some degree of success has been attained the tendency to turn yellow after a short time is very marked in all glass made in this fashion. It is of the utmost importance to the florist trade that some suitable material be found as a substitute for the potash that is now so scarce and valuable. A dollar a pound is no small item to be paying out, and the country is looking to its chemists for relief.

WEED KILLER

THE VERY NEWEST AND QUICKEST METHOD OF DESTROYING WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

We manufacture the strongest line of DISINFECTANTS on the market.

During Recess

New York Florists' Club.

The time honored annual dinner, this year remodeled into a dinner dance, or "din dan" in the vernacular, took place on Saturday evening, April 8, in the ball room of the Biltmore Hotel. According to the verdict of all who attended this was the finest and most enjoyable affair in the club's history and Messrs. DeForest and Sheridan, chairman and secretary respectively, with their committee associates, are entitled to display each a big red feather in their caps. The centre of the big hall was reserved for the dancing and the tables were arranged about the sides, eating and dancing going on simultaneously, as it were, and the customary series of after dinner speeches was practically discarded as a feature.

A pleasant episode was the presentation to Ex-president Harry A. Bunyard of a gold watch and chain together with a diamond pin for Mrs. Bunyard, Patrick O'Mara making the presentation speech. Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, and R. G. Halloman, of the International Exhibition Company, spoke briefly in praise of the successful flower show in progress at the Grand Central Palace and the efficiency of the officers, committees and judges. Charles Schenck and Mrs. Schenck were winners of one of the Lord & Burnham silver cups in the "elimination" dance.

USE THIS PURE PLANT FOOD

FOR GARDEN

MAGIC HUMUS is a pure plant food unleached and unburnt. Its analysis proves that it contains potash, phosphoric acid, nitrogen and Compost in available form.

MAGIC HUMUS COMPOST possesses the body and fibre to absorb and retain Nature's moisture after it is put into the ground and spreads its fertilizing elements through the soil.

Months are occupied in the preparation of MAGIC HUMUS. It reaches the garden free from weed-seed and can be agreeably handled.

The garden receiving a liberal application of MAGIC HUMUS COMPOST is permanently enriched with plant food and soil.

A PROMINENT CARNATION GROWER SAYS THIS ABOUT THE STANDARD RECORDING THERMOMETER

Lancaster, Pa.

Standard Thermometer Co.,
Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen:

Please send me 25 record plates like the enclosed sample, and I want to say that the machine, bought a good many years back, is keeping up its good work right along. I think it a very useful adjunct to good plant growing, and it should be in every greenhouse, as reference to it may often tell what is wrong with a batch of plants.

Very truly yours, ALBERT M. HERR.

The actuating element of the Standard Recording Thermometer is of lamina metal which, besides being extremely sensitive to temperature changes, is practically indestructible. Record charts are furnished either daily or weekly, and the whole mechanism is contained in an attractive metal case fitted with lock and key, which insures the record from being tampered with.

The clock movement is of extremely high grade; everything about the instrument is up to the highest possible standard of manufacture.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

Cultural encouragement now before the heat of summer interferes will tell plainly on the stock in the early autumn and whatever degree of size and vigor is now imparted by special good treatment is a permanent gain, while any neglect at this season cannot be made good at any time later on. The early propagated stock should now be far enough advanced to require 4-inch pots. For compost use three parts turfy loam, two parts sand and one part very old manure. Give careful watering. Pinch out the points to make them stocky. Thrifty little plants from leaf sets and still in their first pots, should be transplanted before they become root-bound. Place in a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees at night and ventilate freely. They will need some shade from this out to keep the leaves from burning. Give light fumigations every ten days to keep them clean from fly. Where you can plunge the pots they will grow along better.

Bedding Plants

Pricking out and potting seedlings and cuttings will now take up a good deal of our time. Seedling annuals, particularly asters, will need to be transplanted into other flats, one inch apart, and when doing this do not forget to insert the little plants down to the seed leaf in the new soil. The big *Caladium esculentum*s started in flats weeks ago are already wanting a 5-inch pot. The cannas in flats are now five or six inches high. They must be lifted and potted at once. A 4-inch pot is large enough to make a good bedding plant. Geraniums that were shifted into 4-inch pots three or four weeks ago will be much in need of spacing. Propagation of bedding stock by cuttings and seed should have attention. As they become well established they can be removed to frames.

Dahlias

Where small lots are grown, spades or trowels can be used for planting. The land should previously have been well manured and thoroughly cultivated. We like to use a stout stake to each plant, but the largest growers by planting closer and pinching the plants after they have made two or three pairs of leaves, to give a stocky, branching habit, dispense with the use of supports. In planting dahlias always lay the roots down flat; a common error is to stand them straight up. Allow four or five feet between the rows where horse cultivation is to be given, and keep stirring the soil on every possible occasion. It is astonishing what a prolonged drought dahlias will stand if a nice, loose mulch of earth is constantly kept on the surface. The sunniest possible location suits dahlias. A ring of soot and lime around each plant will help to ward off attacks of cutworms, and will provide a little food for the plants. If the weather becomes dry they should have some water at the roots.

Memorial Day Lilies

Most florists have quite a sale for lilies at Memorial Day. Those intended for that date should be grown cool at the present time; about 55 degrees at night will do. It is a hard proposition to hold lilies back if they have been allowed to advance too much up to now. Place them where they can have plenty of ventilation, with a good syringing on bright days. Be very careful not to let lilies dry out, as they are very liable to do at this time of the year. Keep them clean of the aphids by a weekly fumigation. They will stand plenty of liquid feeding now and up to where they begin to show color. Ten days before they are wanted, when the flowers are fairly well expanded they should be kept in some cool place as a cellar or cool shed to gain substance and finish to the flowers. Lilies that have their buds just peeping by the end of April will be about right for Decoration Day.

Orchids

Now when most orchids are in active growth, liquid stimulants will be a great help to them. Such as calanthes, cymbidiums, cypripediums, phaius, pleiones, sobralias, thunias and others are benefited by feeding provided they have plenty of strong roots. All terrestrial orchids like an occasional weak dose of manure water in their growing season. The Cookson formula is very good. It can be made by mixing three ounces of potassium nitrate and two ounces of ammonium phosphate in a three gallon jar. When feeding orchids use one ounce of this solution to a gallon of water but all this feeding must be done with great care or harm will result. Give weak applications, say at intervals of about ten or twelve days. Be sure that the compost is not dry when applying any liquid stimulants.

After Easter

After Easter our crowded houses will be relieved and we shall be in a better condition to move whatever plants may need more heat or less heat to different houses. There will be more time now to care for late spring stock, which in most cases is waiting to be potted or pricked out. During the next month we shall find plenty to do in the case of coleus, geraniums, carnations, cannas, chrysanthemums, etc.

Next Week: Care of Orchids; Gardenias; Pot Evergreens; Poinsettias; Primulas; Late Propagations.

...the, the construction of the good, the true and the beautiful. Next week, Horticulture will try to tell the Easter business story.

Fine in value among the flowers recently introduced as commercial cut flowers, we can confidently class the Spanish iris. Ever dearly its name for this purpose has but just begun and there can be no question as to its much larger use in the immediate future. For table centre vase purposes it is really without a superior in its way as those who saw it used with such exquisite effect at the New York Show can testify. Add to its good qualities of pure colors and classic form that very essential trait of long-keeping as a cut flower and the Spanish iris certainly is "some class."

The flower show transition

It is not difficult to discern in the recent developments in showdom some conclusive indications of what we may expect in the character of future public floral exhibitions. Whether we like it or not, we are soon to say good-bye to the old-style flower show with its meaningless pyramids of decorative plants and its rows of clumsy jars and bottles of cut flowers. Decorative art in arrangement will be a potent factor in all pay shows henceforth or else they will not prove "pay" shows. This has been a long time coming, but once here the issue must be met by the schedule makers. The point has already been raised as to what is to become of the small exhibitor under the new order of things. That problem can and doubtless will be settled equitably in due time. Fine cultural skill must have unstinted recognition and emulation in this respect should be given every possible inducement but the time is still far in the future when the American public will be sufficiently informed and appreciative on technical points of excellence to "draw their wallets" in support of such. This we think has been proven beyond question.

Two lines of endeavor

Announcement is made of the award of the Topiarian Club trophy in landscape architecture at Harvard to a California student, second and third places being awarded to Massachusetts students. This is an annual competition open to students of the School of Landscape Architecture at Harvard. The subject of the competition this year was the development of a piece of property with a system of formal gardens on a sloping site, in the style of the gardens of the Italian Renaissance. Another bit of news comes from Cincinnati where the Garden Club is planning for the beautification of the highways and already along one of the principal roads leading into the city Rambler roses have been planted in great abundance for a distance of several miles, in such number that when they are in bloom they will form a veritable arch through the trees. Education in the planting of trees is also to be extended. While glad to know of any and all movements for the advancement and uplift of horticulture, as between the two instances mentioned the latter one does seem to us to promise the greater measure of usefulness if carried forward in a practical and systematic manner. Putting aside the question of the expediency or appropriateness of the introduction of foreign gardening modes in this country the fact remains that topiary gardens can never be indulged in by any but the wealthy. What is most essential is that the people at large be imbued with a fuller appreciation of sylvan and floral beauty.

The Easter glow

We can't help expect that some of you will find your hearts lifted by this busy week. Easter, like Christmas, comes only once a year just now, but for all florists and other nature-lovers we hope and believe that every day will be Easter bye-and-bye. Let us make the best of it while we are here, in the spirit of "peace and good will to all" and improve every opportunity to draw more tightly the ties that bind us

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Water in the Vases

This will have to be changed very often: daily, in fact, would be best. If the water is allowed to remain in the vases for a few days it will become stagnant and bad, killing all the leaves that come into it, thus leaving the roses very unsightly and difficult to sell. It is also dangerous to handle roses that have been in bad water for a while, for it is these as a rule that will start blood poisoning when their thorns get into the fingers of the man who has to handle them. The rose jars will have to be washed at least once a week, and if there are plenty of them put half of them out into the sun some bright day to sweeten up. Fibre vases that have begun to wear will last a great deal longer if they are thoroughly dried up and given a good coat of spar varnish being careful to apply plenty of it where it is most needed, which is right on the bottom of the vases on the outside near the edge. It is this part that comes in contact with the shelves or the concrete floor and as is natural it wears most. If the jars are not varnished, the original varnish will soon wear off and water will enter into the fibre, saturating it very slowly, and after a while the jar will go to pieces. Although the spar varnish is expensive it can be made to cover a good many vases and the time and money put into this work will be well spent. Earthen jars keep the water much sweeter and may be easier to keep clean, but they are very easy to break and even with careful handling are bound to get broken. Those that escape, however, will last forever. Barrels that are used for keeping long-stemmed Beauties will have to receive as much attention as the jars. They should not be varnished, however, or painted on the inside, for if they are they will be a long time tightening up if they are ever allowed to remain empty for a while and get leaky.

Care of Plants That Are To Be Grown On

Plants that will be dried off later, pruned and started up again had better receive good care now so that all the energy that they have will be preserved and the plants start up real well when the time comes. Although we do not recommend using much bone meal at this time of the year, plants that are to be carried over had better receive it all along, for if they are not to be moved into other soil they will get all of the bone in time and there will be no waste. It will also be necessary to keep the plants clean by constant syringing and fumigating regularly to keep greenfly in check. See that they are well mulched from now on, so that they will not suffer in the least from exposure. Do not use too much pressure when watering so as not to disturb the surface mulch very much, and hold the hose parallel to the bench when watering instead of holding it at right angles. This will help keep the mulch in place and will not wash it toward the center of the bench where it would soon pile high, being of very little benefit to the center rows, and more likely to do harm by keeping the plants too wet all the time.

The Sod Heaps

when the time comes to plant. In piling up the sod it is best not to make the layers too thick. The first or ground layer can be a foot in thickness but the remaining layers should be only about six inches, and then a coat of manure. This is repeated until the heap is as high as it is wanted. Should manure arrive too late to be put into the sod heap it can be piled right on top, turning the hose into it about once a week so as to saturate all the soil in the heap. This will help a good deal in mixing the soil and the manure, especially if it is done while the sod is still alive, as the roots of the grass will then catch a great deal of the manure and store it, leaving it in the soil when they die. If the water is not turned into the heap, chances are that the manure will not work into the soil at all, or if it will it will not go through properly so that there will be a great deal of the soil about the same as when it comes from the field, merely having lumps of manure in it. This is not ideal rose soil, it being much better if a large portion of the manure is dissolved and absorbed by the sod, turning this very dark in color. Many growers add bone meal to the sod when the heap is being put up but we would rather put the bone in just before the soil is taken into the houses. It will lie quite a while before the roots get through all of it, giving the bone plenty of time to decay.

Bonemeal for Roses

HORTICULTURE Pub. Co..

Your article on rose culture in issue of March 25, written by Arthur C. Ruzicka, recommends liquid manure only. I have always found bone meal necessary. Bone meal is not soluble in water. How about it? CONSTANT READER.

I was wrong in stating that bonemeal was not soluble in water. What I really meant was that a large portion of it will not dissolve at once, thus wasting quite a little, and it is always waste that will eat into the profits of the growers. If you will watch my articles you will see I recommend plenty of bone both in the soil and applied all fall and early winter. If this is done as we do it the liquid manure will suffice in the spring and there will be very little unused bone going out with the soil. Growers who can use all their old soil to good advantage will not have to be so careful for they will get it back in hay, corn or whatever crops the old soil is used for. I could not recommend heavy applications of bone meal in the spring on plants that are to be thrown out and feel right about it for I know from experience that a good portion of the bone is not consumed. We use plenty of bone in the fall and early winter, as I have stated above, and I advise others to do the same, and will again when fall comes around if I am still here to write for HORTICULTURE. As for using other preparations such as tankage, blood and bone, etc., I often use all of them, but find it rather difficult to advise others to do so, owing to the fact that HORTICULTURE's circulation covers the whole country and what we would call tankage here may be something altogether different elsewhere as far as actual analysis goes. If there was only one brand of bone, blood and bone, sheep manure, etc., it would be very simple, as growers could not go wrong. There are many places both private and commercial that have no facilities for applying liquid manure. We receive many letters which are often answered by mail, asking advice as to this or that, and any good fertilizer or other article used in the greenhouse or garden will not go unrecommended where the user will profit by it. There are plenty of wide awake growers who are always on the lookout for new things that are better than what we have had, thus insuring sales for any good article well advertised.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

At the monthly meeting on Tuesday evening, April 18, it was decided to hold the next meeting on July 27 and ladies night will take place at the regular June meeting. At the September meeting the ladies will again be entertained and there will be a reception lecture. It was voted that a letter of sympathy be sent to the family of the late Albert Roper. An invitation from Stephen M. Weid of Dedham to visit his garden on May 15 was unanimously accepted. The lecture by F. A. Smith, principal of the Essex Agricultural School, Hawthorn, Mass., on "Orcharding" was a very good and useful talk. The lecturer laid stress on the value of cultivation, pruning and fertilization. He suggested that apples and pears are best planted in the fall and stone fruits in spring. He advised planting semi-permanent trees such as Mackintosh and Wealthy between the permanent orchard but laid emphasis on the necessity of cutting these out before crowding the ones that are to remain. Also advised employing dwarf or Paradise stock as fillers as well as small fruits in the early years of the orchard. He also advised growing rape on poor ground as a cover crop to be ploughed in, or clover on good soil to be treated likewise.

A report of cultural merit was given to James Wheeler for a verse of single yellow marguerites; large flowers. Report of merit to F. W. Fletcher & Co., for snapdragon Enchantress. Vote of thanks to James Methven for White Gem celery; very good and late.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular meeting of this society was held in Greenwich, Ct., on April 14. A charming feature was the fine display on the exhibition tables. Harry Turner, of the Morris Nursery Co., was a visitor and addressed the meeting briefly. A committee was appointed to arrange for the show to be held in Mamaroneck, N. Y., in June, and which bids fair to be one of the society's best efforts. For the fall show to be held in Greenwich, Ct., Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 valuable prizes of cash, cut glass and silverware will be offered and the schedule will be arranged so that the small grower as well as the large grower will have a chance to compete. A discussion of the recent exhibitions held in Philadelphia and New York brought out some interesting observations. The following awards were made:

Carnation Alma Ward, from James Linane, hon. mention; Carnation Watchless, from Robt. Grunnert, hon. mention; Am. Beauty roses, from Jas. Foster, cultural certificate; Rose Ophelia, from Jas. Stuart, cultural certificate; P. W. Popp, tulip collection, including many of the newer sorts, certificate of merit.

Next meeting May 12, don't forget to bring an exhibit.

P. W. Popp, Cor. Sec.

NEW HAVEN COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society has just issued its preliminary schedule of the 84th annual exhibition in September. The prize list is over seven hundred dollars.

The special prizes are stated in detail. Among the donors are Knight & Struck Co., New York; Michell Seed House, Philadelphia; Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York; Sunnyside Gladiolus Gardens, Natick, Mass.; Willis E. Fryer, Mantorville, Minn.; Munsell & Harvey, Ashtabula, Ohio; C. Louis Alling, West Haven; F. C. Sheldon, New Haven; P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.; Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven; Pierson U-Bar Co., New York.

The State of Connecticut, through the Board of Agriculture, offers valuable cash prizes, open to all citizens of Connecticut, for potatoes and corn. These prizes are to be competed for at the annual mid-winter meeting of the State Board of Agriculture.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB

This club held an interesting meeting last Thursday afternoon. The Spring Flower Show committee's report was particularly pleasing. A committee, consisting of F. Windler, W. C. Smith and W. J. Pilcher, was appointed to ascertain the number of square feet of glass in and around St. Louis and report at next meeting. This was on request of the committee to organize a State Florists' Association. David Geddes and President Bourdet gave interesting reports of the National Flower Show. A Vandeven, who has just returned from Holland, gave an interesting account of the bulb situation over there. The next meeting will take place May 11 at 2 o'clock P. M.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular meeting of this Society was held on Wednesday evening, April 12. A letter was received from Harry Jones, tendering his resignation as secretary, as he had moved to a point some distance from Glen Cove. Mr. Jones has been a most efficient, hard working and courteous official. Henry Gibson, of Roslyn Heights, was elected for the remainder of the year.

A communication was received from the International Garden Club requesting the co-operation of this Society in the open air flower show which the Garden Club will hold in June. Offers of two prizes were received for our coming Rose Show. An essay on "Estate Management and College Education," by Morrell Smith, of New York, was listened to with great interest and a lively discussion followed. S. J. Trepass read a very interesting and practical paper on "Peaches Under Glass." Mr. Trepass exhibited a grafted peach tree and also some samples of fruiting and non-fruiting wood of the peach.

Schedules for the Tulip Show and Rose Show were read and adopted. It was decided to hold the Tulip Show during the week of May 14, the exact date to be announced later, and the Rose Show on June 14. Awards were made to Harry Goodband for lettuce, John Everitt for roses, James McCarthy for sweet peas; Peter McLeod, certificate of culture for sweet peas; William Noonan, honorable mention for violets.

JAMES MCCARTHY, Cor. Sec'y.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK.

The Fall Exhibition of this Society will be held from November 9th to 12th, inclusive, at the American Museum of Natural History. The schedule is now being prepared. The part covering the Chrysanthemum bush plants has been completed, and is as follows:

CHRYSANTHEMUMS—PLANTS Open to All.

Specimen Bushes

In not less than fourteen inch pots.

Class No.	First	Second
A 1 Yellow	$50.00	$25.00
A 2 White	50.00	25.00
A 3 Pink	50.00	25.00
A 4 Any other color	50.00	25.00
A 5 Atomate of single, any color	30.00	15.00

In not more than fourteen-inch pots.

A 6 Yellow	$25.00	$15.00
A 7 White	25.00	15.00

ORGANIZATION OF COLLEGE FLORISTS

RESOLVED: That the members of the S. A. F. and O. H. interested in the line of floricultural education and research be recognized as a Section of the S. A. F. and O. H. under the title of the College Florists' Section of the S. A. F. and O. H.

The above resolution was adopted at a meeting on March 29th in Philadelphia.

At the call of Prof. A. H. Nehrling of Massachusetts, H. B. Dorner of Illinois, E. A. White and A. C. Beal of New York, B. W. Anspen of Maryland, E. I. Wilde of Pennsylvania, A. H. Nehrling and A. S. Thurston of Massachusetts, together with W. N. Rudd and Richard Vincent, Jr., gathered at an informal meeting and dinner, which was held at the Hotel Walton on March 28th.

At this meeting various problems connected with teaching and experimental work were discussed. Among some of the things which were talked over were, how to establish a closer relationship of the commercial men with the colleges, how the colleges might co-operate with the commercial man, the best methods to use to give students a practical training in floriculture, the education of the public to a greater appreciation of flowers, and the placing of students during vacations in order that they might get actual experience along practical lines. Many valuable suggestions on these and other subjects were offered by Mr. Rudd and Mr. Vincent.

As a result of this informal meeting it was felt that there was need of an organization which not only would be of mutual benefit to its members, but could co-operate with the S. A. F. A. S. THURSTON.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES

The annual flower show, under the direction of the Gardeners' Union, will be held in City Hall, Lewiston, Maine, on August 24-25.

At the monthly meeting of the New London (Conn.) Horticultural Society, William A. Dawson, of Willimantic, gave a talk on "The Carnation."

The April meeting of the New London Horticultural Society was held on the 13th inst. with Wm. A. Dawson of Willimantic as speaker, the subject being "The Carnation and Its History." Mr. Dawson had several vases of blooms, also the local gardeners who also exhibited a lot of bulbous stock. This was the largest meeting the society has ever had, as the hall was packed even to standing room. The society decided to do away with the Summer Show owing to lack of support on the part of the public. Three new members were elected to membership. H. E. L.

There was a good attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society on April 12. Ed. Jenkins was given an award of merit for a display of Spencer sweet peas. A letter was read from the International Garden Club, asking the co-operation in the Summer Show at Pelham Bay Park in June. It was agreed to give the show all possible support. The paper selected for the evening was "Estate Management and the College Graduate." A good discussion followed. The next meeting is on May 10

J. H. FRAMPTON, Asst. Secy.

At the meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, April 14, a collection of pansies, by Charles T. Beasley & Co., East Milton, Mass., was awarded a first-class certificate. H. R. Hurd, of the C. M. Beach estate, West Hartford, was awarded a first-class certificate for stocks. On the question of pruning grape vines Prof. George T. Whitten said that very good results were obtained by partial pruning in the fall just before freezing and again in the early spring. Fred Boss, head gardener at Elizabeth Park, gave a demonstration of pruning shrubs, accompanied by a most instructive talk of the various operations. He was followed by President Hollister, who showed the old and the new style of grafting and budding, giving a practical demonstration of the processes. John F. Huss exhibited small conifers grafted a year ago last February and gave an account of his visit to the flower shows.

POLYANTHUS PRIMROSES.

Innovations in every line are always welcome, especially if they are of the kind that raise the standard. William Sim and his polyanthus primrose—Primula elatior—have done just that, created a new standard for the primrose growers. The keeping qualities of this primrose are among its chief assets. Mr. Sim showed us a bunch that he had picked two weeks previous and apparently it was just as good as if it had been picked on the preceding day. Many tints and shades of yellow are produced. H. M. Robinson & Co. are selling the output of Mr. Sim's houses.

WHAT THE COMING OF THE S. A. F. TO THE SOUTH MEANS TO THE SOUTHERN FLORISTS.

Read and hear R. C. Kessler, Vice-President of the American Florists' Association, at the S. A. F. Convention at Houston, Texas.

I have chosen this subject for two reasons. First, I have an inherent interest in it, and secondly, for the S. A. F. and general business. I do not wish to make an opportunity to offer a few suggestions leading up to our S. A. F. convention which meets this summer in Houston.

We florists are a very conservative people. We believe in holding on to the things that have been found valuable. Sometimes we hold on to some until they have lost their real worth. We criticize the Chinese people because they have been holding on to the old things of their civilization that they have cherished for generations. Progress in usefulness and in influence of any trade or profession depends more on the vigor with which new ideas are developed and used than upon mere industry in following long established practice. I am glad to testify to the fact that the people of our entire Southland according to my observation are doing the best that is within them. That the florists of the South are waking up to the importance of organization is demonstrated by the activities of this society, the New Orleans Horticultural Society, the Texas State Florists' Association and other southern florists who are considering the matter of state and local organization at this time. And the florists of the South should be more strongly organized than any other section of the country, due to the many obstacles that we have to overcome. Difficulties in our growing departments are many; our establishments, especially in the lower southern states are not up to the standard, but these conditions are fast being remedied with modern stores, modern greenhouses and—best of all—modern business methods. What is bringing about this change in conditions? Local and state organizations are being organized. Florists are getting together discussing these matters, exchanging ideas.

You walk into a poorly kept store or a rundown greenhouse where everything appears to be some ten years behind the times, and say to the manager something about taking an interest in some local or state organization and his answer will invariably be that he never attends a convention. He does not believe in organization, never attends or takes any interest in the flower shows. He cannot figure out in actual dollars and cents the good he can derive. That man is short-sighted. He thinks he is economical. He does not realize that he can bring back from a convention some good ideas that if put into practice will be money in his pocket.

If the florists of the South are going to have any conception of what the other florists of the United States are doing, then they have to go and attend these conventions. Send your representatives along and get one of your live newspapers to send a reporter and there is no telling what the value of the report would be to the florists of your state. Who are your progressive florists? I can pick him out. He is the one who takes an interest in your local, state and national organizations. He is the one who belongs to the Chamber of Commerce, The Ad. Club, the Merchants' Association and other commercial organizations. I say all these are business affairs in any nothing of the good to be derived by coming in contact with business men of other lines. Many of our florists are prone to do the work of a two-dollar-per-day man instead of studying the business getting side, such as the sales force, the advertising, the display, etc. The fundamental purpose of government, the very foundation stone upon which the success and prosperity of a people must depend is the strength, vigor, the health of the people who live under its flag. And our work brings us out into the open, in touch with all that is beautiful and good and lifts our heart and soul to better and higher things.

The S. A. F. is to meet in the South. We want everyone possible there and after you attend the convention and return home, then consider what it means to you, what you put into it, what you brought back home to be put with your great storehouse of knowledge. Was it all worth while from the standpoint of time, money and fellowship?

Two years ago among many other southern and western florists, I was in attendance at the S. A. F. Convention at Boston. We all asked this question—Why does not the S. A. F. come South? Some of the old timers stated that they had only a small membership in the South and the South takes no interest, nor are the florists of the South awake to the importance of organization. We southerners talked it over and agreed that what was said was true. But we left Boston with the determination to go home and stir up interest in organization work and show the S. A. F. and the world that we were alive. The florists from all over the country have been watching the southern florists for the past two years. At the San Francisco convention we extended our invitation. It is needless for me to state the results; it was a landslide. Yes, willing, glad to come to be in our midst. Now, fellow florists, it is up to us to show our mettle. To show them we appreciate being affiliated with them, and are glad they are on their way to be with us. We must now show the florists of the country that we do nothing half way. To make the convention come up to the standard in every way it will only take two things from you—little to put in, but which if left out would mean failure—and these two things your membership in the S. A. F. and your presence in Houston. The Texas florists pledge the rest. Your membership and your presence is all we ask. We must attend these conventions as a labor of love, as the outgrowth of deep-seated loyalty of citizenship and as long as we feel this loyalty, as long as it will inspire us, we will have no trouble. We will have large audiences and a great deal of good will be done. I may be old-fashioned in that idea, but I love the idea of loyalty and patriotism and if we do not find sufficient loyalty and patriotism to uphold the S. A. F. I shall be sadly disappointed. I believe we ought to hold this matter up as a great movement, an expression of the loyalty of the people of this country for the good of the whole people, without any regard for direct self returns. Of course, we get returns—returns in the way of sociability and improvement and in the enjoyment of each other's society, but I mean without any narrow motive and I believe that we are coming to the test of our loyalty and citizenship along this line.

We are going to have a record breaking attendance and I will tell you why. It is the one opportunity for the florists from the north and east, west and central states, to see this grand old southern country and meet I am a Texan and Texas Man. It has been said that when the American Indian was being gradually crowded out of the northern states, there was one tribe that held its own better than the average tribe, but gradually, one by one, the great warriors of this tribe were stricken down either by the gun of the white man or by starvation. The wild buffalo were also disappearing and finally there was but one great warrior left. Brooding upon the many trials of his people, he finally turned his back upon his northern home and set his face toward the setting sun. He finally reached the borders of our Texas before it became a state. Awakening one morning, he looked upon the broad horizon; he saw a great herd of antelope and buffalo; he saw flowing before him a beautiful river and the whole earth seemed to him covered with beautiful flowers. There were thousands of blue bonnets; there was the red blanket, and as it seemed to him a thousand other beautiful wild flowers; and he looked up into the heavens and there was not a cloud in sight. His heart was so filled with delight in this new country, that he cast himself on the ground and exclaimed "Tejas!"—land of sunshine and flowers.

And Houston in the great State has many attractions and never fails to meet her visitors more than half way. With the numerous points of historical interest within easy reach of our city, our entertainment committee arranging a trip down our ship channel to the San Jacinto battle grounds, also other trips to our seashore attractions, which are likewise unusually accessible, and to that famous summer resort, Galveston; these and many other attractions make the city an ideal one from the visitors' standpoint. Right now we are planning the convention garden, which promises to be among the best yet displayed by previous conventions. Mr. Kessler, the famous landscape artist of St. Louis, is acting in an advisory capacity with our own Mr. C. L. Brock, park superintendent to the city of Houston, who has this work in charge, and you may rest assured that a great treat is in store for you. Our convention hall is one of the largest in the South and present indications are that it will be packed to the limit with exhibits. Our three-million-dollar hotel, the Rice, will be the headquarters. So, you see, it will be worth while to attend this convention in Houston. Now, I want to make my last plea for your support with your membership and your presence. One thing about this movement is that everybody can work at it. We ought to go home from here with new inspiration, with a full realization of the splendid work which stretches out before us, and we ought to accomplish great results.

SUMMER FLOWER SHOW FOR NEW YORK.

A meeting of officials and members of the International Garden Club, including Mrs. Chas. F. Hoffman, Mrs. James L. Breese, Mrs. Chas. D. Dickey, Mrs. Amory Carhart, Mrs. J. J. Wyson, Mrs. H. de Berkeley Parsons and others who are interested in the forthcoming show to be held in the club's grounds at Pelham Bay Park, Pelham Bay, N. Y., June 1-4, met at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, on Friday afternoon, April 7, there being between 60 and 70 present. Dr. Geo. Norton Miller presided.

The meeting was to consider the premium list already prepared by the schedule committee, to appoint a secretary-manager to carry out the arrangements for the show, and to make other provisions in that connection.

J. Harrison Dick, as secretary of the schedule committee, read a letter that he had sent to Mrs. Chas. F. Hoffman, president of the International Garden Club on March 11, naming the gentlemen who had accepted invitations to serve on this committee, and incorporating in the letter the principal suggestions made by the committee. Appended was the preliminary schedule.

Mrs. Hoffman thought that the sum of $3,000 previously suggested would be all that the club could guarantee for prizes, and asked that the preliminary schedule be made to conform to this amount.

Short speeches were made in favor of the proposed show by Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the American Dahlia Society; Wm. Carter, secretary of the Bernardsville Hort. & Agri. Society; John Featherstone, president Tarrytown Hort. Society; David McIntosh, secretary Tuxedo Hort. Society; T. A. Havemeyer; B. Hammond Tracy, representing the American Gladiolus Society; P. W. Popp, corresponding secretary of the Westchester & Fairfield Hort. Society; Anton Bauer, Deal (N. J.) Hort. Society; Bertrand Farr, president of the American Peony Society, and W. A. Manda, speaking as an exhibitor.

It was generally agreed that a charge of $5 should be made for entrance on the first day, $1 the second day, 50c. the third day, with one free day. This matter, however, together with the appointment of the various committees, was left in the hands of the executive committee of the International Garden Club.

Harry A. Bunyard proposed, and John Canning seconded, the appointment of Arthur Herrington as secretary-manager, which was unanimously agreed to. The date June 1-4 was definitely adopted.

It is hoped that the new preliminary schedule will be published within the next few days, but other cups, donations or prizes from societies or individuals are expected, and may be added to the final schedule.

Very considerable interest was shown throughout the proceedings, the general verdict being that a summer show properly organized and carried through, was what was wanted, and that it would be desirable for the smaller organizations to combine and make one thoroughly representative show.

Promise of support was received from various members of other garden

Wins In a "Walk"

A good sign of the skill of the greenhouse owner or the nurseryman is the condition of his lawns. Well-trimmed lawns mean self respect.

The Coldwell Walk Type Motor Lawn Mower is ideal for broad lawns. Cuts from half an acre to an acre an hour. Weight on rollers from 500 lbs. (Model H) to 1,100 lbs. Travels 4 miles an hour, uphill and down. All you do is follow and guide. Cuts 30 in., 35 in. and 40 in. swaths.

Coldwell "Threesome." Three mowers behind one horse, cutting an 87-inch swath. All gears run in grease cases, which keep out all dirt.

Also hand mowers in 150 styles and sizes. Write for full particulars.

Notes.

The schedule of the Sweet Pea Exhibition to be held under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society in the concert room of the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, on June 9 and 10, has been distributed and copies may be obtained from Frank G. Cuthbertson, secretary, 749 Front street, San Francisco. Exhibitions are to be held this year at Bar Harbor, Me., San Francisco, New York and Philadelphia.

Pittsburgh seedsmen say they are satisfied with this season's business. Last year's exceptional prosperity is credited to the "hard times" then prevailing, many mechanics and laboring men being out of work and taking to home gardening for their table supplying. This year sees entirely different trade conditions, when it is almost impossible to get men for outside work, owing to the tempting superior pay of mill work.

At the monthly session of the Horticultural Society of Western Pennsylvania, in Pittsburgh, cultural certificates were awarded as follows: Michael Curren, Sewickley Heights, for carnations; Walter James, gard. for W. Henry R. Hilliard, cinerarias. David Fraser showed hyacinths and Thomas E. Tyler new narcissi. Anthony Aloysius Leach also showed narcissi. The program for the next session will include a paper on "Vegetables—What to Grow and How to Grow Them," by Michael Curren. "Hardy Perennials and How They Should Be Grown," by James Murphy. Mr. Thompson of the farm for the Woods Run Settlement, will tell what has been accomplished there.

William H. Dildine, speaking before the Rochester Florists' Society on April 10, said that the seed business had been badly upset by the war and that seedsmen in New York State are as hard hit by the war as those of England. "If the war should end today," said Mr. Dildine, "it would take ten years to get back to the normal state so that, in ordering seeds from Germany, we should be able to rely upon the seeds sent to us. This is true of other countries as well as of Germany. After the war the market will be glutted with some things, but I cannot see that prices, on the average, will be much lower. In general, I do not think there will be a shortage of seeds, except in a few varieties, which is common even in normal times, but there will be a greatly unsettled condition of the market."

A Letter From Any Congressman.

(From The New York Evening Sun.)

Dear Sir: I am having forwarded to you a package of flower seeds which are furnished by the Department of Agriculture. Should it be impossible for you to use them please hand them to some neighbor who may desire them.

The Agriculture Department publishes a number of very interesting bulletins upon a great variety of subjects. Some of the more important are indicated in the list on the other side of this letter, and many of them undoubtedly contain information useful to you.

Write and let me know what bulletins you desire, and please send me your correct address. Assuring you that it is always an honor to serve and a pleasure to hear from you, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

Suggested Form Letter for Reply.

New York City, March 31, 1916.

Dear Sir: I cannot remember whether I voted for you or not, but I am delighted and flattered by the receipt of the flower seeds. So much so, indeed, that I promise to vote for you hereafter whenever I think about it. And this, I take it, is the effect which you counted upon producing with the flower seeds.

I do not at the moment recall where you stand with regard to the issue of adequate preparation for national defence. You have never written me your views about that, or asked for mine. But, after all, it is a trivial thing as compared with the flower seeds. My interests, like your own, are almost exclusively aesthetic.

What are your ideas concerning the proper manner in which to create an American merchant marine? Or have you any? Of your own, I mean. No matter. I ask in a spirit purely academic. I am more interested in flower seeds.

Do you believe that we should continue to maintain a number of isolated, useless and expensive army posts, merely for political and pork barrel purposes? What is your record in this matter? Perhaps you have gone a long way, personally, in your efforts to reform this condition. Pardon me if I have not taken the trouble to learn where you stand on this, just as you have not taken the trouble to inform me. My serious thoughts on government are claimed by flower seeds; it is sweet for Congressman and constituent to exchange pretty floral tokens; I feel it so. Let us not descend to the sordid in our correspondence. Send me a buttercup full of dew.

Are you a Democrat? I suppose I should know without asking. But you have only brought yourself directly to my notice in a horticultural way, and I forget the less significant things about you. I wonder how you divined my passion for flowers? If you are a Democrat, are you more influenced in your legislative attitude by that raging militarist, that Caesar, President Wilson, or that imperial-minded Pompey, W. J. Bryan, who has but to stamp his foot in the day of trouble to bring a million men to arms between dawn and dusk? If it is more politic to avoid choosing between these two, do not reply. I would forget if you told me. My great concern is with the eggplant, the dog-tooth violet, the daffodils that come (as I am poetically informed) before the swallow dares.

To what extent are you influenced by the pro German propaganda in your district? If you feel any hesitancy about answering in words send me a hyacinth and I will understand.

What is your opinion of Josephus Daniels, and what he is doing for our well-known navy? Would you be one of ten million signers to a petition urging his resignation? Reflect profoundly before you answer. And if reflection brings no answer, some day you and I will pluck a daisy, and as we pull the petals one by one we will murmur: "I love Josephus! I love him not!" etc. And if we find we love him we will go and stick musk-roses in his long sleek ears.

Do you know what our Mexican policy is, and how long it has been that and why, and do you approve of it? Has President Wilson conferred with you lately about it? If so, I trust I am not indiscreet—did you tell him what you really thought? Or only what you thought he would want you to think that week? I have no genuine curiosity about this. I want a magnolia from the Capitol grounds.

Do you believe the railroad mileage allowance for Congressmen is sufficient? Or should a gasoline allowance be added now that the price of gasoline has risen? Send me a Johnny jump-up and I will know what you mean.

Please continue not to bother me with your thoughts on the proper way to raise revenue, and the proper deserving Democrats upon whom to spend it. I would pretend a perfunctory interest for the sake of politeness, if you confided your views on these things to me. But all the time my heart would be in the botanical gardens.

Assuring you that I appreciate your assurance that it is always an honor to serve and a pleasure to hear from me, I thank you for the intuition which informed you of my well-nigh uncontrollable fondness for flowers. Sir, a primrose by the Potomac's brim has always been something more than a yellow primrose to me. It is the greater part of what I get out of being one of your constituents. Won't you have General Goethals let the canal slide for a while, and go down into South America and get me some orchids?

Very sincerely yours,

DON MARQUIS.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Ralph Silvey, a well-known member of the craft is now in the employ of Everett Rogers of Roshindale. Mr. Silvey has just returned from a trip to the coast after an absence of nearly a year.

Victor Hartford, son of H. E. Hartford, was incapacitated the first part of the week by a slight case of poisoning caused by a rose thorn imbedded in his finger. He is now back on his job of head packer for H. M. Robinson & Co.

It is rumored that Albert Strumph manager of the H. M. Robinson Co., is engaged to be married shortly after the Easter rush. It has been a favorite topic of discussion with the trade as to who Mr. Strumph would finally honor and we are about to find out.

Stephen Drumgoole, lately with Max Fine of Dartmouth street, has entered into partnership with Charles Fine of Massachusetts avenue. Mr. Drumgoole is a well-known designer and has received prizes many times for his skill in making up floral pieces.

PHILADELPHIA.

B. H. Farr delivered an interesting lecture on "The Iris" at the monthly meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society on the afternoon of the 18th inst.

At the next meeting of the Florists' Club, May 2, there will be a red spider explosion. Parker Thayer Barnes, Department of Zoology, State of Pennsylvania, will be in the trenches and fire the first bomb. This is just about the time when every grower wants to swap his latest opinions on how to handle this perennial pest.

NEW YORK.

It is announced that Henshaw & Fenrich will dissolve partnership by mutual and amicable agreement on April 29th. Mr. Henshaw will from that date operate the Henshaw Floral Co., Inc., at 127 West 28th street, and Mr. Fenrich will do business under his own name at 51 West 28th street.

PITTSBURGH.

The John Bader Co. recently sold $2,500.00 worth of palms to the new William Penn Hotel.

The J. R. Weldin Co. has a special window display of "Farm, Garden and Outdoor Books" this week.

Albert J. Niggel has left the employ of Walter A. Faulk and taken a position with George E. Hallam.

Albert M. Gocht, formerly of So. Orange, N. J., has been added to the landscape department of the A. W. Smith Co.

William J. Ferguson has opened a landscape office and flower shop at 6218 Penn avenue, east end. He was formerly with G. P. Weaklin & Co. and Randolph & McClements.

John McDonald, who for several years has been the first assistant on the estate of Daniel M. Clemson, has gone to Willoughby, Ohio, to take charge of the grounds and greenhouse for Howard M. Hanna, Jr.

Myron J. Walter, formerly of the N. Y. State Training School, has just assumed the work of Director of Garden Work under the Pittsburgh Board of Education at a salary of $2,500.00. This position has been vacant two years.

George Schnurbush of Brooklyn, N. Y., left on Tuesday morning after a several days' visit with J. W. Ludwig. He stopped en route to Indiana, where he visits his daughter. Mr. Schnurbush was formerly employed by the Ludwig Floral Co.

CHICAGO.

F. L. Eagleston, who opened the Flower Craft, at 1514 Hyde Park boulevard, recently had the misfortune to fall and break his shoulder blade.

The attitude of the public does not change toward the fashionable flower sale which has taken away a big part of the most expensive Easter trade for several years. No other object would gain such a hold on the people as the giving to the destitute crippled children, but it is to be regretted that it cuts so heavily into the trade of the retail florists. Many thousands of dollars annually are diverted from the trade and generally these same florists are asked to contribute flowers. Many are purchased, however, at regular prices.

CINCINNATI.

Tom Windram, of Cold Springs, Ky., has converted an Overland roadster into a light truck for the delivery of cut flowers to the local market.

Wholesale dealers have arranged for an exceptionally good large lot of stock for Easter and many large shipping orders have been booked in advance.

Worcester, Mass.—Harry Randall spoke on the "Florists' Telegraph Delivery" before the Worcester Publicity Association on Wednesday, April 12.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Some of the florists entered the display window contest held by the Washington Chamber of Commerce, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

While in Washington last week, H. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, Pa., took up with the State Department the matter of the delay of shipments from Rotterdam consigned to his firm.

The large plate glass window at the side of the store of F. H. Kramer was blown in by the heavy gale on Friday. Much damage was done to outdoor stock and a considerable quantity of glass in and around Washington was damaged.

An advertisement of a local department store announcing the arrival of an importation of Holland rose bushes has caused considerable comment because of the statement that "As in the past, these rose bushes have been inspected by experts from the Agricultural Department, and it means much to purchasers to know that the bush they buy has thus been inspected." It is felt that the wording of this advertisement gives the impression that the bush is guaranteed by the Government.

PERSONAL.

Michael Nilan has been engaged as gardener for Dr. H. S. Wilton, Althea Farm, Norwalk, Ct.

Miss Rose Batchelor has taken a position in the florist shop of C. S. Hopkins, Brattleboro, Vt.

Frederic Holton, son of L. C. Holton, florist, Bennington, Vt., and Miss Hazel E. Russell, were married in Old Bennington on Wednesday evening, April 12.

Detroit, Mich.—M. Bloy and Joseph Streit will dissolve partnership June 1, Mr. Bloy to continue the business alone.

Meriden, Conn.—C. W. Blatchley has a large vacant store in Hall & Lewis block as an Easter branch to accommodate the plant trade.

Obituary

William E. Doyle.

William E. Doyle, one of the pioneer florists of Boston, passed away after one day's illness at his home in Brookline, Mass., on Sunday, April 16. Mr. Doyle was born in Roxbury, Mass.,

WILLIAM E. DOYLE.

where his father was gardener on the Lowell estate, in 1843. At the age of 16 years he went to work for John Galvin, father of the present Thomas F. Galvin, at his store on Tremont street, Boston, near the corner of Beacon. In the year 1868 he associated himself with Thomas W. Dee and the firm of Dee & Doyle started business at 73 Tremont street, where they soon took a leading position among the flower establishments then existing in this country, not only as retail florists but as shippers of Bonsilene roses, smilax, etc., to New York, Philadelphia and elsewhere. In 1883 the firm was dissolved, Mr. Dee locating in another place and Mr. Doyle retaining the old establishment. Five years later he purchased the Hovey estate with greenhouses and nurseries at Cambridge, as an adjunct to his business. Later he removed his store to 306 Boylston street and added a branch establishment at 6 Beacon street. The Cambridge property was finally disposed of for residential use and the location of a city hospital and about one year ago Mr. Doyle finally retired from business.

Mr. Doyle was a master of the art of floral arrangement. He could do more with a specified quantity of material and in less time than any man we have ever known in the flower trade. His taste was exquisite and he easily took first place among the old-time florists, who did not have the stock or the accessories which florists of the present day have at their disposal. For many years he was the Class Day decorator at Harvard College. He leaves two sons and one daughter.

Charles H. Bell.

Charles H. Bell died at his home in Marlboro, Mass., on Thursday, April 18, aged 75 years lacking one day. He was well-known in the florist trade, having formerly been in the employ of Phelps, the Florist, in his Pleasant street place.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON With nearly ideal conditions prevailing it is not difficult to forecast a record volume of business for the 1916 Easter. The most noticeable feature of this week's market is the steady heavy demand and the equally steady supply which so far has prevented serious shortages and yet has not glutted the market. With the single exception of carnations every variety is in abundance. This scarcity of carnations has had a beneficial effect on the sale of roses, peas and bulb stocks, thus balancing the market more evenly. Roses are steady, with a wide range of prices. Wholesalers report more roses handled this year than ever before and better prices are being obtained, they claim. Snapdragon is being sold in large quantities and a few salesmen claim record prices. The first shipment of gladioli arrived on Wednesday morning and were immediately sold. Lilies are plentiful as are callas and candidum lilies. A few Spanish irises are to be seen but are not being heavily called for. Primroses are going wonderfully well and are welcomed by all. A few dealers report a slight shortage on red roses. This is not general, however, as the majority have a well balanced stock on hand. Violets, double only, are excellent in quality, but very scarce, owing to the lateness of the holiday this year. Sweet peas are being bought and sold in large quantities at very good prices and taken altogether the condition of this week's market may be stated as excellent.

The opening of the last CHICAGO week before Easter found the Chicago market with a large supply of roses. All growers are cutting heavily and the spring weather together with the lateness of Easter make a combination which throws a large quantity of roses into the supply of stock for the florists' big holiday. The situation is different with carnations. At this writing, Tuesday, April 18th, the supply of good carnations is not large. If this means the holding back of stock for later in the week to catch advanced prices, the bright weather is apt to defeat the game as has been the case so often in the past. Of lilies, there is no end, but of long stemmed lilies with substance there are none to spare. It is a season of short stemmed lilies which is all right for plant trade but the cut flower dealers are disappointed in the lack of well grown, long stemmed lilies. More American Beauties are coming now than at any previous time since the holidays. Bulbous stock is still here, but in comparatively limited quantity. Some fine iris in yellow and lavender appeared this week. It is long stemmed and of rich color and in every way splendid stock. A great many excellent sweet peas are on the counters. Snapdragons are selling well. Callas are here in greater number than the market needs. Such are the conditions at this time but wholesalers report long lists of orders for out-of-town customers, and by the time these are filled the condition of the market may have undergone a complete change. The last minute orders and the repeat orders of the week end also make predictions very difficult in Chicago where shipping trade North, South, East and West covers great distances. There is very little advance in price to local dealers at this time.

An abundance of cut flowers are coming in for Easter. Lilies, roses, carnations and sweet peas have been and are in heavy supply. Roses are very fine in all varieties. Carnations are coming in stronger than was expected. Jonquils and daffodils, indoor and outdoor, are in good supply. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths run light in quantity. Plant business for Easter is exceptionally large.

NEW YORK Ceaseless bustling, flavored with a certain air of confident superiority on the part of the plant growers is the principal symptom of the approach of Easter now in sight. In the cut flower field there is really nothing of value to report at this stage of the game. The market is well filled with stock of all varieties in all grades and prices varying accordingly. Under conditions as they are now enhanced market prices in advance of Easter are not within the possibilities, and yet it is equally true that no man can predict with any degree of accuracy what may happen between now and Saturday, midnight, or conduce to bring about "nut-cracker" conditions on any one specialty. For the present things are dull and as heretofore in recent years the wholesalers and growers are obliged to wait and exercise due patience while the plant men are having their innings.

PHILADELPHIA Sweet peas and carnations have gone rather better but, on the whole, prices realized are below the average. Roses are very good and quite plentiful. There was a fair clean up last Saturday, but no fancy prices. Cattleyas are scarce and bringing good prices. They are mostly Schröderæ, Trianae is nearly done and Mossiæ just commencing. There are too many Easter lilies. Balance of market about as last reported. Prospects for Easter week very good. Everybody is praying for fine weather from Thursday morning to Saturday night.

HOLLYHOCK RUST.

HOLLYHOCK RUST. The hollyhock disease has been one of the most difficult pests to control in the entire list of garden troubles. Many growers, succumbed by persistent use of Bordeaux mixture but they insist upon continuing to use it until the rust appears. In addition all infected foliage is promptly burned. Ammoniacal carbonate of copper has been successfully used by some and is preferred to the Bordeaux as less disfiguring to the plants. We would suggest a trial of Fungine if this has not been already tried. Many growers now make a practice of growing their hollyhocks annually from seed. —(Ed.)

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Plant Propagation, Greenhouse and Nursery Practice by M. G. Kane, of State College, Pa., Published by Orange Judd Company New York. We have had many inquiries from time to time for a reliable and up-to-date book on plant propagation, but were always at a loss to find any publication that we could recommend. The subject has been dealt with in fragmentary manner only in books that have come to our notice. So it is well that this new work has been issued, especially as it is both comprehensible and practical, and it should meet with a ready sale among plantmen, nurserymen and gardeners. There are nineteen chapters covering in detail topics of germination and longevity of seeds, propagation by buds, layering, cuttings, grafting, etc., fruit tree stocks, cions, etc., and there are eight pages of condensed cultural instructions in tabulated form, covering annuals and perennials from seed, woody plants, evergreens, vines, bulbs and tubers, greenhouse and house plants, ferns, palms, water plants, orchids and cacti. The illustrations are numerous, comprising 213 figures and halftone plates. There are 322 pages well bound and on heavy paper, teeming with helpful information. It is a book which no cultivator can afford to do without. It is worth many times its price. Copies can be supplied from the office of HORTICULTURE at publisher's price, $1.50.

FREAKISH FACTS AND FACTLESS FREAKS.

Florists Mourn.

The Society of American Florists agreed to restrict the expenditure for flowers for Christmas Day to $100 each. This is a restriction which every one probably connected with the practice excepted of the Pennsylvania florists.

Cannibal Plant Sighs for Forbidden Mouse.

Whisper it, so the S. P. C. A. won't hear! The first of the plant from Orange, N. J., to the Pennsylvania florists, was a cannibal mouse, but before the management could have its meals sent in from some neighboring restaurant.

The first of the plant from Orange, N. J., to the Pennsylvania florists, was a cannibal mouse, but before the management could have its meals sent in from some neighboring restaurant.

USE THIS PURE PLANT FOOD

GARDEN

MAGIC HUMUS is a pure plant food, unleached and unburnt. Its analysis proves that it contains potash, phosphoric acid, nitrogen and Compost in available form.

MAGIC HUMUS COMPOST possesses the ability and power to absorb and retain Nature's moisture after it is put into the ground and spreads its fertilizing elements through the soil.

Months are occupied in the preparation of MAGIC HUMUS. It reaches the garden free from weed seed and can be readily handled.

The garden receiving a liberal application of MAGIC HUMUS COMPOST is permanently enriched with plant food and soil.

The "King"
Of the Philadelphia Show

King GREENHOUSES

Have a special type of construction, which permits of great strength without the need of heavy shadow-casting supports. This gives the plants all the sunlight all day long.

In addition to its great strength the King type of construction lends itself to the graceful sweeping lines which harmonize with any style of architecture. That is why a practical, productive King house is in itself a thing of beauty.

We can build you any kind of a greenhouse you desire; when you send for bulletin No. 47 why not describe that house you have always wanted, that ideal greenhouse of your dreams. Our experts will gladly and without any obligation, work your ideas into a practical sketch. Since the days of fairy tales a King has been able to make dreams come true.

All the Sunlight All-Day Houses

The Co. H. Shubart house at Holyoke, Mass. The columns are double angles riveted together.

Which Column Is Best? Double Angle—I-Beam—Or Pipe

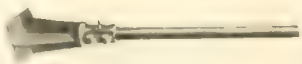

When you consider that the columns in your house support such loads more weight than any other part, the importance of the right column is of great importance.

At once the double angle bolted together column comes to mind by some to be a decided improvement over the pipe columns, because they are supposed to be stronger and yet seemed lighter. However, however, have proven that a pipe column of same width of diameter and containing the same amount of iron is just as strong and as light as a double angle.

Now the beam column the same is true. It is a well established fact that any circular column is stronger than an angular one.

Whenever we have used a double angle column it has always been riveted close together, no spacing between.

It was generally considered that the I-beam column would be less liable to "buckle" than the pipe, but practice proves otherwise.

All our pipe columns in the reconstructed construction are set in their cast iron foot bases. No part of the column is below grade line.

because it diffuses the light more, quite as water laps around anything that is round, and strikes against anything flat or angular.

In our constructions we have used all three kinds of columns, but are advising pipe columns for all the houses we are now erecting.

The ancient Greek buildings were, as you know, mainly supported by circular columns, and when you consider how so many of them have stood all these years, it looks as if the Greek builders knew what they were about.

Let us tell you, point by point, every structural point of our entire Reconstructed Construction. You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Care of Orchids

Use judgment now in shading so the foliage will not burn. The amount and frequency of the watering, sprinkling of the floors, etc., will depend largely upon the weather. As the season advances more air will be needed and consequently syringings overhead once or twice a day will be necessary. Air should be left on during damp weather to prevent the young growth from rotting. Cattleya Trianae, Percivaliana and others, starting action in poor material should be repotted. Coelogyne cristata will now have finished blooming and will soon start into new growth. A free cool atmosphere with spraying overhead once or twice a day should be given. Keep all the plants clean by sponging as orchids are very liable to be overrun with insects.

Gardenias

Stock that was propagated in January should now have a shift into 4-inch pots, which will hold them until planting-out time in June. A good compost is fibrous loam three parts, very old cow manure and leaf mold one part each and some sand. Damping down will now be necessary, morning, noon and night, and the plants must be examined each day and watered only if they need it, for even whilst growing, they should not be kept in a saturated condition. Keep temperature of 65 to 70 degrees at night with about 10 to 15 degrees higher with sunshine and have an abundance of moisture in the atmosphere continuously. To attain success with gardening atmospheric conditions play a most important part.

Pot Evergreens

Boxes, laurels, aucubas, hollies and many other evergreens that have been kept in a rather damp shed or house should be placed in a very cool house where they can have plenty of ventilation. Just before the new growth starts they should have some judicious pruning and trimming to correct any imperfections. Syringe freely and give them occasional liquid feeding. Give a top-dressing of loam and cow manure in equal quantities, with a liberal sprinkling of fine bone. Remove as much of the old surface soil as possible and replace with this mixture. The sweet bay—or Laurus nobilis—is preeminently ahead of all other evergreens. There is an increasing and continuous demand for evergreens in pots or tubs for inside and outside decorations.

Next Week: ASTERS; ANTHURIDS; CHRYSANTHEMUMS for Large Specimens; Stephanotis; Seedling Amaryllis; Planting Seed Outside.

Poinsettias

Old plants that have been resting since the new year can now be started, shortening back the stems and repotting in as small pots as the roots will permit. Remove all stock plants to a well-lighted bench where there is a temperature of about 65 degrees at night. They can be potted into any good compost. Give each pot good drainage as they will not do well without it. Give them a good soaking of water and then keep rather on the dry side until the plants start into growth and they will soon produce a quantity of cuttings. When cutting in you can use the old-wood cuttings and by placing in a warm frame and keeping the temperature from 65 to 70 degrees, in about three or four weeks they will be rooted. Pot them into three-inch pots using a good loam with one-fourth of rotten manure. Cuttings can be rooted at any time from now until the middle of August. Those propagated in July and August are fine for making up pans, but the earlier ones will give the finest bracts for cutting.

Primulas

The earliest sown primulas are now nice little plants with several leaves. Timeliness in transplanting is a point principally to be observed. Use a compost of equal parts of new soil and leaf mold, with a little well decayed cow manure. Give a light shelf or bench where the temperature will not run over 50 degrees at night. Never let them suffer for want of water and syringe on all fine days. A comfortable spacing out once a week will give them more room to grow. Look every ten days or fortnight for aphids, and where they are seen fumigate immediately. In about six weeks they should be ready for two-inch pots, using a compost of fibrous loam four parts, cow manure and leaf mold one part each. They are benefited by a light shading during the hottest part of the day. Give air daily whenever possible always avoiding cold draughts and do not try to force them.

Late Propagation

All such stock as coleus, pelargoniums and zonale, variegated or rose geraniums, lantanas, bouvardis, verbenas, etc., can be rooted within the next ten days and make fair stock for late sales. Also put in cuttings of hydrangeas, chrysanthemums, fuchsias, heliotropes, etc. Where these are not sold they will make fine plants for planting out.

The St. Louis wholesalers are certain long on courage, if our news notes tell the truth about their Easter performance. It takes some "sand" to refuse to open up and do business on Easter Sunday morning in the face of the allied forces of retailers and growers. It is a problem hard to deal with but we are of the opinion that it would be better in the long run for all interests if the flower markets should all close up tight on Sunday throughout the year, except for the care of shipments arriving unavoidably on that day. A few sales might be lost but, on the other hand, the retailer wish-to be prepared to meet some emergency call on Sunday would then find it necessary to lay in a supply on Saturday for that purpose, something he need not do now when the wholesaler is willing to carry stock subject to his call. The great difficulty is in getting all to agree and to stick to the agreement and that is where St. Louis seems to have accomplished something noteworthy.

The old notion that only a very limited number of varieties could be profitably grown for commercial cut flower use seems now to have been pretty well refuted, as will be plainly evident to anyone who has opportunity to observe the great variety of stock offered in the wholesale marts from day to day. Each season has its crop of comparatively new things which are put forward for popular favor by growers who are not willing to stand still and simply follow along in the same ruts as their neighbors. The only way, however, to compel attention and give a new subject a fair start is to show it at its very best and in adequate quantities to make an impression. There can be no more effectual way for permanently injuring the prospects of any new candidate for popularity than by introducing it in inferior quality. Far better not to touch it at all until it can be done well. There is in any case a certain amount of risk to be assumed in the preparing and placing on the market of any new thing but the possibilities of failure will be largely decreased by the exercise of good judgment as to the time and place and other circumstances attending the debut, but most of all by showing the goods in a degree of quality as near to perfection as can possibly be attained.

The great spring floral festival having passed into history, other activities scheduled for the weeks which intervene between now and the summer quietude will now claim attention. In many places Memorial Day holds a prominence scarcely less than that of Easter and in such section the production of well-grown crops of appropriate material that can be depended upon as to time, regardless of the condition of outdoor products, can hardly be overdone. We presume that unwisely promoted enterprise—Mother's Day—will also call for more or less advance preparation in some circles. June weddings and school graduations too, are only a few weeks removed and there are strong indications that the amount of garden planting done this season will be of unprecedented extent, in both hardy and tender material. In the way of exhibitions all past records for a similar period of the year will be beaten. Boston's big May show, the notable garden exhibition at Pelham Bay Park, New York, in early June and the four proposed sweet pea shows of June and July are all outstanding affairs that will help to keep things stirring horticulturally as never before. All America will have to stay at home this year and this grand opportunity, the like of which will never occur again, to push horticulture into the foreground as a rational and all absorbing substitute for foreign travel and attendant diversions must not be neglected in any respect if we are to extract from it the full advantage which lies so easily within our reach. "Make hay while the sun shines."

Keep the Fires Going

Do not let the fires go out as soon as the first few days of warm weather come around. This may save a little coal but the plants will suffer in the end, getting a dose of mildew almost without fail. It will do the houses no good to run cold at night, with the damp chilly air creeping in from the outside. With the houses planted late there will still be a good many roses to cut before they are replanted and if these roses can be kept free from mildew and be of good quality otherwise, there will still be quite a little money coming in. The amount of coal consumed will be very little compared to the good it will do the plants. With good boilers which are big enough the fires will not need much attention at night and arrangements to care for them can be made even on a small place having no regular night man in the spring and summer. It is a little more difficult to fire with small coal as the boilers cannot be loaded down with it but where larger coal is burned it is very simple to load up to last for four or five hours. If there is no steam in the houses shut off some of the hot-water pipes, thus directing the circulation into one or two coils, giving these circulation which would be impossible to secure with a low fire and the whole system turned on. In turning off some of the pipes on the hot-water system some thought should be given to the effect that the remaining pipes will have on the distribution of heat. Conditions vary, and in some localities the wind will hit the houses in such a way as to make it necessary to use the coils in the center of the house instead of the coils around the wall as is customary.

Pot-Bound Plants

Even with careful planning there may be a batch of plants that will come a little ahead of time, and as they are in the largest pot it is not possible to shift them again until after they are planted, or it may be that room has to be made before a certain lot of plants can be shifted into larger pots. In either case the plants will likely become pot-bound and will receive a severe check both in growth and in root as well. To prevent this a light dressing of bonemeal every week will keep them moving until a time when they can be either planted or repotted. Of course it is much better for the plants to be potted or planted on time and the method mentioned above should be used only in emergencies and should not be practiced except when circumstances prevent work being done on time. In applying the bonemeal make sure that it is put on evenly so that all the plants will receive about the same amount. This will insure even growth, and prevent some plants from getting stunted while others are making too much growth. Liquid manure had better not be used on pot-bound plants, as it will likely produce a lot of very rapid and weak soft growth which will be easy prey to mildew. Water the plants before the bone is applied and do not apply it until the foliage is thoroughly dry, so that there will be no bonemeal sticking to the leaves. Water the plants directly after it is applied, so as to get it into the soil and to remove what little dust there may be sticking to the leaves here and there.

Care of Outdoor Roses

Many growers have quite a number of plants growing outside mostly for cut flowers in the summer, to go out on small orders when greenhouse roses are scarce. There is no better time than now to go through these and pull out all the perennial weeds that may have established themselves among the plants last summer. These can be easily pulled up now while the ground is still moist, something which will be almost impossible after the ground dries out a bit. If the plants have not been pruned as yet it is time to do it before many of the buds start. The mulch they received last winter can be left right among them, thus doing away with a good deal of hoeing and also keeping the soil cool for the roots to work in. To save space it will be best to have these roses planted about as they are in the greenhouse benches, with paths between every four or five rows. The walks should be higher than the beds instead of lower unless the roses are planted in very wet ground. The higher paths will be welcome if the plants have to be watered with a hose as the water will quickly drain to the plants leaving the paths dry. A line of irrigation nozzles put up over the rose beds will pay for itself the first season, not only in the time saved but also because it will insure water when the plants need it.

By moving and replacing many of the trees on the campus, the landscape gardeners at the University of Wisconsin plan to make a number of changes this spring that will enhance the beauty of the university grounds. Many of the trees are crowded and the plan is to take these away and plant others where they can grow as they should. Linden Drive, which leads to the College of Agriculture, will be widened from twenty to forty-eight feet. Many red and white pines and evergreens will be secured from the state conservation department and planted in various places on the campus. A pine plantation will be established on Eagle Heights, about three miles from the main campus. Trees in other positions will be moved and many will be transplanted to the lake shore to shield the power house

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS

The thirty-second meeting of the executive board of the society was held at the Hotel Wallon, Philadelphia, March 28 and 29. With two exceptions, every member was present, as follows:

President, S. F. Kerr, St. Paul, Minn.; Vice-President, H. A. Wirth, New York City; Secretary, N. A. W. Kerr, New York City; Treasurer, J. A. Peterson, Omaha, Neb.; J. A. Peterson, director, Cincinnati, O.; Wm. R. Nicholson, director, Elmhurst, Ill.; Angelo J. Rossi, director, Knoxville, Tenn.; S. S. Pennock, president, American Rose Society; Joseph H. Hill, president, American Carnation Society; Irwin Bertermann, president, Florists' Telegraph Delivery; Henry Weston, president, New York Florists' Club; Patrick Welch, past president, Boston, Mass.

And in addition there were present: J. A. Peterson, New York City; Wm. R. Nicholson, Elmhurst, Ill.; Angelo J. Rossi, Knoxville, Tenn.; S. S. Pennock, American Rose Society; Joseph H. Hill, American Carnation Society; Irwin Bertermann, Florists' Telegraph Delivery; Henry Weston, New York Florists' Club; Patrick Welch, Boston, Mass.

Reports from the secretary and treasurer were presented and accepted, both showing the affairs of the society to be in excellent shape. Recommendations made by the treasurer in regard to certain of the society's securities were approved and adopted. The reports were referred to an auditing committee.

The committee on proposed amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws, Theo. Wirth, chairman, presented a lengthy report covering changes recommended at the San Francisco convention. After considerable discussion these amendments were all adopted for submission to the Houston convention.

The following are the articles and sections as amended:

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE V.

Article V. Meetings.

Section 1. At the thirty-second annual meeting to be held August 15 to 18 in Houston, Texas, the meeting places for the years 1917 and 1918 shall be selected by ballot, and at the meeting of 1917 and at every meeting thereafter, the meeting place for the second year following that meeting shall be so selected.

The meeting shall be held on the evening session of the first day of each annual convention.

The time for the annual meeting shall be the third Tuesday of August in each year, continuing for three days, or until all business is completed.

The city applying for the meeting shall, with its written application, provide the free use of a place for the purposes of a convention, which place shall be available from the early spring of the year before the meeting to the late fall of the year of the meeting.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE II.

"Article II. Section 2. Elections and Appointments."

The president, first vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and two directors shall be elected by ballot at the annual meeting of the society, and their term of office shall begin with the first day of January next succeeding the election. The term of office of the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer shall be one year, and the term of office of the directors three years, or until their successors are duly elected and qualified.

Section 3. Duties of Officers.

(a) President.—The president shall preside at all meetings of the society, and exercise a general supervision of its affairs. He shall report from time to time such measures as seem necessary for promoting the interests of the society.

He shall annually, on the first day of January, appoint one botanist, one entomologist, one vegetable pathologist, and one state vice-president for each state or territory represented in the society; he shall act as chairman of the executive board at its meetings and sign all diplomas and certificates of the society.

Section 2. Elections and Appointments.

The president shall appoint on the first day of January of each year, or as soon thereafter as may be possible, one or more state vice-presidents from each state and territory represented in the membership, to serve for a term of one year. Clubs, societies or kindred organizations of professional florists, gardeners and horticulturists may be permitted to elect a representative to the society.

The S. A. F. and O. H. shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors. Such representative shall be the president of such organization and must be a member of this society. Any elective officer or appointed director shall not be eligible as a representative of such organization. When the president of any such organization is already a director, the vice-president shall be eligible for the office. An organization providing for representation shall submit to the secretary of this society a certified copy of the resolution adopted by their organization that they wish such representation on the board of directors, together with a complete list of its membership. It shall be the secretary's duty to confirm same and submit it to the president for final confirmation. Announcement of such director shall be made by the president.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE II.

Article II. Officers, Their Election and Duties.

Section 2. Elections and Appointments. Paragraph (d).

The secretary shall cause official ballots to be prepared according to the "Australian" form containing the names of all candidates nominated for the various elective offices. Balloting shall take place at the morning session of the third day of the annual meeting. The secretary shall prepare four election books, in which the names of members eligible to vote are alphabetically arranged. Book 1 to contain all names from letter "A" to letter "D" inclusive. Book 2 to contain all names from letter "E" to letter "K" inclusive. Book 3 to contain all names from letter "L" to letter "R" inclusive. Book 4 to contain all names from letter "S" to letter "Z" inclusive. The secretary shall provide a ballot box for each book. The president or presiding officer shall appoint one checker for each book, and one receiver for each ballot box, and one judge of election, who shall have charge of the checkers and receivers who together with him, form the election board. They shall after the close of the polls, assort and count the votes cast and report the results to the convention. The polls shall remain open from 10 A. M. to 11 A. M., or until all legal voters in line at that time shall have an opportunity to cast their votes. A majority of all the votes cast shall be necessary for an election; and the president or presiding officer shall declare who is elected. In case of failure to elect on the first ballot, the president shall order a new ballot immediately, polls to remain open one hour; should this ballot fail to elect, the president shall order a third ballot, polls to remain open one hour; this ballot shall be limited to the two candidates receiving the highest vote on preceding ballot.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE III.

Government, Executive Board.

Between the sessions of the society its government shall be vested in an executive board, consisting of the president, junior vice-president, first vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and the board of directors.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE II.

Election and Appointment of Officers, Directors, and Committees, and Their Respective Duties.

Section 1. Standing Committees and Their Duties.

Paragraph (a) Standing Committee on Conventions and Gardens. The president assuming office January 1, 1917, shall appoint three members, one serving three years, one two years, and one one year. Each next elected president when taking office shall appoint one member to serve three years. This committee shall have full charge of all convention garden arrangement work under the direction of the executive board. The members shall elect their own chairman, and shall be subject to the call of the president and the executive board.

Paragraph (b) Publicity Committee. The president assuming office January 1, 1917, shall appoint five members, one to serve five years, one four years, one three years, one two years, one one year. Each next elected president when taking office shall appoint one member to serve five years. The members shall elect their own chairman.

It shall be the duty of this committee to keep up an efficient campaign of proper horticultural and floricultural advertisement along educational and progressive lines, in trade papers, periodicals, and the press in general.

Paragraph (c) American Horticultural Products Committee. The president assuming office January 1, 1917, shall, and each next elected president upon taking office shall, appoint three members to serve one year.

It shall be the duty of this committee to advocate, induce, promote, and assist in every possible way the production in this country of horticultural products now imported from foreign lands.

NOTE.—The committee believes that all other standing committees created by the society at its different annual meetings should be classed under this new Section 4.

Vice-President Kerr made a lengthy report covering the plans and arrangements made for the housing of the Houston Convention and Trade Exhibition. The convention hall, he said, would provide an area of 20,000 square feet for display space, which he thought would be ample. The hall was located three blocks from Rice's Hotel, which would be headquarters, and five blocks from the convention garden. Work on the convention garden, he said, was in active progress, and its success was practically assured. Some action had been taken, he said, in regard to getting low railroad rates to Houston, and it seemed quite probable that a one and one-third rate would be secured over all railroads in the United States.

The committee on convention garden was appropriated a sum not to exceed $500 for purposes of the garden.

The first business at Wednesday morning's session was the reading of the report of the auditing committee, which found the reports of the secretary and treasurer to be correct, and complimented these officers upon the efficient work shown in the reports.

The matter of arrangements for the trade exhibits at Houston was again discussed, and it was decided to make the rate for exhibition space 40 cents per square foot.

The publicity committee, through its chairman, Irwin Bertermann, reported progress. The committee had not had a full meeting. Consequently, a report could not be presented at this time. Mr. Bertermann, however, made a short address in which he embodied his personal ideas. It was evident that the prevailing idea as to a publicity campaign was that its cost was not within the reach of the society. He was of the opinion that a small beginning might be made through the employment of a capable man, well versed in matters pertaining to the business, with compensation of five hundred to one thousand dollars per year for his services, and he made this recommendation. A very lengthy discussion of this proposition ensued. Finally, on motion, it was decided that a publicity man be engaged to operate under the direction of the secretary at a salary of fifteen dollars per week, with the approval of the publicity committee, any legitimate expenses to be vouched for by the chairman of the committee; and, further, that if the committee should see fit to send out an appeal for funds to carry the campaign further, it is authorized to do so.

A communication from the Mothers' Day International Association, Inc., was read asking the society to co-operate with the association in giving publicity to the proper day for the celebration of "Mothers' Day," the second Sunday in May, and the fact that the emblem of the association was the white carnation.

On motion of Mr. Kasting, the board unanimously acceded to the request, and a copy of the resolution was immediately given out to representatives of the daily press and Associated Press.

The following appropriations were made:

Office of Entomologist .....	$100.00
Office of Pathologist .....	100.00
Office of Botanist .....	100.00
Members' buttons .....	100.00
Clerical assistance at convention ..	100.00
School garden committee ..	100.00
Legislative committee ..	100.00
Sergeant-at-Arms .....	50.00
Sports committee .....	50.00
Secretary's office, as usual ..
Official stenographer ..
(Traveling expenses additional) ..	125.00

The question of further support of the Mothers' Day movement instituted by the association headed by Miss Anna Jarvis was discussed at length, and, on motion, the secretary was instructed to send an appeal to all the members of the society for a subscription toward the Mothers' Day fund.

The secretary was directed to invite the presentation of two essays at the Houston convention.

Adjournment was then taken until after luncheon.

At the final session many matters tending to make the work of the society of greater service to its members were considered, among them the compilation of a trade directory which should be reliable and strictly up-to-date. Some earnest discussion upon the subject ensued, resulting in the carriage of a motion that a committee of three be appointed to look into the advisability of the issuance of a trade directory by the society, or any other publication, the committee to report at the Houston convention.

The secretary was instructed to prepare an Order of Business for the Convention, and another one for the meetings of the executive board, anything not covered to be proceeded with under Roberts' "Rules of Order."

Prof. H. B. Dörner, of the University of Illinois, Urbana, was present, and was given the privilege of the floor. The Professor explained that he appeared before the board as the representative of members of the society

DAHLIA GERTRUDE MANDA.

NEW DAHLIA GERTRUDE MANDA.

Raised by W. A. Manda.

The dahlia depicted on this page is one of a sensational set of novelties raised by W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., and introduced by him last year. The color is a luminous peach-blow and, as the picture indicates, the flower is of medium size carried on long graceful stems and well adapted for decorative use as a cut flower. It sold well in the New York cut flower market last fall.

connected with the faculties of different universities and colleges who desired, in the interests of the society, to organize a section to be composed of all members interested in educational and research work pertaining to the profession. The group was strongly interested along certain lines, the work being sufficiently important to warrant the support of the society to the extent of making it a section and furnishing accommodations in the way of quarters for its members at the society's different exhibitions, where contact could be had with florists and others having problems which merited the active interest of such a section. Such a section, he suggested, should be known as the "College Florists' Section." The proposition proving favorable to the board, the section as stated was on motion authorized.

Other matters were considered informally, taking up the time of the board until adjournment. At the close of the meeting Mr. Welch pointed out that his membership on the board was practically then expiring and in a graceful speech expressed the pleasure he had experienced in meeting at different times with his brother members and his regret at not being able officially to continue with them, but he was satisfied that the affairs of the society were in good hands and the organization would be kept moving along progressive lines.

After a motion directing the secretary to transmit a letter of thanks to the local organizations for courtesies shown to the board, adjournment was taken to Monday, August 14, at Houston.

PUBLICATION RECEIVED.

American Carnation Society—Proceedings of the 25th annual meeting, held in St. Louis, Mo., on January 26 and 27, 1916. A 92-page report that will measure up well with the preceding yearly issues. A portrait of President Joseph Hill, and full page illustrations of Crystal White, Nancy, Belle Washburn and Laura Weber carnations and of a retail display at St. Louis give pictorial spice to the book. The proceedings are reported verbatim.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting was held April 18th in Mechanics Hall, Orange. Peter Duff, Jr., was elected to membership. An essay entitled "Estate Management and the College Graduate," by Morrell Smith, of New York, was read. Max Schneider received the following points on his exhibits: Sweet peas, 65; stocks, 95; carnations, 90; Primula obconica grandiflora, 85. The judges were Fritz Berglund, Emil Panuska and William Reid. GEO. W. STRANGE, Sec.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, Mass., delivered a lecture on "Gladoli" at the regular monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society last week.

The Retail Florists' Association met last week to further discuss the details of the flower show to be held in Reading, Pa., Nov. 2-4. The location of the show has not as yet been decided upon. This committee is in charge of the arrangements: Fulmer Lauck, Clayton Butts, Philip Loundon, Jacob Bauder, Lee Arnold, Harry Heck and Stanley Giles.

The last lecture of the season was given before the Medford, Mass., Horticultural Society on the evening of April 25, by Wm. N. Craig of Brookline, Mass., on Outdoor Annuals and How to Grow Them Successfully. He spoke in a very entertaining manner for about an hour and by the number of people in the audience the writer observed taking notes, the practical information imparted will be made use of the coming season. At the close of his lecture Mr. Craig answered many questions on other matters of horticultural interest to his hearers. One of our amateurs said to me that such practical lecturers as Mr. Craig should be widely known in the cities and towns of our Metropolitan district, as it is just the kind of information a beginner is in need of and is so much

EVERY BOY AND GIRL SHOULD HAVE A HAMILTON WATERTITE RAINY DAY OUTFIT

WELL PREPARED FOR A RAINY DAY

Protect your BOYS and GIRLS with this Outfit. RAINCOAT—CAP—SCHOOLBAG

Sent Parcel Post Prepaid.

Price Complete, $4.75

Sizes 4 to 16

No Boy or Girl of School age should be without the protection of this splendid School Outfit, especially when it can be purchased complete for the very low price of $4.75. The Caps and School Bags are made from the same materials as the Coats, and make this Rainy Day Outfit exceptionally attractive. The Black and White Shepard Check trimming on our Girl's Outfit is a very handsome and attractive addition, and makes this Outfit one that both Mother and Daughter will be proud of.

THESE OUTFITS MADE FOR SERVICE AS WELL AS APPEARANCE

The Girl's Outfit is made from a high grade Navy Blue Gros Grain Poplin, in single texture with a substantial rubber coating, making it light in weight yet wind and rain proof. The Boy's Outfit is made from a strong durable material in the popular Olive shade, thoroughly waterproof, and reinforced with a serviceable plaid lining. All seams are reinforced, strapped, and cemented, and both the Boy's and Girl's Coats have ventilation eyelets under the arms.

Satisfaction Guaranteed or Money Refunded

We guarantee every Hamilton Watertite Raincoat to be exactly as represented, and if when it is received, it is not entirely satisfactory, it may be returned to us, and we will cheerfully refund the purchase price.

Counter Trade.

Counter trade throughout the middle and New England states is still more or less unsatisfactory, due entirely to the weather. There have been some pleasant, fairly warm days during the past two or three weeks, but on the whole we have had very little of typical spring weather. Those who depend largely on counter trade are beginning to feel anxious as they realize it is getting late, and many believe that ground lost in spring sales is never wholly recovered. Undoubtedly spring will come, and in the very near future, but it will be so late that many items which would have been purchased early in the season had the weather been favorable, will now be passed up until another year. This is where the retail seedsmen lose much valuable business.

About Beans.

While special offers of seeds are still being scattered broadcast by certain dealers, very few are offering the leading varieties of wax and green pod beans. We have noticed on one or two occasions that these surplus lists carried a large number of varieties which we do not believe could be purchased of the parties sending George Porter, an employee of the McCallum Company, had his left eye removed and a cataract in the right eye reduced last Friday in St. Francis Hospital.

Pittsburgh's three big Easter flower shows eclipse those of any previous season. Each seems superlatively beautiful and is so distinctive in its way and unlike the others that comparisons are impossible. Supt. Geo. W. Burke and his foremen, John W. Jones and James Moore, respectively of the Schenley and West Parks conservatories, are certainly most deserving of the congratulations which are showered upon them by the multitude of admiring visitors from both home and abroad. At Schenley Park, the Victoris Regia house is temporarily transformed into an enormous mound of lilies surrounded by water. The border line is of Queen Alexandra spiraea, and baby rambles here and there emphasizing the pure white of the dominating lilies. In the Nymphaea house are three mounds formed of blue, white and pink French hydrangeas respectively. In the rose house rambles, hybrid tea roses, Azalea mollis, boxes, hydrangeas and astilbes are charmingly arranged.

A brilliant Holland garden now occupies the west wing of the Economic house. In the midst of the garden is a thatched Dutch house surrounded by double daffodils and five elevated circular mounds of narcissus. This end is backed up with flowering shrubs, iris, columbine, etc. The south wing of the Economic house forms the Children's garden. The garden itself includes four beds of pansies, baby rambler roses, lilies and herbaceous plants and shrubs. In the west end of the building is a fine display of Brazilian caladiums, dendrobiums, gloxinias, etc. Cinerarias predominate in the south wing. The azalea house too, is a mass of bloom.

As usual, the educational feature of the West Park show shows an unkempt house and grounds on one side, while on the other is a remodelled place. The rose house is charmingly trellised and arched with rambler roses. The French hydrangea display is given variety by tall plants of Nicotiana glauca, and an elevated center of genistas.

The most distinctive show room of the Heinz conservatory forms a sunken garden of great beauty, the extreme background showing small cherry and apple trees, rhododendrons, lilies, spiraea and azaleas. Flowing down the sides is a waterfall ending in a charming pond.

CHICAGO.

Shakespeare's statue in Lincoln Park was the resting place of a large number of wreaths, bouquets and pot-ten plants on the day of the gift of Shakespeare's statue and wreaths.

The flower sale for the destitute crippled children, which took place on the day before Easter, netted that worthy cause eight thousand dollars.

Ed. Hanswirth, for many years in the florists' business in Chicago and lately employed in the wholesale market, has again embarked in business for himself at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

The extremely small roses are in great favor this season. As a leading wholesaler said, extremely large or the tiniest of the small roses, are the fancy of the moment. Of the latter the little Sweetheart rose in pink is having a great run, the result of the size, color and name combination, and its companion in yellow, the Mrs. George Elgar is very popular. Made up in the small colonial corsage bouquets or used alone they are dainty and beautiful, but require skillful handling.

Early last Saturday morning the store of the George Wittbold Co., was entered by way of the basement, by three burglars who tried by brutal treatment to force the night watchman, John Popescu, to turn over the money. He refused and was beaten almost into insensibility and left bound in the basement. The robbers left without getting any plunder and Popescu worked himself loose and went to notify Louis Wittbold. No trace of the robbers has been found. The watchman was taken to the Alexian hospital where he was found to be severely injured. The firm has been doing a big business all the Easter week and a thousand dollars was in the safe.

If we are to judge by the various reports made by the retailers and wholesalers Easter of 1916 was a highly successful one. The one sad feature of the affair was the heavy rain of Saturday and this alone prevented many from breaking all former records for business. Violets, owing to the late date of the festival, were scarce and of a poor quality so the public must needs look elsewhere for a substitute. Sweet peas, according to what Henry Penn says filled the gap most admirably. Julius Zinn states that bulb stocks were much in demand, and Mr. Slattery of Galvin's reports an unprecedented sale of pot roses. The Boston Cut Flower Store cleaned out on nearly everything and Mr. Rosenthal, or rather Mrs. Rosenthal—said that the only regret to be registered was the poor weather on Saturday which prevented many buyers from coming out.

With the wholesalers all went well. P. Welch and Welch Bros. both report a tremendous shipping trade on Wednesday and Thursday, for lily plants especially. The H. M. Robinson Co. worked all day and half through the night from the first day of the week till the last, in getting their orders out. B. A. Snyder claims a clean sweep. McAlpine & McDonald, handled double the quantity of lily of the valley and lilies they did last year. Wm. Molloy, manager for the Budlong Rose Co., states that 90,000 roses would be a conservative estimate for their week's sales. A marked preference for Scott Key and Hadley was shown by purchasers and consequently a shortage of these varieties resulted—as we predicted last week. The Polyanthus primrose was eagerly bought up. Evidently it has come to stay as an Easter favorite. It is safe to say that the florists of Boston never had a more prosperous Easter.

NEW YORK.

J. H. Small & Sons remove on May 1 from the store which they have occupied on Broadway for twenty-five years to a new and very desirable location at 505 Madison avenue, corner 52nd street.

By mutual consent, the firm of Henshaw & Fenrich will dissolve April 29th. Joseph S. Fenrich will do business under his own name at 51 W. 28th street, and A. M. Henshaw will operate the Henshaw Floral Co. at 127 W. 28th street.

Anglin & Walsh Co., who recently established their office at 335 Broadway, will remove on May 1 to Williamsbridge where they will have business facilities and room not available in a downtown office. Fine callas and freesias are leading specialties with this firm by whom many of the large dealers are supplied with these goods in quantity.

With the smaller growers of plants for the cheap markets the Easter result was not very pleasing. Saturday morning saw a long line of them at Union Square standing in the cold drizzling rain waiting for buyers who did not materialize. What eventually became of the tens of thousands of geraniums, lilies, azaleas, hyacinths, genistas, pansies and daisies which turned Union Square into a vast kaleidoscope of color on that inclement morning, we know not.

In May, 1915, McHutchison & Co., purchased the building at 95 Chambers street, and running through to 77 Reade street—a full block long. The building consists of five floors and basement and sub-basement. They will occupy the full first floor on May 1st—27 by 150 feet. Since they commenced business fifteen years ago McHutchison & Co. have moved four times, and each time have doubled the space occupied. We shall not be surprised if in due time the entire building on Chambers street is required to accommodate the business of this hustling concern.

Pink and yellow snapdragon is in the favor among society for use in high-grade dinner and like decorations.

Leo Geier, who is employed at the store of Gude Bros. Co., met with the loss of his father, Bernard J. Geier, last week.

John Robertson, Dewey Strong and Milton Robertson, three employees of Fred H. Kramer, all colored, received treatment at the Freedmans Hospital last week following a collision with an electric light pole by the wagon in which they were riding when the horses ran away with them.

Following a custom inaugurated shortly after they first entered into business, Gude Bros. Co. threw open the doors of their greenhouses in Anacostia to the public on Palm Sunday. Hundreds of visitors took advantage of the firm's invitation, the attendance being greater than ever before.

A bill has been introduced which would make it unlawful for any person to labor or to employ any person to labor or to pursue any trade or worldly business on Sunday, except in works of necessity or charity, newspaper publishers, public service corporations, and also persons who are accustomed to observe regularly some other day of the week on which they refrain from doing what in the bill is prohibited on Sunday.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Easter week was a lively time for the plant growers, who found ready buyers for all they had to offer and on some lines could have done much more if they had the goods to supply. As a rule the stock was of very high quality and the variety was greater probably than on any former occasion. Lilies were well sold out but at prices considerably below earlier quotations. In plant form they cleaned up very well in the stores but in cut form they dragged badly and many were left over unsold. Another flower which was seemingly overdone was the English primrose, of which quite a lot of cut blooms were still in wholesalers' hands when Monday morning came. The flower shipping trade was excellent from Wednesday until Friday, when it practically stopped and material that came in on Friday and Saturday fared rather badly as much of it had been held back contrary to the advice of the wholesale dealers and the weather on Saturday was not conducive to good business. The retailers bought cautiously and Saturday midnight found considerable stuff unsalable at any price. Thursday was a banner day and the market was full of life. Lily of the valley was in light supply all through and was a quick seller. Violets also fared well, but carnations had quite a slump and on Saturday the rose market also fell off. Red roses, however, sold all right at any time. Bulbous stock was limited in quantity. Sweet peas made a good record. Smilax was and still is very scarce. Although quiet as compared with last week some brisk trading is being done this week. The carnation supply is shortening up and prices are beginning to advance. Roses, while not so limited in supply, are not too plentiful and just about meet the demand. Sweet peas are bringing average prices. Violets are no longer to be had at any price. Spanish irises are being purchased largely, especially the longer stemmed blooms, some of which are nearly three feet in length. Gardenias are stationary. Calendulas are lying uncalled for on many shelves. Primroses are now scarce. The general condition of this week's market may be summed up by saying that demand and supply are pretty well balanced.

This has been a busy CHICAGO Easter and the trade generally is quite ready to stop and take breath. From the time shipping began on Wednesday till the last order was taken care of on Easter Sunday the wholesalers were on the jump. Local trade came in strong as the week neared the end and stock poured in in an unceasing stream. Of all kinds that go to make up a normal late Easter supply there was much, but of lilies there was more than enough. There seemed to be no end to the cut lilies and the stems were all the way from short to long and prices covered a good range. It was, however, not a question of price. There were simply more lilies than the market could use. Of the flowers in short supply at the week end sweet peas proved to be the chief. The supply was large and a shortage had not been looked for, but the demand was so great that many wholesalers could not fill their last orders. There were no violets, which tended to make peas move still faster. The supply of roses was very large but all good stock cleaned up at good prices while poor stock probably sold for all that it was really worth. Spanish iris in yellow, purple and white were quite plentiful and calendulas of large size and good color sold well. Lilacs of the choice as well as the common varieties met with ready sale up to a certain amount. The day after Easter was not as quiet as that day frequently is but good stock moved showing retailers had disposed of their Easter supply. The plant trade was certainly good and Easter emptied up many greenhouses in a way that made one wonder what would become of the cut flower business. Even those retailers who placed heavy advance orders added to them repeatedly up to Saturday afternoon and even on Sunday morning deliveries were made. Lily plants were mostly short-stemmed. Azaleas, rhododendrons, spirea and roses were the principal other plants and to this stock was added hyacinths, narcissus and tulips in pans and pots. The late Easter was no detriment to the plant trade in general though there was more or less stock too far open.

Easter business was very good. The early part of the business dragged somewhat but at the end on Saturday the local buyers took up nearly everything in the market. Prices were fair. The cut of lilies was excellent and the largest we ever have had for Easter. At the close of business quite a few were left over. Roses and carnations cleaned up very readily. Roses dragged somewhat at first but cleaned up nicely toward the end of the business. Narcissus poeticus were plentiful and proved good property but other bulbous stock was rather scarce. Sweet peas met with a good demand and more would have been used had they been forthcoming. Other offerings that sold well included snapdragon, callas, lily of the valley and violets. The plant business was good. Blooming plants naturally had the call but the foliage plant, too, met with a pretty fair demand.

As a general statement it may be fairly said that New York's Easter was a splendid success for the florist trade. There were, of course, a few hitches here and there and an occasional development which did not meet with universal approval but perhaps there were fewer of these than for many years back. There was nothing that could be really designated as a "slump" although lilies were somewhat overdone in quantity and prices ran lower on all sides than had been contemplated in advance, and snapdragons were badly turned down by the buyers. Just why this lovely flower got such a knockout here does not plainly appear. The quality of much of the stock offered was very fine and in other markets we understand it sold very well. But New York does unaccountable things sometimes. Swainsona was also badly in the discard. Carnations did not fare as well as the growers hoped for. The fact is that there were a good many shipments into the market which carried the symptoms of senility. On the day after Easter there were a good number of Enchantress carnations left unsold and in such condition that had they been sold would have done the divine flower no good among the flower buyers. Roses pulled through all right but they were abundant and any attempt to inflate prices would have probably resulted in disaster. A distinct preference for the newer varieties of roses was noticeable. Ophelia and Hadley stood in the front rank of preference and realized prices nearly double those obtainable for the older kinds. Bulbous stock was not overplentiful and the tulips and narcissi of various species sold out rapidly at standard prices. Lily of the valley took an amazing jump to the values of a quarter century or more ago, sales at $10.00 per 100, and quotations at $12.00 to $15.00 being registered. Most of the stores had engaged their stock in advance, however, at a standard price of $50.00 per 1000. The situation was much relieved by the appearance in Phil Kessler's hands of a lot of "frame valley" of fine quality, the first cut of the season, at $4.00 per 100—a record

Flower Market Reports

PHILADELPHIA The plant trade repeated its great success of past years. All the prominent growers sold out completely a good while ahead and retailers found difficulty in getting additional material afterwards. There was very little left in the stores by Easter morning that did not have a "sold" tag attached. After the lilies the rambler roses must be given next place in importance and popularity this year. The French hydrangeas which made a whirlwind success, actually driving the old Otaksa out of the market. Some of the azaleas were unevenly flowered, showing the results of long confinement in transit from Europe. Pink Pearl was the leader among the rhododendrons. Comparatively little of the bulbous material was in evidence.

The plant trade repeated its great success of past years. All the prominent growers sold out completely a good while ahead and retailers found difficulty in getting additional material afterwards. There was very little left in the stores by Easter morning that did not have a "sold" tag attached. After the lilies the rambler roses must be given next place in importance and popularity this year. The French hydrangeas which made a whirlwind success, actually driving the old Otaksa out of the market. Some of the azaleas were unevenly flowered, showing the results of long confinement in transit from Europe. Pink Pearl was the leader among the rhododendrons. Comparatively little of the bulbous material was in evidence.

PHILADELPHIA Sweet peas were the feature of the Easter market here this year. Notwithstanding the enormous quantity in sight they all went—and at good prices. Cattleyas were very scarce and it seems that a customer who couldn't get a nice orchid for a dollar was willing to take a bunch of orchid-flowered sweet peas for the same money. There were enough gardenias to go around. American Beauty held her own as a leader in the rose world, closely followed by Russell. Both realized good prices but nothing out of the way. Pink roses also went well. The only sluggish item was in white but fortunately there was no great supply of these. Carnations moved well at moderate figures. High grade lily of the valley was rather scarce and more could have been sold even at the advance prices. No fancy prices this year on cut Easter lilies. Twelve for the fanciest to ten for first-class and eight or less for shorts. Callas seemed to be a bit on the "taboo" list. The same with daisies—and the latter has heretofore generally been in fair demand as an Easter subject. Gladioli made their appearance on Friday, and today, Monday, comes the first shipment of peonies. The latter are from South Carolina and consist of Maxima, Queen Victoria and Edulis Superba—nice stock and quickly picked up.

The plant men from all accounts, have done equally as well as the cut flower growers; and everybody seems to be satisfied and fairly well cleaned out of all that was fit to sell.

PITTSBURGH Notwithstanding the lateness of Easter, with the parks and private grounds aglow with genista, magnolias, forsythia and bulbous blossoms, three public flower shows and gloomy skies and rain, commercially the season was without exception the best in the history of local trade circles. There were plenty of flowers of practically all kinds, and plenty of money to buy them, than which there could be no other explanation. Lilies, particularly, sold well in greater quantities than ever before. On the whole, cut flowers brought about the regular prices, sweet peas and good carnations, only, showing a little increase. Unfortunately, the Hudson River American Beauties and violets arrived about twelve hours late, those due Friday morning not reaching the wholesale houses until seven o'clock that evening. As might be expected, they were by no means up to "concert pitch."

ST. LOUIS From reports gathered this early the 1916 Easter, coming late as it did, was the largest and best the St. Louis florists have ever had. The weather was fine on Saturday and Sunday, which made deliveries pleasant for all. The leading retailers say that it was distinctly a "plant Easter" and never before were there so many sold. The big department stores cut heavily into the plant trade, selling at extremely low prices. Lilies were of exceptionally fine quality both in cut flower and pot plants and this was the leading flower. Next in demand were azaleas, hydrangeas and rhododendrons. Following these were Tausendschoen and Perkins rambler roses. Plans of tulips, Dutch hyacinths and lily of the valley also came in for a big demand. The wholesale flower market was greatly supplied with all seasonable stock and it was a hard matter for the commission men to clean up on any one flower. Roses came in large quantities and at very reasonable prices, except extra fancies. Beauties were in good supply, also Mrs. Russell, and the Killarneys. There was a grand cut of carnations and many more than the demand called for. There were no violets this Easter, but sweet peas were a big glut and sold for very low prices. Orchids demanded a high price owing to the shortage. The wholesalers state that shipping orders were larger than ever before. The local retailers had to purchase all their supply on Saturday as the wholesalers would not open their places on Easter Sunday for business.

WASHINGTON The local retailers have just passed through a most successful Easter business and are very well pleased with results. There was a marked shortage in several lines, but on the whole there was a sufficient quantity of all varieties to fill the demand. The greatest trouble was with respect to orchids which were practically unobtainable the latter part of the week and many of the storemen who had promised them for Easter delivery could not fulfill their promises. The heavy demand from out-of-town places for lily of the valley sent the price on this up to $8 per hundred. The price is now down to normal at $6. Roses sold better this year than ever before. Carnations sold out at very good prices and the present week finds a shortage in the carnation market. Sweet peas were in high favor and brought very good prices. Large quantities of violets were sold, although it was estimated that twice as many could have been moved had the retailers pushed their sale and had not been afraid that they would be off the market before Sunday. Plants brought good prices and the number sold is said to have exceeded last year. Smilax and asparagus are scarce.

Obituary

James MacMachan.

James MacMachan, for seventeen years superintendent for George F. Baker, at Tuxedo Park, N. Y., passed away suddenly on Tuesday morning, April 11th, in the 52nd year of his age. Mr. MacMachan was born in Dundee, Scotland, but at an early age moved to Blairgowrie and while very young began serving his time at Halleburton House. In the years following or until he came to this country he pursued his labors and studied in gardening in some of the best estates in Scotland and Ireland. On arriving in this country Mr. MacMachan took charge of the estate of Geo. F. Baker which in a few years he transformed what was little more than rocky hills and swampy hollows into what has been for many years conceded to be one of the most beautiful and interesting spots in this section. Mr. MacMachan was passionately devoted to his profession; every inch of him was a gardener and everything the ground produced appealed to him. He always took a leading part in all the work connected with the Tuxedo Horticultural Society, having held several offices including that of president. He was also a director for several years of the National Association of Gardeners. The funeral which took place on Friday afternoon, April 14, from St. Mary's church was largely attended by men prominent in the trade in New York and elsewhere, and by the public, and every gardener in this section. Mr. MacMachan is survived by his wife and two daughters. He had many friends here and elsewhere and the sincerest sympathy of all of them goes now to those who are most sadly stricken.

THOMAS WILSON.

Frederick Bolze.

Frederick Bolze, a florist in New York as early as 1860, died last week at his home in Pleasantville, N. Y., in his 70th year. He was active in business until his death. Mr. Bolze was born in Hanover, and was educated at the Royal College of King George of Hanover, receiving a special degree of merit, and soon after coming to this country. He became associated with the florist Buchanan of Astoria, one of the first florists of Long Island. For many years he had a shop in Fifth avenue at 42nd street, and later at Lexington avenue and 54th street. He went to Pleasantville 20 years ago.

Andrew McKnight.

Andrew McKnight, a well-known market gardener of the past generation died in Communipaw, N. J., on April 20, aged 92 years. Mr. McKnight was a contemporary of Peter Henderson and J. Stevens and did a large business in celery and cabbage. Later he built up quite a reputation as a pansy grower. He retired about five years ago, his eyesight having almost gone.

WEED KILLER

THE VERY NEWEST AND QUICKEST METHOD OF DESTROYING WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

We manufacture the strongest line of DISINFECTANTS on the market.

A ROOF GREENHOUSE

The roof greenhouse shown in our cover illustration was completed a few months ago by S. Jacobs & Sons for C. C. Trepel, on the roof of a two-story building at Broadway and 89th street, New York. The size of this curved-eave greenhouse is 35 by 125. Many obstacles had to be overcome in this operation. A special permit was obtained from the building department of New York, because the building was an old structure. The brick walls had to be elevated, a special shaft was built, take passengers to the roof. Fire law regulations had to be met; a concrete roof was laid, a steam heating plant was installed, which heats the entire building and greenhouse. Special provisions were made for heating the greenhouse at night. A difficult drain-and an elevator was installed, so as to age problem was solved. The least of S. Jacobs & Sons troubles were encountered in securing the contract, although it was a strictly competitive job. This greenhouse is in perfect running order, and has been pointed out by many in passing by on account of its artistic beauty. The best feature of it all is that Mr. Trepel has secured a big trade by means of its attractiveness.

USE THIS PURE PLANT FOOD

GARDEN

MAGIC HUMUS is a pure plant food unleached and unburnt. Its analysis proves that it contains potash, phosphoric acid, nitrogen and Compost in available form.

MAGIC HUMUS COMPOST possesses the body and fibre to absorb and retain Nature's moisture after it is put into the ground and spreads its fertilizing elements through the soil.

Months are occupied in the preparation of MAGIC HUMUS. It reaches the garden free from weed-seed and can be agreeably handled.

The garden receiving a liberal application of MAGIC HUMUS COMPOST is permanently enriched with plant food and soil.

Range of greenhouses which we built for Mr. N. Grillo, Rose Grower, of Milldale, Conn. There is absolutely no shade in these houses. The Jacobs patented construction eliminated it entirely.

Any grower who wants his greenhouse built at the lowest cost, and in the shortest time, consistent with good workmanship, can get just what he desires by employing the Jacobs organization for the job. This is a fact which is conceded by many of the biggest greenhouse owners in the country.

While we have been at it almost half a century, we come to you not only with the knowledge accumulated through all this experience, but we are always right up with the times on what's what, and what's new in Greenhouses.

When you think of a greenhouse, no place in the U. S. is too far for us to go, to submit specifications and prices.

One Of Our Free Schools For Workmen How It Overcomes Greenhouse Building Guesswork

IT'S an old saying that "poets are born not made."

Exactly the reverse, however, is true of greenhouse building experts.

They have to be made.

So we proceed to make them in the way they should be made.

We take the raw material and train it.

To best accomplish this we have started at one of our factories a free evening class where any of the workmen can come and learn the geometry, mathematics and engineers facts and figures, about greenhouse planning, building and erecting.

A man may know how to do a certain thing; but he will do it better if he knows why.

In this class they have both the how and the why. The things they learn in theory at night they can prove up by facts in actual shop work in the day time.

So eager are the men to learn that the man who is not interested enough to want to stay—soon finds his fellow workmen looking down on him.

He's out of place and soon looks for another place.

The men themselves, you see, help us sort out the inefficient ones and so are continually stimulating each other for better things.

Those men in the picture working over their problems, are the material from which later on we will make our foremen and superintendents, as needed by any of our three rapidly growing factories.

The day of rule of thumb is past.

Guess work won't do.

Facts and figures only are to be depended on.

This class is only one of many of our methods to make better men for us, so we can make better and better houses for you.

Wrecked by a V-shaped crotch!

To neglect a V-shaped crotch is fatal. It is weak structurally that inevitably wind strain plus it water enters the crevice thus made, and decay starts. Nature meanwhile heals over the surface, but decay continues until it eats its way down through the trunk and eventually the tree becomes an easy victim for any severe storm. Are YOUR trees menaced by this and other hidden agents of destruction? There is only one safe place to find out—go to headquarters—

Davey Tree Surgeons

Tree surgery as they practice it, is scientifically accurate and mechanically perfect. It is safe because it eliminates experiment. It endures. John G. Jennings, of the Lamson & Sessions Co., Cleveland, O., writes: "This is the second season's work you have done for me, and I am glad to assure you that it is very satisfactory." The U. S. Government, after exhaustive official investigation, chose Davey experts as best. Every year of neglect adds 10% to 25% to the cost of saving trees. Have your trees examined. # NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Asters

Young asters should have every care now. Pull the sashes off every good day and when the night promises to be free from frost they are better left uncovered. They like a rather heavy loamy soil, enriched with a liberal amount of thoroughly rotten manure (cow manure preferred) with the addition of wood ashes scattered over the surface at the rate of 30 to 40 bushels per acre. It is better to change the ground each season. Give some extra preparation to the soil now and the asters will repay you with more profuse and finer blooms, and better stems. When they have been planted three or four weeks it will pay to sow guano or some other good fertilizer about 100 to 150 pounds to the acre. After they are planted out give them frequent cultivation which will keep down the weeds and leave the surface of the soil open.

Anthuriums

Anthuriums that have not been potted should have a resurfacing of one part each of peat fibre and sphagnum moss. Cone this up 2 or 3 inches above the rim of the pot around the plant. Give them shade to protect them from the sun. Use care in syringing so as to keep the foliage beautiful. During dark and muggy weather less water should be used. Atmospheric moisture in plenty is essential. They should now be given a night temperature of 65 to 70 and, as the season advances raise it to 75 with a day heat of from 85 to 90 degrees. As the season advances give them more air, but when the temperature drops to 72 degrees see that the air is taken off. See that they have copious supplies of water now and during the summer, as this is their growing period.

Chrysanthemums for Large Specimens

When growing show-plants it is a good plan to start enough of them so that if a few kinds turn out faulty you can afford to discard them. They should be pinched and three shoots allowed to grow. After they have made about six inches more growth pinch again and allow three to each again and so on according to the size of the plant required. Never allow chrysanthemums to have to beg for water and wilt, yet too much may also be just as injurious. Syringe every sunny morning and again in the afternoon on very warm days. Look out carefully for aphids and fumigate regularly. In order to have large plants in the fall they should now occupy at least a six-inch pot. It is very important that the plants should not suffer from being pot-bound, but at the same time it is best to allow the pots to fill up well with roots before repotting. Turfy loam with one-third well-rooted cow manure and a sprinkling of bone is a good compost to use.

Stephanotis

These old time plants are well worth growing if only for their fragrant flowers. Where there is call for bouquets it will be found a very valuable flower. Any grower who has a sunny back wall having a winter night temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees can grow this much neglected plant. It can also be grown well in 12 or 14-inch pots or large tubs and when grown this way can be trained on a balloon-like trellis. The best to grow is Stephanotis floribunda. They are quite easily propagated from last season's growth by placing each cutting in a small pot of sand and leaf mold in equal proportions and plunging in a propagating bench with a good bottom heat and shade until they are rooted. Maintain a humid atmosphere so as to keep the cuttings from wilting. When fairly well-rooted they can be shifted, using a fibrous loam well enriched with manure, re-potting and stopping during the first summer.

Seedling Amaryllis

Amaryllis from seed can be flowered in as short a time as fifteen to eighteen months, but as a general rule growers manage to flower a certain number when two years old, and others not until the third year. In purchasing seed, that handled by specialists should be secured. There is much cheap trashy seed sold which will only prove disappointing. It should be sown in pans or flats and placed in a warm, moist house using a light sandy compost. A little leaf is not long in appearing. When two leaves have been produced pot into 2-inch pots, still growing them moist and warm. As the plants need larger pots use a heavier compost. For the final pottings, two parts of a rather heavy fibrous loam, one part of cow manure, some gritty sand and a dash of soot and fine bone makes a good potting medium.

Planting Seed Outside

Late flowering annuals can be planted out in the open ground now in drill and thinned out later. Balsams, celosia, marigold, calliopsis, gypsophila, helianthus, helichrysum, annual phlox, poppy, salpiglossis, scabiosa, zinnias, etc., given a piece of good ground will give a fine lot of flowers for late cutting.

Next Week: Alamandas; Cycas Stems; Dendrobiums; Forcing Lily of the Valley; Plants for Vases and Window Boxes; Propagating Winter Marguerites.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ryzicka

Keep After Fly

Now that the warm weather is here at last, it may not always be possible to fumigate when the plants need it so no time should be lost in smoking the houses if there is even a trace of fly in them. The fly will increase in numbers very fast and if allowed to multiply unmolested, they will soon cover the plants and suck their very life out. Every fumigation should be followed by a good syringing if at all possible and for this reason it will be best to smoke the houses early just as the dawn is breaking. Smoking at this time will leave even the old fly pretty sick about the time the hose comes along, and once knocked off the plants they will seldom muster enough strength to return. Where the houses have been smoked regularly the plants ought to be pretty clean, the same being true of plants that have been sprayed. With roses we have found it easier to keep the plants clean by fumigation, as it is difficult to reach well under the leaves where the flies stay and all sprays used are contact poisons and have to hit the fly to kill same. Do not use tobacco stems for smoking except in houses carrying the young stock, for the smoke contains a great many gases injurious to the plants, especially to the flowers, and if used in houses where roses are in bloom, it is likely to bleach these badly or else burn their centers out. Tobacco stems will be useless in the walks from now on for there will be too much air on the houses. If there are plenty of these on hand, however, they can be used right around the plants as a mulch, being careful not to apply them too thickly. The fumes from these will help drive the fly to the tops of the plants where it will be easier to kill them; at the same time they will act as a mulch and the plants will get quite a little plant food from the stems. They will also help keep out a great many insects which enjoy living in the coarse mulch around the plants.

Cutting Roses

With warm weather roses will have to be cut a little tighter than was customary during the winter months, more so on places having no ice to keep them. They will open very fast from now on and if they are allowed ment of cut flowers, that they be first judged to determine their respective position for their cultural excellence and afterward placed in the hands of an artist to use them as he sees fit, to make the "Show." The public knows nothing and probably cares but little for the fine distinctions of cultural excellence. It would be difficult for them to distinguish any difference between first and second prize flowers. On the other hand they can distinguish and appreciate the work of an artist in arrangement from one that is not.

The recent show in Philadelphia was a disappointment from an artistic standpoint. Perhaps the least defective exhibit from this view was Mr. Roland's group of acacias and even they would have appeared to better advantage had the border of heaths been absent. The roses in to open pretty well now, so the plants they will be nearly worthless by the time they are sold in the summer. In houses that are to be planted early it will be waste to leave any roses on hand, so it will be best to cut the roses as far back as possible, getting all there is to the stem. It is surprising what difference this will make in the growing, as a large number of roses that were No. 1's formerly will be extras with the additional stem. This will make some difference in the price, making up for the loss by lower prices now paid for roses in the wholesale markets.

Tying

Except in the Beauty houses, the roses will need very little tying from now on; going over them once in a while to straighten them out here and there will be about all that it will pay to do to them. With Beauties it is different, as these will grow like wild now, and if they are not tied up they will lie all over and will amount to very little. It will not be necessary to tie them down so much though as they will set quite freely now and will not harm the shorter ones by shading, as the sun is much stronger and its rays are more penetrating. Those that are too tall had better be tied down so that they will have nice straight stems, as otherwise they will decrease in value, and with plenty of roses coming to the markets, will be difficult to sell.

Blackspot

This may appear here and there through the houses, among the Beauties, Ophelias, even Shawyers. But this should not cause the grower to worry, as it usually does little harm as long as it stays on the old plants. If it were in the fall it would be another thing altogether but in the spring we have never known to have any serious trouble with it. Generally this outbreak can be traced to poorly drained houses. The soil around the outside is usually very wet in the spring, and if no means of drainage is provided the waste water from watering and syringing will not soak away as it does in the fall and summer, making the houses very damp. This, and running the houses to cold towards morning, will largely be responsible for spot and for mildew. A steam pipe around the house all night with a crack of air on will do a great deal towards preventing both diseases. A good dusting of lime every night after watering or syringing will also help dry the air. See that the waste water drains away, instead of standing under the benches and see that no surface water washes in from the outside. All bad places in the glass where water drips should be repaired as soon as time will allow, so that the plants will not be wet all the time it is foggy or wet. We have had plenty of such weather and we may have more.

themselves would have made a "show" had they been used to advantage in conjunction with other subjects and in the hands of an artist in arrangement. As they were, staged row after row, they lacked any sign of artistic arrangement, and had the cards been removed not one per cent. of those who paid admission could have distinguished between the "first" and the last. Furthermore, if the subjects were used with the view of artistic effect in the show as a whole half the material would have sufficed.

Obituary

Louis Colman.

On April 5, Louis Colman, formerly in business as a florist and gardener in Pittsfield and North Adams, Mass., died in Westfield, Mass., on April 5, aged 63 years. His wife and one daughter survive him.

Ira G. Marvin.

Ira G. Marvin, a prominent florist of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., since 1886, died at his home in Kingston, Pa., on April 30. He had been laid up for nine weeks, heart failure causing death. Mr. Marvin was born at Stroudsburg fifty-two years ago. He had branch stores in several towns in the Wyoming valley. His widow and several children, and one brother, Steward Marvin, of Stroudsburg, survive.

Thomas Burke.

Thomas Burke, retired, father of John T. Burke of the florist firm of Burke & Burns of Providence, R. I., died at the home of his son-in-law, Rob't E. Burns, at Hills Grove on April 26, as the result of being struck by an electric car. His age was 75 years. Mr. Burke was a native of Ireland, and came to this country when a youth. He was successful in business and gained a large circle of friends.

John B. Sargent.

John B. Savageau, aged 43, commonly known as John B. Sargent, florist, Winter place, died of blood poisoning at the Leominster, Mass., hospital, on Sunday, April 23, after a short illness. He accidentally scratched one of his fingers and thinking it nothing serious, did not give it the proper care. Blood poisoning developed and Saturday forenoon he was taken to the hospital. His wife passed away two months and two days ago. Mr. Savageau was born in Masonville, R. I., Oct. 2, 1872. When he was 14 years of age he moved to Leominster with his parents. He went to work for Joseph Fuller and learned his trade as florist there. He then went to South Lancaster, where for several years he worked in the greenhouse and gardens of Eugene V. R. Thayer under E. O. Orpet. After that he went to Bolton and was gardener for J. Wyman Jones. He returned to Leominster three years ago and started the florist business with a greenhouse off Winter Place. He lately added to this by buying another. He leaves three children, John, David and Ida; five brothers and two sisters.

NOT A "USELESS EXPENSE."

We often wonder if those who launch the periodical attacks against the many time-honored customs on the ground of "useless expense" are sincere. We are sure that if they are sincere, if they are not merely striving to be odd, to receive a certain amount of publicity, that they have not well considered the reason for the custom. There are few customs that are better worth following than that of sending a tribute of flowers to those who are in deep grief following the passing into the great beyond of a dear relative or friend.

Recently there was given to the press a diatribe against the custom of sending flowers to funerals. It would seem that the writers of this article had never lost the presence of one near and dear and had never had the sweet consolation of receiving from friends and relatives the beautiful testimony, speaking louder than words, that their sorrow was shared by others.

Flowers do more than express a momentary sympathy. They teach a lesson of hope, they remind that there is a resurrection, a life eternal beyond the grave where the faith in a reunited existence may be experienced. Food and clothing and a roof are essential, but at such a time the call is greater for expressions that relieve the loneliness and remind the sorrower that there is still hope for an assured joy to come. Happily the attack on this beautiful custom met with an immediate response in the very city and publication where it originated.

In reply the writer said: "I believe it is Bulwer Lytton who calls flowers God's children, and I think there are few of us with souls so unpoetic as not to feel enriched and uplifted by their beauty and fragrance, especially when heavy blighting grief is in the heart. I note that there is a movement in embryo here—indorsed by a few of our most philanthropic women—to stop the kind, graceful custom of sending flowers to the house of mourning. I also notice that there has been some similar effort in different parts of the country, but I take it that these good women have not looked carefully on all sides of this matter.

"In Biblical times the Jewish law decreed that there should be no flowers at funerals; that all should be buried in the pine casket in the simple linen shroud, so that absolute equality might be established, without distinction between rich and poor. 'But things change in the flowing conditions of life,' and our spiritual and material needs are progressive, and we require in these modern days of stress and strain all the softening and refining influences that civilization can afford.

"We have necessarily drifted from some of Israel's most austere ideals, just as we have drifted from Puritan ideals, in the broader demands of art and humanity; but this does not prevent those who are able to send flowers to sorrow-stricken friends from doing their full quota of charity.

"Did we not consider the florists and their large following of girl and women assistants, who prepare the flowers for funerals, we would want them at these tragic times for their expression of a divine energy permeating the universe, we would want them as a vivid reminder of the renewal of all things; as a reminder of that dream of immortality given by our Jewish ancestors thousands of years ago and as symbols of the resurrection of the beloved spirit but lately passed away."—The Chambers Board Vol.

Harrisburg, Pa.—A domestic employed at the home of H. L. Holmes, of the Holmes Seed Co., was terribly burned on the morning of April 21, when her dress ignited from a lighted match carelessly thrown into a coal bucket. Mrs. Holmes, in helping to extinguish the flames had both hands and arms badly burned. It was only by Mrs. Holmes' calmness that the girl's life was saved.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORIST AND ORNAMENTAL HORTI- CULTURISTS.

Amendments to Constitution and By-Laws.

In the matter appearing at the last meeting of the Society, the following amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws were adopted:

Amendment to Article II.

Article II. Section 2. Elections and Appointments.

At a meeting of the Society held at the home of the President, the following amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws were adopted:

Members' Buttons.

Any member joining the society or putting dues at Philadelphia, during the period of the National Flower Show, who did not receive the annual badge button will receive one immediately upon application to the secretary.

National Flower Show—Philadelphia.

The following awards were made in the trade section:

Jos. G. Neidinger, Philadelphia: New Styles in Baskets—certificate of merit.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held Monday evening, May 8th.

MASSACHUSETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The present year is about to be one of the most successful in the history of the Society. The success of the two recent flower shows in Philadelphia and New York shows this very emphatically. The next important horticultural event will be the Grand May Flower Show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which is to be held in Horticultural Hall, Boston, May 10 to 14, inclusive.

The management of the society is making active preparations for this event and no effort is being spared to make the exhibition a notable success in every way. In addition to the liberal appropriation for premiums made by the society many special prizes are offered by a number of prominent and influential members which will make this show the most brilliant and comprehensive in recent years.

The best products of many of the noted private collections in the vicinity of Boston will be offered to public view, as well as the specialties of the most famous growers of plants and flowers in this and other states. Notable features will be the collections of orchids, rhododendrons, roses, and artistic displays of flowering and foliage plants. A class for miniature Japanese gardens will be one of the novelties of this exhibition. The show will open Wednesday, May 10, at noon, continuing through Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M., and Sunday from 1 to 10 P. M. The Boston Orchestra will furnish music every afternoon and evening from 3 to 5 and from 7.30 to 9.30 o'clock.

Commercial growers, especially, will find this exhibition an unusual opportunity to call public attention to the products of their greenhouses and nurseries. The premium list which amounts to upwards of $5000 will be sent on application to the secretary at Horticultural Hall, Boston, and special trade tickets will be sold in lots of twenty-five or more at half the admission fee.

WILLIAM P. RICH, Sec'y.

GARDENERS' ESSAY CONTESTS.

The gardeners' essay contest of the National Association of Gardeners for Ex-President Everitt's gold prizes was recently decided by the following judges, Messrs. Edwin Jenkins, Arthur Smith, William Downs, William J. Stewart and J. Harrison Dick, as follows:

CLASS I.—Subject, "Horticulture as a Profession from the Standpoint of a Gardener," awarded to John Johnson, Southampton, N. Y.

CLASS III.—Subject, "Preparation of Ground for, and General Treatment of Hardy Herbaceous Perennials," awarded to H. E. Downer, Northampton, Mass.

CLASS IV.—Subject, "A Year's Vegetable Supply," awarded to John S. Doig, Southborough, Mass.

CLASS II.—Subject, "The Proper

Grouping and Culture of Trees, Shrubs, Perennials and Annual Bedding Plants in the Ornamentation of Private Grounds," no award was made by the judges as the papers submitted were not of sufficient high merit to warrant an award.

The essay contest for President Craig's prizes of $25, $15 and $10 for the best three papers on any horticultural subject submitted by assistant gardeners is now under way. The contest will close on November 1, and the judges' decision will be rendered at the next convention of the association, which will be held in December. The papers are limited to twenty-five hundred words and must be signed with a nom de plume and forwarded to William H. Waite, chairman of the committee on essays and horticultural instruction, Box 290, Madison, N. J. The contestant, too, must send his full name and address enclosed in an envelope with his nom de plume written plainly on the outside of the envelope to the secretary, M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.

As considerable time has been allotted to prepare the essays it is hoped that the number of contestants will be many.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

Parker Thayer Barnes, of Harrisburg, was the principal speaker at the meeting of this club held on May 2nd. He gave an able dissertation on that perennial pest—the red spider—and the latest up-to-date methods for control of same. We hope to reproduce this in full in a future issue as it is of great interest to every horticulturist in the country. Robert Kift made an appeal for a fund for Miss Jarvis, the inventor of Mothers' Day. Zieger & Son exhibited some very fell-flowered Hydrangea Otaksa—about the best we have ever seen. H. F. Michell Co. sent a nice lot of tuberous begonias from their Andalusia nurseries. These were extra choice with immense flowers and fine colors. They also sent a good sized exhibit of Helen Michell geranium. Henry Eichholz exhibited a fine vase of snapdragon in various colors. Tom Daly will be the speaker at the next monthly meeting.

MOTH QUARANTINE.

An extension of the area in the New England States under quarantine against the gipsy moth and brown-tail moth is being considered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and a public hearing on this question will be held in Washington at 10 a. m., May 2, 1916. It is proposed to quarantine the following towns in addition to the territory covered by existing quarantines: N. H.: Conway, Thornton, Campton, Ellsworth, Rumney, Warren, Wentworth, Piermont, Orford, Lyme; Vt.: Bradford, Fairlee; Mass.: Ware, Monson; Conn.: Ashford. The result of this quarantine will be to restrict the interstate shipment from the quarantined area of nursery stock, coniferous trees and forest plant products, except in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Paterson, N. J.—The Totowa Floricultural Society will hold their fall dahlia show at Lincoln Hall on Sept. 23 and 24.

During Recess

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

April 27th was ladies' night under the leadership of a committee consisting of Albert M. Herr, chairman, Frank Kohr, Rudolph Nagle, Lemon Landis and Elmer Weaver. There was a cold drizzling rain from 6 A. M. to midnight, but you can not dampen the ardor of this bunch of florists and over fifty were on hand promptly at 6.30 P. M., about one-half of the number being ladies. A small dinner was served by Mrs. Stegeman, the tables being handsomely decorated through the courtesy of Messrs L. Landis, Schroyer, Barr, Edgar, Elmer Weaver and E. P. Hostetter, the ladies all having corsage bouquets of sweet peas and the gentlemen boutonniere of carnations. President Schroyer announced that any man who attempted to make a speech would be thrown out. Mrs. A. M. Herr seized the opportunity and claimed the privilege (not being a man) of thanking the club for this auspiciously begun Ladies' Night and voiced the feelings of every lady present.

After dinner games were in order—cards, bowling, billiards and pool. In the cards Mrs. A. M. Herr won first prize, Mrs. Chas. Tucker, second for ladies, and David Rose first and Mr. W. B. Girvin second for gentlemen. In the bowling duck pins Mrs. Lehman won first ladies' with 102, Mr. Chas. Tucker first gentlemen's with 164, and Mrs. B. F. Barr won the consolation prize with a score of 42.

The thanks of the committee are due to Mrs. Rudolph Nagle who presented us with one of her handsome hand-painted flower pots as a prize for bowling. Mrs. Nagle not only paints her own work but burns it as well and has an artistic reputation that extends beyond the confines of Lancaster. Midnight found the hall deserted and every one on the road home all the better for the night's play.

ALBERT M. HERR.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

Frank Oechslein has added a small car for light hauls between his new place at 72nd street and Harlem avenue and his plant establishment.

The backwardness of the spring is shown by the fact that the forsythias, the lilacs and the tulips and hyacinths are just making their appearance, while leaf buds are only starting on most trees and vines.

Local papers declare this Easter means an outlay of half a million dollars for flowers, grown in and around Chicago, and that this city is the greatest flower distributing point in this country. We modestly add, if the greatest in the United States, why not the greatest in the world?

C. C. Cleminson, 7801 South Shore avenue, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his daughter, Thora, aged 19, whose death from blood poisoning occurred April 30. Miss Cleminson assisted her father in his buying and was well and favorably known in the market, where she will be missed.

According to the predictions of some of our wholesalers, longest in the business, carnations will not be able to meet the demand for Mothers' Day, May 14. Incidentally they remark, the carnation cannot be kept as in the past, which practically puts less on the market for any special occasion.

Phil Schupp, manager for J. A. Budlong, says the late Easter proved a good combination with the late season bringing in stock at just the right time. Mr. Schupp is authority on lily of the valley, which is one of their specialties, and he says the June brides will not have to be deprived of them. Exports from the city last year were valued at $1,000,000, and it is expected to reach $2,000,000 this year.

In the series of articles "What Chicago did for Me" running in a local newspaper the issue of April 21, contains the story and picture of John Mangel, a leading loop florist who came to America from Greece in 1885. Mr. Mangel came to Chicago in 1885, and in 1890, which he invested $2.00 in bananas, the following day and began his career as a merchant. He learned the English language on the street and a friendly newsboy taught him to read from the headlines on the papers. Step by step business has advanced from a cart which held his merchandise to one of Chicago's most artistic flower stores. The article closes as follows:—"I have been back to Greece three times and the utter impossibility for the poor to better their conditions there seems more deplorable each time and my heart overflows with gratitude to America."

BOSTON.

McAlpine & McDonald have taken up their new quarters directly across the street from their old place, and have installed a refrigerator box.

George Cartwright is laid up in the Peter B. Brigham Hospital with ailments which are as yet unknown. X-ray examinations have failed to disclose anything, and while his condition is not grave he is seriously ill.

The bedding plant season is approaching its height, and between now and Decoration Day the growers expect some lively business. In order to appreciate fully the amount of care and labor put into this work one has but to visit such houses as A. Leuthy, Roslindale. Mr. Leuthy has over 150,000 plants of all varieties in fine condition, and he expects a good season.

Local growers are having serious trouble keeping their Italian laborers as they are demanding wages not to be heard of. Frank Edgar and Charles Evans report that their laborers are leaving upon their refusal to pay them $3.00 a day or more. The men claim that they can easily make at least $4.00 a day in the arms and munition factories. Evidently they give this small consideration to the risk involved. Italian laborers are getting more independent and harder to get every day and the growers are facing a critical situation.

St. Louis—J. J. Beneke, who sold his place of business and lease-hold April 15th, left on last Sunday night for a few days' stay in Chicago. On his return he says he will announce his future plans.

Seymour, Conn.—T. J. Mooney, whose greenhouses are in Kenneytown had a temporary store here for the Easter trade.

PHILADELPHIA.

Helonias bullata is a feature of the Battles store display this week. This is an elegant native bog plant with pink flower racemes two to three inches long, something after the style of musk hyacinth. Has an onion-like root and is easily propagated by divisions.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram L. Pennock arrived on the 2nd, inst., at their old homestead in Lansdowne, from their winter home at Jupiter, Fla. Both well and hearty. The veteran Abram has been very much interested recently in superintending the building of the new pier at Jupiter. He certainly is a wonder for a ninety-five-year-old.

Alfred Burton entertained his fellow heroes (who won fame at the National Flower Show by making it a financial success) on the 28th, ult., at his home at Wyndmoor. They were on the ticket, printing and advertising end and they certainly did wonders, and no one grudges them their full meed of praise for a result for which every committee did great work.

Seventy-five degrees in the shade today, Monday, May 1st. The cherry trees are in bloom, vying with dogwood and lilac; the hyacinths ring their bells with joy; the tulips are holding up their brilliant cups to catch the passing sunbeams. The voice of the lawn mower is heard in the land. Overcoats are discarded and the populace are twelve deep at the seed counters. March and April were mean months but glory be! here it is spring at last!

P. Joseph Lynch, the Indiana cyclone, blew into town on Saturday. It was a little murky overhead for a while but the sky has cleared now and the bad men are beginning to peek out again from the trenches. From all accounts the rose men have had a better year than in 1915 and are again beginning to feel their oats. Glad of it. If Germany will come across with a few cargoes of colors now for next year's catalogs all will be well. In any case we still have black and white, and the latter day artists can make a pretty good job even with that.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON With the exception of Monday morning's trading which was brisk, the market has been rather quiet. In fact a decided slump has been reported by carnation salesmen, due, they claim, to the warm weather which causes the growers to cut a larger number than ordinarily. Prices are rather low on all varieties. Roses, while not so sluggish, are none too brisk and prices have dropped considerably. Sweet peas are barely moving and the market is getting more crowded with them. The only scarce thing is lily of the valley. Narcissi, especially bi-colored, are going nicely and irises seem to be doing well. Lilies are abundant, but stationary, and gladioli are but a trifle stronger. The entire market lacks that virility which has been so noticeable for the past few weeks and the growers are eagerly awaiting the Decoration Day and June harvest.

By all reports from BUFFALO flower merchants about the city and locally the Easter business was without a doubt the best ever experienced in Buffalo. Trade began early and continued up to Sunday noon and it was a hustle for everyone throughout the week. The plant business was excellent. Of lilies there were more than previous years yet the price was even better and the sales were clean. Hydrangeas were good and plentiful and brought good prices. Azaleas sold well though not too plentiful. There was a fine lot of hybrid and rambler roses and pans of bulbous stock which all cleaned up to advantage. The cut-flower trade was good and the supply on all lines (except possibly sweet peas) was plentiful enough. Violets were fairly good, roses were in enormous supply and the demand fell heavy on colored varieties. Carnations brought a good price and all shipments carried satisfactory. More American Beauties were sold than on any other Easter, the prices being within reach of all. Cut lilies also cleaned up quite satisfactorily. The week following Easter was quite lively with stock a little on the scarce side.

The quality of flowers coming into this market now seems large, but in reality is not larger than the supply of last week, the demand making the difference. So great was the call for Easter stock that the rapidity with which it passed from the boxes to the customers made it appear that there was much less coming in than this week, when every kind seems in such abundance. Cattleyas are the only scarce article and they are far from being in sufficient supply. Sweet peas quickly caught up again and now counters show a large quantity of that favorite and they sell quickly when prices suit customers. Carnations are not much in excess of demand when quality is good, but it is a noticeable fact that when this flower is in good supply there is always a considerable proportion of very poor stock. American Beauties of good quality are not so scarce as heretofore. All kinds of roses are to be had and iris and snapdragon in splendid quality are coming. Bulbous stock is practically gone.

Mrs. Charles Russell

As the weather gets warmer the quality of this wonderful rose really improves, and splendid stock it is.

CINCINNATI For Easter's Day nearly everything is in a good supply. Carnations, however, will probably run short of needs. Since Easter a steady active demand has kept the market pretty well cleaned up. Shipping business is good. Roses continue in a heavy supply, including American Beauty. Lilies and sweet peas are plentiful. Snapdragon is meeting with a fair demand. Outdoor lilacs have a good market. Neither cattleyas nor lily of the valley may be had in any fair quantities. New ferns are in the market.

NEW YORK Normal market conditions are now fully restored after the Easter fuss. Considerable business is being done but the supply of material generally is well in excess of the legitimate needs of the market. Consequently values are tending downward as is the case every year at this time. Roses are coming in heavily and of very fine quality. There is an abundance of every other staple flower. Considerable entertaining is going on and there have been a good many weddings and other affairs calling for choice goods such as gardenias, cattleyas and lily of the valley. The first-named are plentiful enough but the other two items continue in light supply. Cattleyas will soon recover but the supply of lily of the valley after the out-door cut has been disposed of is rather in doubt and a higher range of prices for this particular commodity is regarded as certain. Violets are finished up for the season. As to snapdragons, if half the quantity coming in were eliminated entirely "they never would be missed."

The only scarce PHILADELPHIA items on the list at present are cattleyas and lily of the valley. The former bid fair to be more plentiful in a few days and with a decreasing demand a sharp drop in prices is in order. The last named will be scarcer if anything and the present high figures are likely to hold firm. Carnations are in fine shape and selling well. The same may be said of sweet peas. Roses are rather more plentiful and easier in price. Lilies are too many—especially of the poorer grades. Among out-door flowers the most prominent items at present seem to be lilac, forsythia and dogwood.

Flower Market Reports

PITTSBURGH Concerning flowers, the harvest is great but the buyers are few, for at the time of writing nearly forty-eight hours of the Pittsburgh Railway Company employees' strike has practically paralysed business of all kinds. Those who risk the congestion of the railroad, jitney and private automobile traffic have more practical errands than the esthetic and sentimental, and nothing less than funeral demands are considered in the way of flower buying. However, the florists, wholesale and retail, are having a chance to catch up a little in the way of sleep and rest lost at Easter which is still talked of as being by far the best ever experienced here. The few flowers which were increased in price, have again dropped to normal.

ST. LOUIS Since Easter the cut flower market has been in an over supply condition. Outdoor stock is coming in now and the greenhouse production has suffered from this. Roses and carnations are hardly looked at, also sweet peas. The state of affairs has forced prices down to the lowest notch. On Saturday, April 29, the market cleaned up fine. Wild ferns are up to $3.00 per 1,000; other greens are in plenty.

A NEW DISCOVERY IN FABRICS

A Material from which Wrinkles Disappear Without Pressing

THE HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER

PROTECT YOUR CLOTHING WHILE AUTOMOBILING OR DRIVING

HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTERS are made from a new fabric.

The Dusters can be used in the Auto all day, placed upon a hanger at night and all wrinkles will have disappeared in the morning.

This fabric is soft in finish, heavy enough to withstand the hardest usage, yet light in weight and cool.

The fabric is linen color and is exceptionally attractive, and as it has been shrunk, the Coats may be washed when necessary, and will look like new.

The Women's Coat is made with a full skirt, single breasted, patch pockets, and collar that can be buttoned up close to the neck. It is trimmed with very attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

The Men's coat is made double breasted, side slashed pockets, sleeve tabs, high collar, finished with attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED

We guarantee every HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER to be exactly as represented, and if it is not entirely satisfactory when received, it may be returned to us, and we will cheerfully refund the purchase price.

FERTILIZERS FOR ROSES

A Paper by Prof. F. W. Muncie at Moline, Ill.

Type of fertilizer needed—The soil in the vicinity of the Experiment Station is a brown silt loam. On such a soil applications of phosphatic fertilizer yield greatest increases in crops. Nitrogenous fertilizer is also needed, but applications of potassium sulfate not only give no increased crop but decrease the yield.

Time to feed—The periods of heavy feeding should be during the periods of most rapid growth, viz., in fall and spring when sunshine is abundant enough not to limit growth. Fertilization is particularly needed in spring when the soil mixture is to the greatest extent depleted of its readily available content of plant food. While keeping this in mind, attention should also be paid to the periods of heavier production by the plants, when more fertilizer is needed. Phosphate gives an increase in production continuous throughout the year.

Specific kinds of fertilizer—Acid phosphate, used in these experiments, was found a satisfactory form of phosphatic fertilizer. No comparison was made, however, between it and bone meal, basic slag, and other phosphate-containing fertilizing materials. Dried blood and ammonium sulfate may each be used as nitrogenous fertilizers. The care necessary to prevent overfeeding with ammonium sulfate is so great, however, that its use is hardly to be recommended. The same precaution is necessary, but to a somewhat less degree, with sodium nitrate.

Nitrogen supplied in manure or commercial fertilizer—Applications of dried blood at the rate of 5 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space are safe, if put on only during periods of bright sunshine and of heavy production by the plants, and if not made oftener than four to six weeks apart. The amount of nitrogen in such an application corresponds to that contained in 270 pounds of manure of the average nitrogen content (50 percent moisture); it is somewhat more readily available than part of that in good manure. These comparative figures give a basis for the use of either material, however, and show that the need for nitrogenous fertilizer may be supplied as manure, quite as well as by the use of a commercial fertilizer. The symptom of nitrogen starvation—lightening of the color of the foliage—is so evident to every rose grower, that there is no difficulty in determining when applications of a nitrogen-containing fertilizer should be made.

Phosphorus in manure and in acid phosphate—Plants do not show such marked signs of the need for phosphorus, and experiment alone can determine its need. Applications of acid phosphate up to 20 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space (40 pounds per 100 cubic feet of soil) were found to give marked increases in production. The quantity of phosphorus contained in this application is equal to that contained in an application of 2800 pounds of manure of average composition (50 percent moisture) to 100 square feet of bench space or twice this amount mixed with 100 cubic feet of soil. Since manifestly it is impossible to use such a mixture, the need for phosphate in form of a commercial fertilizer is evident. Acid phosphate, the only form of phosphatic fertilizer used in the experiment, is, as stated, satisfactory. Since the benefit from its use is continuous throughout the year, it should be mixed with the soil before the benches are filled. Top-dressings with it are not so satisfactory, since surface root growth is stimulated in this way, resulting in the roots having contact with the soil particles only in an upper layer of the soil in the bench. There is no danger from overfeeding with acid phosphate, for four times the quantity here recommended has been applied without injury. In this respect acid phosphate possessed an advantage over bone, which cannot be mixed with soil or applied as top-dressings in excessive amounts without injuring the plants. The same is true to a greater extent with high phosphate tankage, and blood and bone.

Use of lime—With such a need for phosphorus by rose plants, the use of lime or limestone with acid phosphate is to be discouraged, since the solubility of the phosphate would be decreased by its use. The decrease in production from sections in which limestone was used in the soil mixture compared with that from sections receiving no lime is fully proven by the data. The mixing of lime or limestone with the soil, though quite a common practice among growers, cannot be recommended. In case an application of lime is needed to prevent the growth of algae and moulds on the soil surface, finely ground limestone applied as a top-dressing at the rate of 10 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space and very little cultivated into the garden. The soil used in the experiment described in the preceding pages was of the type known as the brown silt loam. A description of the various soil types of the state of Illinois, with their fertility is given in Bulletin 123, Ill. Agr. Exp. Sta. which should be studied by every florist in connection with these experiments. The need for nitrogen may be judged from the appearance of the plants, and the loss made good by the addition of manure or dried blood. An even better method is to obtain, at the beginning of the season, a soil of higher nitrogen content, by selection of sod soil, heavy manuring, or turning under of green manure. These experiments have shown a need for addition of a phosphatic fertilizer and with a low phosphorus content a property common to practically all Illinois soils, the recommendations are applicable to any of these soils. Since acid phosphate produces no injury when applied in very large quantities, there is no reason to fear making an excessive application of it.

Comparison of various soils of the state. The soil used in the experiment described in the preceding pages was of the type known as the brown silt loam. A description of the various soil types of the state of Illinois, with their fertility is given in Bulletin 123, Ill. Agr. Exp. Sta. which should be studied by every florist in connection with these experiments. Since acid phosphate produces no injury when applied in very large quantities, there is no reason to fear making an excessive application of it.

Few soils need applications of potassium—On peat and sandy soils alone is there danger of a lack of potassium, and considerations of watering and proper soil texture prevent the use of these soils in the growing of roses. Recommendations—On the basis of these conclusions the following recommendations are made:—

(1) Keep up the nitrogen content of the soil by turning under green or farm manure before use. If roses show signs of nitrogen starvation—a lightening of color of the foliage—make up the need with applications of liquid manure, mulches of manure, or top-dressing of dried blood—the last in applications not exceeding 5 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space and applied not oftener than four weeks apart. Feed only during sunny weather and most generously during periods of heavy production.

(2) Use generous quantities of acid phosphate in the soil. It may be added (a) at the rate of 4 to 8 tons per acre in the field, (b) in a compost with soil at the rate of 40 to 80 pounds per 100 cubic feet of soil, (c) or mixed with the soil at the same rate, just previous to filling the benches.

(3) Do not mix lime or limestone with the soil. If needed for sweetening the soil and preventing the growth of algae, make a top-dressing of finely ground limestone at the rate of 10 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space.

(4) Do not mix lime or limestone with the soil. If needed for sweetening the soil and preventing the growth of algae, make a top-dressing of finely ground limestone at the rate of 10 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space.

(5) Do not mix lime or limestone with the soil. If needed for sweetening the soil and preventing the growth of algae, make a top-dressing of finely ground limestone at the rate of 10 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space.

JUST because so many of the little things about semi-curve construction don't show up their positions, or prove up their goodness until the house has been erected for some time, may a buyer pay big for what he thought he was paying but little for.

As an example, take our Semi-Curvilinear construction for show houses, porches and private places. You could walk through 'em and examine carefully a dozen or both, and then chances to one you would never discover that the curved portion of the roof bar, from the first pitch to the gutter, was reinforced with an inserted strip of steel. With such construction the bar filled out and stayed in place, but after it's painted, it's a kind of deception.

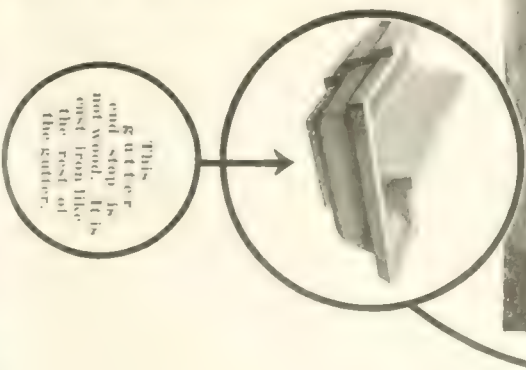

Every roof bar from the pitch to the gutter is reinforced with a piece of solid steel.

Of course there is no need to point out to you which is best.

And while we are on the gutter question there is the fact of pipe placed inside the house so it won't freeze. In spite of the fact that copper costs more than lead times what it did last year, we are still using all copper lead pipes. Furthermore we shall continue to use them simply because they are as you so well know the most lasting.

But the steel reinforcing strip, you wouldn't know it was copper or steel. If you saw them after being painted over, paint can cover up both the good and the bad alike. But in both cases time will sooner or later generally show up the weak points and prove up the strong points.

First and foremost we want you to know all there is to know about everything that goes into our houses. We want you to know what the interiors are before they are painted. We want you to know exactly why we construct our houses the way we construct them. With this in mind, you know we go anywhere for a piece of material or a piece of labor that we know you will be able to talk construction before you can walk a house.

This gutter end stop is not wood. It is cast iron like the rest of the gutter.

Chance To Get These Three Leading

CANNA NOVELTIES

There are three leading varieties of Canna plants in the world today.

CITY OF PORTLAND

This plant is a beautiful flowering pink. It is an early and prolific bloomer, blooming freely in wet or dry weather. The foliage is an attractive shade of green, thick and healthy in substance. Canna experts who saw this variety on our grounds last season were quick to pronounce it the finest all around Pink Canna to date.

PANAMA

The color is unusual, being an attractive rich orange red, with a well defined edge of bright golden yellow. The flowers are very large and the leaves spread of well defined veins.

WINTERS COLOSSAL

6 Feet. (Ornamental Flowering)

This is without doubt the largest flowered Canna to date. The color is a strikingly vivid scarlet that retains its brilliancy. It is the most profuse of its class.

These three head-liners reflect the quality that won Gold Medals for Swas-Teeka Cannas at both the San Francisco and San Diego Expositions.

PRICES.

	Roots Per 100	Plants Per 100
CITY OF PORTLAND	$15.00	$20.00

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Allamandas

Allamandas are easily propagated from cuttings of green wood. Place these where they can have a little bottom heat in a propagating bench, or use some small pots filled with equal parts of sand and leaf mold and plunge in the cutting bench and keep shaded until they are rooted. These young plants can be shifted into larger pots whenever the condition of the roots may require it. Increase the substance of the soil in later shifts to good fibrous loam with about a fourth well-rotted cow manure and add a moderate sprinkling of sand. They should be grown on and pinched at least twice during their first season's growth. Keep them in full sun and as the pots fill with roots give liquid manure once or twice a week. Continue the use of the syringe every clear day and give more air as summer advances. These plants are favorites for flowering in pots during the summer months and when well grown make good subjects for table center-pieces.

Cycas Stems

At about this season and until mid-summer Japan sends us its cycas stems a weighty item indeed in the long list of florists' decorative plants. These dormant cycads are sold by the pound and most profitable for the average planter to handle are the small and medium sized stems. It is not easy to tell a good stem from a poor one when they arrive, they being devoid of foliage and the greater part or all of their roots. And yet there is a great difference among stems as regards breadth, length and number of leaves or fronds and the time it takes to start them. A bulging upper or top end of a stem thicker than the lower portion terminating in the stumpy roots is generally taken as an indication that the stem is a rapid and tireless producer of good crowns. The nude stems as they come from the far east are placed in pots very little larger than is just necessary for straight planting. The soil is rammed down with a flat stick all around the scant space between pot and stem. Give them a house where they can have a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night. During its development a shading is necessary.

Dendrobiums

This genus includes many very handsome species as well as some of the most useful orchids for the cut flower trade. When in flower if hung in a cooler and shaded house they will last a much longer time. At this season of the year and after a long period of rest many fine species should be bursting into bloom while others that have finished flowering will be starting their new season's growth. When they have finished blooming is the best time to repot and top-dress. A good compost is made of equal parts of fern fibre and live sphagnum with some broken charcoal. Be sure that they have plenty of drainage. They can be grown in either baskets or pots. I prefer baskets for the pendulous species.

ries, such as Devonianum, lituiflorum, Pierardii superbum, chrysanthum, Wardianum and kindred sorts. They will require more frequent syringing than those grown in pots, but you find them less subject to attacks from slugs and wood lice when grown in this manner.

Forcing Lily of the Valley

For June cutting when the demand is quite heavy a frame should be prepared at once. See that they are kept nice and moist at the roots. It takes about three to four weeks to flower lily of the valley provided the proper bottom heat and top temperature can be given. Lily of the valley will do fine after May in frames. All that is necessary is a well built close frame. Put six inches of sand over the manure and plant the pips as you would in the green house. The frame can be partitioned so that two or more batches can be kept coming on. Keep close and dark until the stalks are half grown. Then gradually increase the light. Don't overdo the heat or you will get leggy stalks. Use no water overhead after the flowers are expanding for fear of spotting them. At this season there is no less danger from this cause than in winter. As the flowers become about half out, start to get them hardened up by giving more ventilation and light. See that they are kept moist at the roots.

Plants for Vases and Window Boxes

Usually a window or veranda box is hardly ever wider than about 10 inches, and when you get plants out of 4-inch pots it doesn't take very many to use up this space and there is not much gained by removing a considerable amount of soil from the roots of any plant. It is far better to grow them in small pots and do a little feeding with doses of weak liquid cow manure. Plants intended for the filling of vases and window boxes should consist of heavy stock in comparatively small pots for while you want to have the plants make as much showing as is possible they should take up but little space as far as the roots are concerned. The customer doesn't want to wait for weeks as is often the case with a flower bed. An immediate effect is what is wanted and the heavier the plants the better. Give all this stock plenty of attention from this out so they will be in good condition when planted in the boxes. See that they are clean of green fly and kept in a growing condition.

Propagate Winter Flowering Marguerites

You should lose all time in putting in a batch of winter flowering marguerites. They will root if kept shaded and moist for about three or four weeks. When rooted place them in a good mixture of sand and loam in full sun. They can be grown under field or pot culture during the summer. When grown in the field they should be lifted by the first week in September and potted in very rich compost.

ment to crystalize the outward expression of filial affection all over the country into one particular day once a year is a good thing for the florist trade? Does he really believe that the florist will not suffer in the long run in the public esteem by reason of his suddenly developed solicitude that the people should not forget their maternal parents, coupled with appeals to purchase flowers for that purpose, let the mothers be dead or alive? That the celebration is a florist-made occasion is an established conviction with many people. Here is what one lady writes to a Boston daily paper.

"We mothers would greatly like to have one day in the whole year we could call our own and from which we could benefit, and not the florist. Does he not reap enough at Easter, weddings and funerals without laying another burden on us, that of providing our boys and girls with the carnations they do not like to appear without at Sunday School?"

Our Texas contemporary, The Southern Florist, is greatly exorcised over the fact that "the Governor of Texas made a mistake in his proclamation and set the date for May 7th instead of the 14th, the proper date." The editor states that he had taken the matter up with Governor Ferguson and advised him that the 14th was the proper date to be observed and urges that every florist take it upon himself to see that his local papers give notice at once of the proper date so that there will be no confusion over the matter. What particular harm, we would ask, would come to the florist if his customers did get "confused" and make the grave mistake of buying flowers in honor of their mothers a week ahead of the day ordered by Miss Jarvis?

We are not yet ready to believe that the American people are deficient in mother love to the extent that they will need to look for inspiration in that sentiment to an advertisement or a pleading show card bearing a doggerel verse in the window of a man who has flowers to sell. Evidence of this was plain enough last year when, outside of Miss Jarvis' home and some other places, the observance was a frost in so far as the wearing of flowers on that day was a test. Let it be understood that we are expressing no particular objection to the establishment of a Mother's Day if the public feel so disposed, but we do see an indiscretion and a menace in the florist trade's campaigning to that end, and that was what we meant when we said "unwisely promoted." We delight to see the business with which we have been so closely identified for a lifetime advance in dignity and nobility as it grows in years and strength, and we always feel aggrieved at any development which impresses us as tending to its discredit and to add to the faults, real or fancied, of which the public have not been slow to accuse it at any time. That the movement under discussion does tend in that direction must be obvious to all. If the florist would persistently impress upon every man, woman and child the appropriateness of floral remembrances and gifts, with a view to develop the habit or the fashion of observing, each, his or her own mother's birthday by sending to her if living, or placing on her grave if gone, a bunch of her favorite flowers, then would the sale of flowers for mothers be distributed over 365 days of the year instead of being crowded into one day, and the florist would be immeasurably the gainer.

The proposition that the S. A. F. should officially interest itself in the collection of a substantial donation to be given annually for life to the ambitious lady who undertook to make the world celebrate her mother's birthday with a specified flower and then resented the market results of her effort, is nothing short of hysterical foolishness full of "boomerang" mischief for the florist.

The editor of our esteemed New York
 "Unwisely promoted" "Mother's Day" as an "unwisely promoted" "Mother's Day" as an "unwisely torial catechist credit for possessing a larger amount of wisdom than his naive query would indicate. Our sentiments on this subject as it affects the flower trade have been fully and frankly set forth in previous years and we see no reason thus far to change our attitude as heretofore expressed. Does our friend think that this move-

Late Mulching

The houses that are to be run for a little while yet and will not be planted until about July, will produce much more and of a much better quality if they are kept mulched all the time. For these late mulches only well-decayed cow manure should be used, for the fresh manure would prove too much of a stimulant to the plants, making a lot of soft growth which would mildew at the very first cause and from this the disease would likely spread to the growth surrounding. When applying these late mulches do not put on too much manure all at once. It would take a lot of time to do this and a good deal of manure, a good portion of which would be wasted as the plants could not begin to take up all of it at once. It would be much better to apply a little more in two weeks or so. If good decayed manure is used it will not be necessary to use any soil with it, for the latter would only prove a nuisance when the soil has to be wheeled out. Do not have the plants too dry when the manure is applied, so that when it is watered it will not harm the roots of the plants. It should be watered as soon as it is applied, even though this may be late in the afternoon or almost evening. This watering will kill any heat that may be in the manure and will also wash down the ammonia which would otherwise escape and be a loss even though it did no damage to the leaves and flowers. Quick growers such as Shawyer, Ophelia, Sunburst, etc., will take hold of the manure at once and will show different color in two days; yes, even in one day if the plants have been a little starved. Where cow manure is not to be had or when no time can be spared to apply it there are many other fertilizers that can be given as substitutes. Bone meal, tankage, dried blood, sheep manure, hen manure, etc., all are highly concentrated fertilizers and must be applied with care, and for best results must be experimented with right on the place, for a set rule cannot be laid down for all places because of the difference in the soils. The best time we find to apply manure or other fertilizers is when a crop begins to come on and while the young shoots are only an inch long or even when the buds begin to break. As soon as the plants get in this stage they will take more water and the manure applied will help them along ever so much. Owing to the fact that we have to depend on foreign labor to do a large part of the work in the greenhouses, we use and recommend cow manure as much as is possible for we find from experience that chemicals applied by unskilled hands often do more harm than good, where with cow manure no one can go very far wrong. Even if it should be applied at the wrong time it is not very likely to ruin the plants, merely holding them back a bit, from which they soon recover and then grow better than ever. Do not use manures or fertilizers that are too rich in nitrogen as this forces the plants too much, causing soft growth, and trouble will result sooner or later. Pure nitrate of soda should never be used on roses except in rare cases and then only under direction of someone who knows what he is doing.

The Side Ventilators

With the first few hot days comes the temptation to open the side ventilators to keep the houses cool. We never use the side vents except when the houses are being planted and for a while after that so as not to roast the young plants that have just been planted. We would advise every one to be very careful when using these side ventilators unless one has previous experience on the very place. It often happens that the buildings, trees, hills, etc., surrounding the greenhouses will be so situated as to cause the air currents to run so that no harm will result and the plants will be better off if the side vents are used. This, however, is an exception as we have found most places would be ruined by the use of side air in the spring of the year. It will also be necessary to be very careful with the ventilators in the wide houses, we finding it necessary to change the air from side to side as the wind changes, seldom if ever having the ventilators open full on both sides of the ridge. On real hot days we open the vents up full on one side and about one-third or so on the windward side, this depending on the velocity of the wind and its direction, and according to the "feel" of the air. Some day we may see things so that we shall say carry so much air when the thermometer is so much, the barometer so much, the humidity, etc., with the wind so blowing at such many miles an hour, but those highly scientific days have not come yet to commercial places, although we have no doubt that some greenhouses may be run that way here and there on a private place or college.

Yucca filamentosa

Our cover illustration this week well illustrates one of the handsomest flowering plants of the hardy garden. A native of North America, it has been used very extensively in European gardens for many years, and though there are numerous other species and varieties the typical Y. filamentosa still remains the hardiest and one of the most beautiful for this climate. The ever-green foliage forms a dense rosette, from the center of which rises in midsummer a stately branching spike, some five to six feet high, carrying numerous large deliciously perfumed creamy white flowers, and these produce a very striking appearance if groups are planted on the lawn or in some isolated position. Being impatient of removal, yuccas should not be disturbed after becoming established and all that is necessary to ensure success is a well drained loamy soil and a light covering of leaves in the winter. Our photograph was taken in the garden of George B. Dorr at Bar Harbor, Maine.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB

The meeting of the association on Monday evening, May 8, was well attended, considering the low season for the members from the suburbs especially. It was held at the Hotel Hamilton meeting over the success of the many activities of the club during the past few weeks. There were committee reports and commendatory speeches ad infinitum, with notes of thanks, etc., in connection with the National Flower Show, the International Flower Show, New York day, annual dinner, Brooklyn day and other festivities, and some preliminary discussion was had on the Flower Show for next year, in which Frank Traendly, Patrick O'Mara, C. H. Totty, A. L. Miller and other stalwarts took part, pro and con, some insisting on the ability of the club to run the show independently and others urging the advantages of co-operation with the Horticultural Society of New York. A vote was finally passed instructing the president to appoint a flower show committee to confer with and act in conjunction with the Horticultural Society.

W. H. Siebrecht addressed the meeting on the subject of bulb importation, dwelling particularly on the risk now assumed by the bulb forcers in importing and urging that the New York Florists' Club appoint a committee competent to pass upon the condition of bulbs when received from abroad so that lawsuits might be avoided.

A. J. Guttman then read his paper on the economic phases of the flower business, which was attentively listened to and elicited considerable discussion, in which Emil Schloss, Chas. H. Totty and others participated, a vote of thanks being tendered to Mr. Guttman.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

A resolution to the effect "That it is the sense of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., that some suitable recognition should be made on behalf of Miss Anna Jarvis on account of the idea advanced and the amount of labor and effort expended by her in the promotion of Mother's Day, which has already proven very beneficial to all of the florists of the country, and the subject is one which should receive the attention of the S. A. F. and O. H., to the end that this object may be accomplished," was adopted by the club during a discussion following the reading of a letter from Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, appealing to the local club to join in raising a fund to give Miss Jarvis $5,000 a year for life. A pink rambler rose seedling, produced by Harry Ley, elicited the commendation of the members. "It has not as yet been named. It was decided to hold an outing at a place and time later to be decided upon.

NEW HAVEN COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society has been quite active during the past few months and meetings have been well attended. Secretary W. E. McIntosh expects to issue the schedule for the September exhibition of 1916 and 1917, or September about June 1st. During the past week the Board of Education has sent out a bulletin notice to every school in the city regarding the prizes to be given by the New Haven Horticultural Society for plant exhibits by children.

For the best vase of twelve blooms of asters with long stems, 1st and 2nd prizes of $10 and $5, and five 3rd prizes of $1 each are offered. For aster plants showing no less than six blooms, 1st $5 and $3, three 3rd prizes $1 each. For the best essay on "How I Grow My Flowers," 1st prize $5, 2nd $2.

W. E. MCINTOSH.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES

W. A. Kees entertained the officers of the Florist Club of St. Louis on May 1st at his home. It was a good time.

The members of the San Francisco Sweet Pea Exhibition to be held under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society in San Francisco, Cal., on Friday and Saturday, June 9 and 10, can be had on application to Frank G. Cuthbertson, secretary, 749 Front St., San Francisco.

The preliminary schedule for the seventh annual exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society to be held in Boston, Aug. 11th, 12th and 13th, has been distributed among the members. Copies may be had free by addressing H. Youell, secretary, 538 Cedar St., Syracuse, N. Y.

The County Growers' Association of St. Louis has elected the following officers: Wm. Winter, president; Tom Kirkwood, vice-president; Hugo Gross, treasurer; Joe Deuchman, secretary. The rest of the evening was taken up with a discussion of the Easter business and the closing of the wholesale houses on Easter Sunday. Installation of officers will take place June 7.

The American Peony Society, in cooperation with The Horticultural Society of New York, will hold an exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History on June 9 to 11 inclusive. Schedules may be had on application to the secretary of the American Peony Society, A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y., or to the secretary of The Horticultural Society of New York, George V. Nash, Mansion, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City.

The American Institute of the City of New York and the American Dahlia Society will hold an exhibition of dahlias in the Engineering Society Building, 25-33 West 39th street, New York City, on September 26th to 28th, 1916. The Annual Chrysanthemum Exhibition of the American Institute will be held at the same place on November 8th-10th, 1916. For schedule of prizes address Wm. A. Eagleson, Secretary, Board of Managers, 324 West 23d street, New York, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held May 2 in Holyoke. Lucius E. Wilson, of Springfield, was a visitor and spoke entertainingly of the purposes of the Eastern States Agricultural Exposition, which is to open in West Springfield next October. Permanent buildings are now in course of erection, and the speaker suggested the possibility of arranging for a big flower show there at some future date. An exceptionally fine plant of Hydrangea Otaksa, by George Strugnell, was awarded a certificate of merit.

tanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City, in co-operation with the garden on May 13 and 14. The exhibition will be open from 2 to 5 on the first day, and from 10 to 5 on the second day. The schedule provides for herbaceous flowers, bulb flowers, orchids, sweet peas, antirrhinums, pelargoniums, calceolarias, etc. The annual meeting of the society will be held in the lecture hall of the museum at 3.30 P. M. A lecture, illustrated with colored lantern slides, will be delivered at 4 P. M. in the lecture hall by Arthur Herrington, on "Iris for American Gardens."

The meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club on the evening of May 2 was in the Dutch Room at the Fort Pitt Hotel. A. A. Leach showed Narcissus Mrs. Langtry, King Alfred daffodils, Darwin tulips and Carnation Gorgeous, blooms of the latter measuring 4½ inches. Jas. Moore showed Hydrangea Otaksa of a high order of merit. Herman Rapp, hydrangea and calceolarias. Carl Becherer, bellflowers. All were awarded cultural certificates and the commendation of the Club. Carl Becherer brought in a large collection of wild flowers, which were examined and named by O. E. Jennings, botanist, Carnegie Museum.

The illustrated talk on the Flora of the State of Washington was postponed to the June meeting. Coffee and sandwiches were served in honor of the speaker, Dr. O. E. Jennings, and his assistant.

H. P. JOSLIN, Secretary.

A GREAT CONVENTION HALL FOR CLEVELAND.

The citizens of Cleveland, Ohio, overwhelmingly endorsed the building of a convention hall and the issuing of bonds for $2,500,000 for the construction of same. Plans roughly sketched by City Architect Betz show a structure 270 feet wide by 430 feet long. The stage will be 116 feet across by 50 feet deep—the largest in the country. The amphitheater will be 114 by 300 feet. Seats on the main floor will be removable, thus making 92,000 square feet of display space available. The seating capacity will be 15,762. When completed no public hall in the world will come within 4,000, so far as seating capacity is concerned, according to Betz.

While no decision has yet been reached the hall probably will be faced with granite, to match the federal building, courthouse and new city hall. Especial attention will be paid to acoustics, while not a post will break the stretch of main floor.

The site is being appraised now. The location is on the mall and the building will be one of Cleveland's famous group plan of public buildings. Every effort will be made to finish the building in time to hold the next national flower show in it, according to the promise of the Mayor.

HOUSTON CONVENTION NOTES.

CONVENTION HALL, HOUSTON, TEXAS

Three Blocks from the Rice Hotel. Five Blocks from the Convention Garden.

I wish to call the attention of the trade that it is not too late to receive exhibits for the Convention Garden. Our Garden is now an assured success. We have a great many substantial exhibits. The members of the trade should avail themselves of this opportunity of putting stock before the florist of the South. Remember that we will have a record breaking attendance from the South.

The southern florists are heavy buyers. This is possibly the richest field for the wholesaler of any section of the country. Space rates are: Shrubs, evergreens, etc., 5c. per sq. ft. Blooming plants, 10c. per sq. ft. 150 to 250 sq. ft. will make an attractive medium exhibit.

Make shipment to C. L. Brock, Park Superintendent, Houston, Tex. Remember the florists of the South expect your co-operation.

R. C. KERR.

BOSTON MAY EXHIBITION

The May exhibition by which the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has made its annual report to the public is a very successful one. It is the only one of its kind that has come up to the standard contemplated, due primarily to the excellent execution which was given to the exhibits in the various classes. On many of the items in the schedule there were no entries at all. Nevertheless the show was a good one. It attracted a very large audience and it better had art in arrangement and color balancing been given more consideration in the exhibits and this phase of modern flower and plant exhibiting is a plant of slow growth and we must not ask for more than it can do. At least two elegant examples of how to do it were given in the displays of F. R. Pierson of Tarrytown, N. Y., and Penn the Florist, of Boston. The former showed cut roses beautifully arranged in large vases with a view to tasteful effect, making a proud record in this respect and the latter made a shining example of what a retail florist may do in his splendid table of bronze floral baskets and vases in which Spanish irises, marguerites, snapdragons, etc., were combined with telling effect.

As on other recent exhibitions here the commercial growers were in the ascendancy on a number of classes formerly monopolized by the private experts. W. W. Edgar Co., captured the big prizes for French hydrangeas; A. M. Davenport gobbled the two $100 prizes for azalea group and general plant group; Thomas Roland's showing of rambler roses which filled the entire stage in the lecture hall had no competitor and his group of Bougainvilleas was simply glorious; William Sim on sweet peas and on pansies, James Wheeler on yellow marguerites, for which a silver medal was awarded, Frank J. Dolansky on group of orchids—which won the gold medal,—the estate of A. Roper with the great cerise carnation named Albert Roper, which received a silver medal, Sam J. Goddard with his new crimson carnation Doris which got a certificate of merit and the splendid cut rose exhibits of Waban Rose Conservatories and McAlpine Bros.—all these as well as others not mentioned were very creditable to the commercial men.

One of the most interesting and valuable exhibits was that of Julius Henrlin of Blue Hill Nurseries, South Braintree, consisting of coniferous evergreens arranged in groups in the foyer. This collection, which was the most complete ever shown here numbered one hundred species and varieties of thuyas, junipers, pines, chamaecyparis, hemlocks, spruces, firs, taxus, etc., one fine specimen of each one known to be perfectly hardy in New England.

Naturally there was much in the displays as a whole of different character from what we are accustomed to see in shows at an earlier date. There were gloriosas gloxinias, calceolarias, fuchsias, streptocarpuses, verbenas, fancy caladiums and pelargoniums standard heliotropes, etc., and the list would have been still longer had the weather men kept up to time Business District were not busy in evidence. Calceolaria Stewartii from several exhibitors made a fine impression. The collection of dwarfed and collected Japanese plants shown by Dr. J. P. Fitch of the Weld Garden was the most remarkable and valuable ever shown here. Imantophyllums, Rehmannia angulata Pink Perfection and a large group of hardy azaleas of the obtusa section were well shown by Charles Sander for the C. S. Sargent Estate and an especially fine group of rhododendrons from the Hunnewell Estate occupied the centre of the large hall. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, E. B. Dane, N. T. Kidder and other notable private places were well represented as the list of prize awards will show.

The formal opening of the exhibition took place on Wednesday evening under the direction of President Saltonstall and with an address by Gov. McCall in the presence of a large assemblage. The show remains open until Sunday night, May 14.

The interior of the large exhibition hall has been metamorphosed with a coat of gray paint which has not improved it any. The red brick walls have been a prolific cause for complaint for years but painted bricks are never pleasing to the eye and in this instance the effect of the long discussed improvement (?) is not particularly stunning.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; First Vice-President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Second Vice-President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O. Chicago, Ill., June 20-22, next meeting place.

A Late Spring.

Vegetation is slow in developing this year, the trees in many parts of the country just showing the green of the first leaves, while pear, apple and peach trees are not yet in blossom, excepting a few favored localities. Notwithstanding the slow development, it seems to be continuous and possibly may prove a fortunate circumstance in the event of late frosts. Counter trade throughout the eastern and central states is at high water mark for the season, but nevertheless dealers generally feel that the cold, unfavorable weather has robbed them of a considerable volume of business which they cannot hope to recover this year.

Crop Conditions.

Our summary of crop conditions is rather incomplete at this time, for the reason that we are unable to secure satisfactory information from European sources. Moreover, there are no assurances that we shall be able to get such seed crops as are harvested in most of the countries of Europe. Nothing can be expected from the Central Powers because of the blockade, while such countries as Holland, Denmark and even France and England are declaring embargos on certain lines of seeds, making the entire question of European supply doubtful. If we are able to get anything more definite than the rumors which have reached us up to this time, we shall be very glad to give them to our readers.

Root Crops.

We believe it is generally understood by the trade that American growers of seeds have been making efforts to meet the expected and inevitable shortage in European supplies, particularly in the line of biennials. We understand that the root crops have carried over in fairly satisfactory condition in the East, but they are going into the ground rather late, which is something of a handicap. The principal biennials grown in the East are beets, carrots and turnips, the latter rather limited as to quantity. Very little onion seed is now grown in the East as it has been found unprofitable, due largely to the annual blighting of the crop.

Pea Shortage Probable.

Peas are going into the ground late, both those for canners' use and for seed purposes. In many sections seeding of peas is from three to five weeks late, and although most of the canners have decided to materially reduce their acreage their first plantings have been so late that they will not be able to get out their entire acreage excepting by planting so closely together that the various plantings are liable to mature more or less at one time, which would overwhelm the canner and prevent him from packing the peas and produce good quality. This is likely to have a very marked influence on the general pack the coming season and is quite liable to result in more or less of a shortage, which will probably bring about a marked advance in prices, but which may in the end prove a blessing to the canners. Peas planted for seed purposes in the East, principally in Michigan and Wisconsin, will be more or less under the same handicap and some experienced growers are predicting a short crop of seed. This of course is anticipating events but we believe that both experienced canners and seed growers agree that a late planting is never a promise of a good crop.

California Seed Crops.

With reference to California seed crops, we are informed that with two or three notable exceptions conditions are fairly good. Rain is needed for most crops yet it is feared that the result would be more or less disastrous to the onion seed crop and to the small remnant left of salsify. It seems to be the opinion of the California growers that without rain onion seed will probably prove a fair crop but other crops would benefit. Summarizing the situation from what we have been able to learn, we believe that seed crops in general will not suffer materially for want of rain,

BOSTON

M. J. Roshergen, of Boskoop, Holland, spent sixteen days on the water enroute to the United States. The bulb salesmen come by the way of the north of Scotland this year.

George Cartwright, who has been confined to the hospital for over a week, is now home and looking as well as ever.

Harry Quint has a factory on Bromfield street, where a half-score of men are turning out Memorial Day wreaths. Sam Liebman is in charge and reports an output of 500 a day.

During the recent "Clean-Up" campaign in Malden, 500 new trees were set out by the school children. In Walpole, 1,000 trees were planted. Tree practice is one that should be encouraged.

Suburban retailers are beginning to appreciate the value of first-class delivery service and many are installing automobiles. Fred Kaulback of Malden and C. B. Jones of Woburn are among those who have recently added delivery trucks.

"Gazing sticks" are becoming popular. Thomas F. Galvin Co. are making a specialty of them. A quicksilver-lined glass ball is mounted on the end of a sort of cane. The ball reflects images of all surrounding objects, and if thrust in the centre of a garden plot will reflect the entire scene.

Chairman John Dillon of the Park and Recreation Department announces that next Sunday will be tulip Sunday in Boston. He is placing high hopes on this year's display. May 21 was the day originally set for the show. Boston's tulip display always attracts universal attention.

St. Louis.—J. J. Beneke, who is on the retired list for the present, spent a very pleasant week visiting friends in the trade at Chicago. Mr. Beneke has nothing to report as to his future plans for the present.

Adolph Steidle, who for the past two years was with the Vandevort's floral department, gave up his position May 6 and has taken charge of his father's greenhouse plant at Olivette, Mo.

PHILADELPHIA

Horticulture said a fine thing about William E. Doyle recently in remarking that in his early days he became famous by his artistic ability and in making a better show with poorer materials than any other Boston florist of his day and generation.

another way of saying that he was a genius. One of the best definitions of a genius to my mind is that given by Thomas Carlyle. "A genius," said he, "is a man who can make the commonplace interesting." The more you think of it the better that fits from Shakespeare to Doyle.

And in that connection we have to record the passing of the Battles store at 108 South 12th street to make room for a new bank building. Out of very little Harry Battles made out of this modest and cramped location by sheer genius and personality the most unique flower store—an artistic triumph—ever new and ever interesting. Every inch of space had its use. Yet nothing was ever overdone. The story was told strongly and yet there never was a shout in it. Battles has the gift of making you "sit up and take notice" without shouting. While "Terra Firma" on her axis remains to turn, the fragrant memory of 108 will ever remain with us. The new location is now two doors below, and we may look for things to happen.

Alfred M. Campbell, one of our wide-awake growers and also a commission man of distinction wishes me to convey to the editor of Horticulture his appreciation of the editorials for which the paper has been noted from its start a dozen years ago; and in especial, his delight with two of recent date, one on the Spanish iris, the other on roses Hadley and Ophelia. We wanted to know why he didn't do his own bouquet throwing, as it is well known that there is a standing feud between ourselves and the blup pencil. But Alfred was equal to the occasion and countered with, "Well, you see, you can say it so much nicer than I could." After a personal bouquet like that, the standing grouch had to take a back seat for the time being, which explains why this paragraph; and if it is not a peerless monograph to our magnanimity we'd like to know what you'd call it!

WARETOWN, N. J.

The Tamarix hedge seems to have suffered more than anything else during the winter at Waretown. The commodore reports everything else normal and blooming. Mr. and Mrs. John Westcott enjoyed a few days at the farmhouse, May 4 to 8. The McTavish is still on the rocks. The next move will be garage charges. That ought to start some movement by the New York owners. Say a dollar an hour for twelve months! How much is that? We can't stand having our scenery spoiled by a derelict or a load of bricks. G. C. W.

CHICAGO.

George Perdikas has opened a third retail store at 23 W. Jackson Blvd.

J. J. Mohrle, who bought the second store at 23 W. Chicago avenue two years ago, has now sold out to A. Behrens.

M. J. Roshergen, of Boskoop, Holland, spent sixteen days on the water enroute to the United States. The bulb salesmen come by the way of the north of Scotland this year.

The Alpha Floral Co. will have a special sale of roses for the week end. Louis Eisner will leave The Alpha about June 1st to be associated with the Covent Garden Corporation.

J. Mangel has the large silver cup won for artistic bride's bouquet as the center window setting this week, accompanied by specimen bouquets. Wedding orders are starting in early at this store.

Rudolph Mohr, of A. Lange's, has a badly lacerated hand as the result of his losing control of the elevator which runs to the upper work room. The ends of two fingers were taken off. A. MacKenzie, who has charge of the plant section here, says that it has been an exceptionally good season.

The largest wedding of the season took place last week. The church was filled with plants and cut flowers. Six dozen large hydrangeas were banked at the sides of the front and the center front filled with lily plants. The pews had bunches of lilies fastened to them and these rows terminated in seven-foot vases filled with lilies. At the house the living rooms were bowers of Ophelia roses, a lattice work 22 feet wide forming a back ground for the bridal party. The dining room was done with Tausendschoen roses of which one hundred large plants were used and thousands of cut roses were about the rooms. C. A. Samuelson had the order and Ed. Enders, who has been with him 28 years, executed it.

the Botanic Garden from its present site at the foot of the Capitol to Rock Creek Park, where it would be out of the reach of the thousands of ordinary people of the city who are not possessors of automobiles, but where it would be a distinct advantage to owners of certain real estate, and to transfer its control to the Department of Agriculture. The measure has been referred to the Committee on the Library.

The U. S. Court of Customs Appeals, in the case of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., has reversed the decision of the Board of General Appraisers which had upheld the assessment of duty at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem on dried and dyed immortelles and wreaths of immortelles having a straw frame, under paragraph 347 of the tariff act as ornamental flowers and as wreaths wholly or in chief value thereof. The importers claimed them dutiable under paragraph 210 as cut flowers, preserved or fresh, either directly or by similtude, or as unenumerated articles under paragraph 385, the court upholding them as to the former paragraph.

Obituary

Eric Guy Sutton.

We learn with deep regret of the death in action of Lieutenant Eric Guy Sutton, second son of Mr. Leonard Sutton, Mayor of Reading, Eng. The late Lieut. Sutton was educated at Rugby, and on leaving school spent a year in France, and then proceeded to a tour in America, preparatory to entering the firm of Messrs. Sutton & Sons, at Reading. He returned home on the outbreak of war, joined H. M. forces, and was gazetted to the Royal Sussex Regiment in September, 1914. In the spring of last year he went to the front, and at once showed such ability that he gained his lieutenancy in the following June, as recorded in these pages. Lieut. Sutton received the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry on the night of September 12, 1915, near Armentieres. Together with another officer he entered a mine, which was in a highly dangerous state, owing to the gas fumes following an explosion, in order to rescue a man who has been overcome. Their prompt action undoubtedly saved the man's life. He received the decoration at the hands of the King at Buckingham Palace on February 23 of this year. Lieut. Sutton returned to the front in May, and had been almost continuously in the fighting line. Three of Mr. Leonard Sutton's sons are serving, and two of them are at the front. No words can express the sorrow of those who knew Lieut. Sutton. Young and full of life, alert, and possessed of a rare charm, the war showed yet another side of his character. His natural gaiety proved itself to be, as oftentimes it is, the manifestation of a brave heart "that looks on tempests and is never shaken." His ready courage made high duties easy and empowered him to do noble things with quiet confidence and strength. All that can be said in the vain desire to solace the sorrow of his friends and to help his father and his relations to support their grief, is that he did his duty like an Englishman, and he died for his country. Grief for his death and poignant regret at the shattering of such promise must always remain; but so also will remain the shining memory of a youth who was equal to the sternest call that fate may make of man; who, though his days were brief, won imperishable honor.—The Gardeners' Chronicle, April 22.

William G. Rowand.

Wm. G. Rowand, for many years in charge of the warehouse of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa., died on Wednesday morning, May 10, at his home Haddonfield, N. J. He had been a member of the Dreer force for thirty years, and by his faithful and loyal service had gained the confidence of his employers and also the high regard of his fellow workers. Funeral services at his home on Sunday afternoon, May 14.

Walter Angus.

Walter Angus, gardener on the Lyman Estate, Waltham, Mass., for a number of years, died on Monday, May 1, after a brief illness. Mr. Angus is survived by three daughters.

Herman N. Bradshaw.

Herman N. Bradshaw, a veteran florist in business for the past forty years, died on May 6 at his place near Ossining, N. Y.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Gloom and dull trading have settled on the Boston market and to all indications they are here for an extended visit. It is fortunate that growers are not sending in large quantities of stock or a complete tie-up would result, for the market is crowded and dragging heavily even under present conditions. Carnations, always indicative of the market's tendencies are going poorly. Normal prices are being asked nevertheless. Roses are doing the best of anything, but short Beauties established a new minimum price record by selling for a cent a piece. Daffodils are sluggish, and irises and snapdragons may be placed in the same category. The one redeeming feature is the scarcity of some stock. Cattleyas especially are barely obtainable. Lilies stand motionless on the shelves with callas doing likewise, and when the receipts for the week are summed up they will be far from encouraging to the majority of salesmen. It is the poorest week experienced thus far for the year.

Receipts have been heavy on all lines. Roses are overplentiful. Only the best have found an outlet and then high prices were out of the question. It is a matter of "how much will you give?" The bargain sign was not only seen at the end of the week but daily. Up to Thursday last the supply of carnations was also heavy, but on Saturday they cleaned up quite satisfactorily. Lilies are flooding the market, which should have been in for Easter, and indoor bulbous stock has been overplentiful. There is considerable outdoor material now. Beauties are in heavy supply, with sale only light. Sweet peas are in abundance. Prices generally have been discouraging. On Monday, May 8, the market opened brisk and trade throughout the day was good. There is considerable speculative buying being done and it looks like a good windup.

Generally cool weather CHICAGO has kept stock in prime condition so far and trade has been all that could be desired. Some days stock moves faster than others but there is no quiet time and practically everything cleans up at good prices. Cattleyas and gardenias continue scarce. Of roses there are plenty of all kinds. Mrs. Russell is especially good and abundant now. Carnations are advancing in price as Mother's Day draws near and there are plenty of opinions expressed regarding the effect upon that day, but no one seems to have solved the problem. Wholesalers are turning as many of the carnation orders as possible into other channels and roses will be substituted. Snapdragons were never better, calendulas are as much in favor as ever and iris is selling well. Sweet peas are coming fast. Smilax is scarce. Other green is in sufficient quantity. Outdoor tulips, daffodils, etc., are now coming. All the retail florists are showing appropriate boxes for Mother's Day offerings and the windows are filled with most attractive color combinations. ## Flower Market Reports who is familiar with the clientele of Greeks and other sharp buyers who frequent 28th street and the Coogan building can readily imagine how generous they are liable to be at such a time. Without going into details, which would serve no good purpose, we can say without qualification that the business this week has been very "bum."

The wholesalers PHILADELPHIA have a subdued and apologetic look on their faces this morning. Evidently they have put in a pretty hard week—with things going against them. It seems that business fell off rather sharply and flowers came piling in more than ever. In other words a slump, hence the pensive. Like the first few days of summer weather to the human. He is at first very uncomfortable, but he soon gets used to it. It has been a splendid season, 1915-16, all the way through, and the growers can stand a little lull. There is no necessity for shedding an ocean of tears over their sad case. And we have Memorial Day still ahead of us.

The past two weeks PITTSBURGH have been comparatively dull, but at time of writing orders are coming in heavily for Mothers' Day. Carnations of course, practically all called for. They will probably wholesale at $8 per hundred. Everything else will probably remain about the same.

The market has experienced quite a slump in business and in quality of stock. Roses are holding their own, however. Carnations have had a good call of late and it is expected that this week prices will go up on these, caused by "Mother's Day" demands. All varieties are in good supply at present. The hot days have shortened up the sweet pea crop somewhat and prices are advancing slightly. Lilies were a glut all week. There are a lot of outdoor flowers coming in, especially lilac, lily of the valley and tulips.

The flower market WASHINGTON is demoralized by the influx of stock from all points. There is no such thing as staple prices except on lily of the valley and orchids, both of which bring high prices. American Beauty roses can be had at $10 and $12 per hundred; other roses and carnations at any price one might choose to offer. The refuse heaps are piled high with lilies and sweet peas, and the quantities of spring flowers, particularly of dogwood, lilac, apple, peach and other like blossoms, are such as to overshadow the more expensive greenhouse stock. In many cases flowers are sold at so much a pile, the seller not taking the trouble to count them, and the production is only measured by the ability of the employees of the greenhouses to pick the stock as it becomes marketable. Withal, retail business has been fairly good and the stores are kept going nicely. Violets are still to be had and there is a fair showing of locally grown daffodils. Snowballs are being offered and gladioli and iris are fairly popular.

THE FLOWER BUSINESS.

A Paper Read before the New York Florists Club by A. J. Guttman.

Mr. President and Gentlemen:

At the outset allow me to assure you that I am aware of the fact that by attempting to review the economic condition of our business I have bitten off a very large chunk. But I believe in not being afraid to undertake the service of a problem and though I may fail it is better to have undertaken and failed, than never to have undertaken at all. In this spirit I am making the attempt. I also assure you that my prime motive in addressing you is not prompted by criticism, but rather by the spirit of upbuilding and development. I am too old a veteran to hope not to be misunderstood by some, not because what I may say is difficult to comprehend, but because experience has taught me that all the problems of life are really very simple when we have found the proper angle from which to approach each, and, further, because I find after careful study, that the general economic condition of our beloved country, from whatever cause, is today such as to have developed many men lacking in faith and optimism. Another factor of tremendous importance is the very poor quality of mental food doled out to us, due to the low standard of efficiency prevailing in the journalistic profession, excepting, of course, the trade press. Surely you have all noticed it, especially during the past 21 months.

The merchants of a nation occupy a very important position and wield a tremendous influence; so does the press. Merchandising, though simple, is a science. General trading is a science and an art. The principal aim in life should be to live wholesomely and in order to so live every intelligent being chooses a vocation and his existence both morally and economically is according to his intelligence. We, as horticulturists, know beyond question that to obtain a healthy and prolific plant it is necessary to first sow a healthy seed in good soil. Just so it is impossible to develop a sound and true mental picture of anything without having first absorbed good and wholesome food. Whatever condition may exist or the economic condition of our business that exists at present is the reflex of that which has gone before—a reflex of the economic structure of the whole country, a reflex of the condition of the minds of the majority of men engaged in general merchandising and trading.

Unfortunately only a very small percentage of men are ready and eager to assume responsibilities. Probably they are afraid of obstacles and have not enough confidence in themselves to overcome these obstructions. If they only knew the great mental and material benefit to be derived from the working out of a difficulty—for that is the only way to obtain valuable experience, that is the way to learn to distinguish the good from the bad, wisdom from stupidity, the wholesome from the unwholesome and to best fit oneself to become a wise leader and builder. I dread to think of the great mass who having had but limited experience, in whose minds so much bad seed is being planted by the distorted and unwise food contained in the majority of daily publications, plus weekly and monthly magazines and also by books written purposely to confuse the minds rather than to enlighten. The fault must be charged to the so-called leaders of our country who in the great majority of cases are really only politicians, rather than constructive statesmen and philosophers or masters of economics. Merchants, teachers, editors, public officers, the clergy—in fact, all men holding positions of influence and trust ought to be students of economics. Perhaps the fact of our country being comparatively young and unfettered by conventions, with its enormous natural resources and elastic laws, is in a great measure conducive to full play of individualism. That to my mind accounts for the rather loose and in many respects impractical working condition that exists in most businesses as well as ours.

I emphasize these points for the purpose of showing that there is no special cause for criticising the working conditions of our business, our industry being yet so young. It is, however, meet and proper that we—a body of merchants knowing the value and importance of sowing good seed, make due endeavor to build healthy and practical working conditions. Looking back 22 years I can see the marvelous progress made in the development and increase of varieties of plants and cut flowers and in the so-called ornamental branch of our business as well as in the general distribution of the stock from grower to the public; also in the working conditions for employees as well as employers, due primarily to the early pioneers to whom we must give great credit and honor for their foresight, diligence and perseverance and to the various horticulture organizations also. Whatever recommendations I shall make are so made in good faith with malice towards none, feeling and believing that there is great room for improvement in our economic structure and, further, that such improvement can only be obtained by intelligent and practical co-operation combined with the spirit of idealism. This principle is so simple and works so automatically that some call it the new thought, the advance thought. It is an axiomatic truth that by building for yourself you automatically build for others. By tearing down others you automatically destroy yourself in time. No matter how scheming and formidable a man may be he cannot harm others without harming himself. It may take a generation or a lifetime but there is no escaping ultimate destruction and I am not superstitious. A man who is vindictive, over-suspicious and shortsighted cannot be a builder in the true sense of the word not forgetting, of course, that one must be cautious and reasonably conservative. The man who is successful in life and constantly grappling with new and interesting problems has no time to nurse a grudge. Also men must learn that it is useless to try to keep down—in other words, to retard the progress of a formidable individual. It is safer and better to think and act along the lines of the thought and policy of "live and let live." In this country progress is made by leaps and bounds; the small man of today is the big man of tomorrow, and it behooves every merchant to avail himself of all opportunities for the advancement of his own interest even though he may feel that in doing so he would also benefit his contemporaries.

When approaching my subject, "The Economic Structure of the Flower Business," I felt that I could not do so comprehensively from any other angle than that of the economic condition of the entire country. I realize that my task is not only difficult but so vast that, compared with a large field approachable from so many different angles, I don't know with which phase of the question to commence. I am trying to keep in mind also the fact that you, Mr. President and gentlemen, are voluntary listeners and I must not talk too long for fear I may tire you, therefore will discuss only a portion of the many phases. This brings me to one of the phases that I will discuss which in my opinion is a most important problem—important because to my mind it is a practical and economic medium for the further great development of our art and industry. I refer to the question of Flower Shows.

Of all the arts none is so universally wholesome and inspiring, none so universally appealing as the culture of flowers and plants. The human mind, when in distress, when ill, when in need of a helpful thought, will respond more freely and gratefully to the flower than to any other influence. As an industry, floriculture together with its necessary accessories, can surely be regarded as legitimate. To make the flower show act as the powerful agent it is intended to be it is to be hoped that each ambitious and faithful member of our craft shall avail himself of the great advantage thus derivable. The clear duty of each individual and of each of our various organizations is to co-operate in and conduct these shows in such a manner as to encourage a great many exhibitors as well as a large attendance. Box office receipts should only be a secondary consideration. In other words, the educational benefit to be derived by the public from these exhibitions should be the only or chief consideration, for in that way the trade as a whole would benefit thereby to the fullest measure. For instance, instead of only a handful of growers, seedsmen, retailers and ornamental horticulturists being represented the majority in each of these branches should have exhibits or, rather, I would say that they should to a greater degree rise to this occasion and fully appreciate its tremendous importance and benefit. It was a great shock to me to find such a small number of growers, nurserymen, seedsmen, retailers, etc., represented at our recent show. I had hoped that the craft would recognize and be eager to avail itself of this great medium for the general advancement of our business and I warn the craft in general that they should not miss a great opportunity whenever it presents itself for general progress. Can't you see that our great leaders and most progressive men are giving much energy and attention to shows? I am not familiar enough with the general course and management of the recent show to say where the fault lies. The fact is clear, however, that only a small portion of the craft was represented. Let us hope that next year this will not be so, that the craft will avail itself of the chance. The newspaper publicity, on the whole, was anything but comprehensive and dignified. Here again is abundant evidence of our loose and inconsistent economic structure. The newspapers could, with proper guidance, act as a medium for wholesome and instructive information to the public. I know it is difficult to work with poor material or rather with incompetent artisans, but feel that it is not impossible to remedy this fault. I also cannot believe that the management needed to lack timely and voluntary assistance, because I cannot imagine any member of the craft declining to do his might when requested. The show, as a whole, was fairly satisfactory. The quality of stock shown was excellent but it was not enough of a competitive exhibition. The fact that more growers were not represented may be charged up to The National Flower Show at Philadelphia, but, to my mind, there was little or no excuse for the lack of enthusiasm shown by many of the craft especially by our foremost retailers. Retailers, wake up! Good wholesome advertising you should do, you must do, if you want to stick and advance. You should not let this great chance go by without availing yourself of it. Right here I wish to make another suggestion to the management, that a working condition be adopted whereby the retailers could receive the full measure of co-operation. Each retailer occupying space should be able to send invitations to as many people as he wishes. Those not occupying space can pay a certain sum. These invitations, to cost but little to the retailer, should be printed in nice style and be uniform. We should not be far-sighted merchants if we aim—first, to make money out of the show itself. We will not only not make money but we will have sown poor seed and while a few master minds among us may benefit

A Metropolitan Promise Is as Good as a Bond

Promises even though made with the best intentions are usually very uncertain unless the source of the promise is backed up by a firmly established reputation for reliability and dependability.

Everything should be incorporated in the contract. We seldom make a promise—but, when we do, our reputation proves conclusively that its fulfillment can always be depended upon.

The N. J. Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick, N. J., placed their greenhouse building operations with us, and the following is what Dr. J. G. Lipman, the Director wrote after it was completed.

"In so far as I know, the work done by you was eminently satisfactory, and I trust that we shall have occasion in the future to request your company to bid on other work."

About Newman and Legg's Sweet Peas And Something About Their Houses

OF course you know all about the wonderful long stemmed mammoth blooming sweet peas produced and put on the markets last year by Newman and Legg of Manasquan, N. J. We are selfish enough to try to claim having had just a little hand in their development; because they were grown in our houses, of which we have sold them five.

They have six.

One is "the other fellow's" construction.

Buying it, made it a lot easier for us to sell them the next house. Nothing like having an object lesson right on your own place, one that as Mr. Newman says: "They are afraid to go in when the wind blows."

Having had both our Pipe Frame and Iron Frame constructions, this firm is in a position to know the comparative goodness of each. Their opinion is decidedly worth seeking.

A NEW DISCOVERY IN FABRICS

A Material from which Wrinkles Disappear Without Pressing

THE HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER

PROTECT YOUR CLOTHING WHILE AUTOMOBILING OR DRIVING

HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTERS are made from a new fabric.

The Dusters can be used in the Auto all day, placed upon a hanger at night and all wrinkles will have disappeared in the morning.

This fabric is soft in finish, heavy enough to withstand the hardest usage, yet light in weight and cool.

The fabric is linen color and is exceptionally attractive, and as it has been shrunk, the Coats may be washed when necessary, and will look like new.

The Women's Coat is made with a full skirt, single breasted, patch pockets, and collar that can be buttoned up close to the neck. It is trimmed with very attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

The Men's coat is made double breasted, side slashed pockets, sleeve tabs, high collar, finished with attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED

We guarantee every HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER to be exactly as represented, and if it is not entirely satisfactory when received, it may be returned to us, and we will cheerfully refund the purchase price.

Sizes Both Women's and Men's 34 to 36

Price $5.95

Sent Parcel Post Prepaid

We Sell Only Direct from Factory to User, Saving Our Customers, the Jobbers' and Retailers' Profits. We Cheerfully Refund Your Money If You Are Not Entirely Satisfied.

ARE YOU TROUBLED WITH MOTHS?

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Ferns

Now is a good time to sow spores of those ferns, useful for filling small ferneries. Partly fill pans with crocks and some coarse material such as sod. On top place a finely screened compost of soil three parts, leaf mold and peat one part each, and some sand. Water with a fine rose and let stand for four or five days before sowing the spores. Scatter the spores evenly and press in. Cover with glass and keep in a shady humid house where a warm temperature is held. The benches and floors should never be allowed to remain dry for any length of time. Stand the pans well to the glass that has been shaded so they will have plenty of light without direct sunshine. Now that young ferns are making fairly good growth they will require more water right along.

Flowers for Memorial Day

Spiraea japonica and its various forms will make one of the best flowers for that date. Where they are well out a slight shade will hold them in good condition until they are sold. A temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night will be preferred to a higher one. Hydrangeas will take about the same care and temperature as spiraeas. Both these plants will need lots of water at the roots now. It can be applied two or three times a day. Give plenty of ventilation. It is a hard proposition to hold lilies in good condition at this time of the year. When well out they should be placed in a cool shady place and never allowed to want for water. Look them well over now for fly and give two or three successive fumigations. Benches containing ten-week stocks, gladioli, snapdragons, candytuft and other Memorial Day stock in pots should be looked after often in order that none be allowed to go wrong.

Lycastes

The flowering season for these orchids is now over, and with new growth starting any needed potting should be done. Repotting once in two or three years is all these plants usually need. Few orchids are more generally satisfactory than the old Lycaste Skinneri and its beautiful pure white form. The flowers hold fresh for ten to twelve weeks on the plants and keep for three weeks in water. They grow better in equal parts of fern fibre and fibrous loam than in pure fern fibre. When growths begin they should have abundance of water. Even during the season of rest they should never be allowed to become too dry at the roots. They do well in pots or pans half filled with clean broken crocks. In summer they succeed best in a cool north house, but they should have a rather warmer position in winter. Among the numerous species Lycaste Skinneri is undoubtedly the best bloomer. Lycaste cruenta and Harrisoniae are also very good.

Primulas

After the middle of May primulas should be grown in a cold frame and if they are partially plunged in fine coal ashes, all the better. A spraying overhead each afternoon will be beneficial. The earliest sowing should now be in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots. The compost should be light, equal parts of leaf mold not too much decayed, and loam with a little sand. The young plants want to be kept near the light, but need a little shade from the direct sun. Sowing primula seed is still seasonable. You will not get as fine Christmas plants as from the earlier sowings, but they can be grown into nice little stock in 4-inch pots which is a convenient size for marketing. Primula seed wants a brisk moist heat to germinate, but the plants themselves should never be subjected to any forcing conditions. Prick out and pot off when large enough. While they need some shade do not overdo it as it only makes them become drawn and weakly.

Single-Stem Chrysanthemums

From now on up to the first week in June is good to put in cuttings for 6-inch pots. Where the idea is to grow single-stem chrysanthemums in pots there is no better time. Never let the cuttings show signs of wilting either from want of moisture or proper shade until rooted. It is advisable to change the sand for this batch of cuttings so as to avoid as much as possible the cutting-bench fungus. When rooted, pot into 2½-inch pots and thence into 4-inch, and finally to their last shift—a 6-inch pot. Never permit the plants to become pot-bound until the last shift is reached. For the last shift use a rich compost. At least one-third of the bulk of soil should be well rotted cow manure and a good sprinkling of bone dust. Make it a practice to syringe several times a day. The best place to grow those plants during the summer is on a bench where there is side ventilation which can be kept open day and night. See that they are syringed and watered at the roots every day.

Stock Plants

In order to have plenty of stock for another year we shall have to lay aside a number of plants for the production of cuttings from September on and through the winter. Now is the time to make selections before they are all gone. Give them a good piece of ground and with care they give you a foundation for another year's sales. Label true to name when planting out.

Trouble ahead? We are informed by the American Consul U. S. Commerce Reports, that the Board of General at London, England, through the Trade there proposes shortly to issue rules restricting the importation into England of certain commodities, among those mentioned being bulbs, flower roots, plants, trees and shrubs. This is important if true. We are not informed as to the powers exercised by the body called Board of Trade, but should any widely restriction be placed upon the shipment to England from Holland and elsewhere of the various bulbous plants, of which Great Britain has hitherto been a heavy importer, the result on the American market will undoubtedly be disastrous and one probably to be avoided. The Government there, however, does not find existence to be so great and pay a little more attention to their law as to the things, the which if a man has at his command his life flows gently on."

At the recent meeting of the New York City Flower Exchange a vote was taken on the proposition the making of floral decorations and retailing of flowers on the market premises. This action, which has long been contemplated, gives general satisfaction to the market dealers themselves as well as to the retail trade. The making up of flowers in any form for retail customers by wholesale people has at all times been something about as aggravating to the retailer as the waving of a red rag before a bull. As a business principle their contention is right, as has been always admitted by legitimate wholesale dealers. But there are two sides to the question and in any town where the retail storeman makes a practice of buying flowers direct whenever he can from producers who maintain no city headquarters, while one or more wholesale dealers are paying rent and carrying stock with which to supply him, then the retailer stands on rather shaky ground when he begins protesting against the wholesalers' competition. A spirit of fairness is essential on both sides for the right settlement of such controversies and no settlement can be really permanent and effective unless this fact is recognized and the "golden rule" applied.

Friend of the flowers

Reports from various sources indicate that not for many years have the spring wild flowers been so abundant or so beautiful as this season. Trailing arbutus, as we have before mentioned, has rarely been so perfect in foliage and in purity of color. Violets, bloodroot, hepatica, springbeauty and other gems of the woodland seem to have found the peculiar characteristics in the weather of the recent winter and spring greatly to their liking and in our gardens the same healthy vigor and profuseness of bloom is in evidence among all the low-growing spring-flowering border plants. The reason for it all is easily discerned in the deep snow which this year covered so large a section of the country and protected these things against the ferocity of the February and March weather. In many of the spring-flowering garden shrubs it is interesting and instructive to note the well defined line of the snow blanket, flowers being produced in profusion on the lower branches of forsythias and azaleas of the Daurica type, etc., while above the line practically every flower is blasted. At this season of the year one of the most momentous questions for the gardener is that of the effect of the winter on many of the most prized garden favorites. One can never be sure until buds are well along as to what he may expect from his rhododendrons, cornuses, wisterias, early clematises and many other things which because of their precocity are so easily started into activity by a few warm days in early winter and their flower buds, divested of their protecting overcoats, doomed to be ruined later on. The problem of winter and spring effect is full of puzzling contradictions and one year's deductions are quite likely to be overthrown by the experiences of the next year. But one thing is sure—deep snow, long tarrying, is the garden's best winter friend.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Early Planting

With labor very scarce and high priced, it will be a good idea for growers with large places to handle to begin planting early. The first of August will not be very long slipping around, and all houses with young plants should be planted by that time, with the exception of Shawyer perhaps, so as to get a good root system before the dark days of winter. With the plants ready to go into the benches it will be very simple to empty the houses that are poor and replant them. There may be houses that are well cut off and do not promise to do much at once and the plants may not be ready to go in until July. These houses can be dried off a little, then mulched, and started all over again, producing a fine cut of roses during the summer months when roses are scarce. Roses cut from a house treated in this manner will be far superior to those cut from houses that have not been dried off and started again but have been kept going all the time. A little planning will save a good deal of time and money. To begin with, see that all the necessary tools are on hand so that no time will be wasted waiting when the work is once started. Then come the repairs to the benches. If they have to be rebuilt see that all the necessary material is right there before the work starts. One cannot depend on speedy deliveries by railroads now, so it is best to order things long before they are really wanted. Now for the repairing. We never put any new boards into old benches unless we are all out of old boards. We try to make the benches last as long as possible and then rebuild the whole business, keeping the best boards for repairs in the old benches in the other houses. These new benches will last quite a while and it is a pleasure to wheel into a house with good benches not having to worry about the boards breaking, etc. Then, too, when the bench begins to decay it will go all at once or nearly so and can then be rebuilt again. This is much better than patching all the time and never having a real good bench.

Whitewashing

Right here lies one of the secrets in successful rose growing. After all the old earth is taken out as much as possible with the shovel, wash the bench thoroughly with a hose, having as good a pressure as is possible to get. See that all the old dirt is washed out even though this may increase the water bill a little. After this is done whitewash the benches well with hot lime and apply plenty of it. If the bench has dried off after being washed out it should be sprinkled well again, as it is much easier to whitewash a wet bench, and then, too, the lime will spread better, filling up every little crevice which otherwise would be left unfilled, as the thick lime-wash would not get into it. Copper sulphate is very high this year and it may not be possible to add a little to the lime but we think it pays even at the high price as the quantity added need not be very large. A pound will be sufficient for ten gallons of lime wash. This little addition will do away with a great many germs and fungi of all sorts, which otherwise might escape unhurt and be right there when the new soil comes in to prey upon the new tender roots. Use fresh stone lime for making whitewash, never using old air-slacked lime. A little practice will soon show just how to slack it to get the best results, and it should be applied as soon as it is slacked and while still hot. Do not use the hair brushes, as they are too expensive and will not last long. Secure the common fibre brushes which are very tough and can be bought cheap. Needless to say, all old soil should be scraped out from under the benches before the benches are washed out and whitewashing begun. If plenty of lime is applied it will act as a preservative, too, and benches that are well whitewashed will last much longer.

Concrete Benches

We do not know how other growers make out with these, but we do not care for them very much the first few years after they are built. We cannot get anywhere near the cut from these that we can off the wooden benches, as the roses will not grow as well no matter how carefully they may be looked after. Then, too, there is a possibility that the houses may be used for something else besides roses in the future, and if rose benches were built of concrete they could not be changed. If the benches can be built outside, allowed to weather for a year or two in the open air and then set up in the houses, it would insure much better roses the first few years. They will not drain so well and the drainage cannot be changed for different soils as can be done with wooden benches. There is much more work attached to the building of concrete benches than would at first seem, and with labor hard to get it becomes all the more difficult.

ST. LOUIS 1917 SPRING SHOW.

The chairman of all the committees for the 1917 Spring Flower Show at St. Louis held a meeting at the Bourdet Floral Co.'s office on Tuesday evening, May 9, to report to the Executive Committee, of which Jules Bourdet is the head. Adolph Janicke reported that the preliminary schedule would be ready for mailing by the latter part of June.

MEMORIAL DAY.

From the silvery wings of memory the feathers of peace, to falling today To cover the graves of thousands sleeping their manhood away
To bid and lass is given an angel's grace to strew with flowers each resting place Music of unforgotten days, echoes thro' the woodland ways
While the fragrant links of a flowery garland girdle the hillside and deck the plain.
The pendulum of time is marking the way for the even step of blue and gray May peace and its blessings, fold and the Old Flags' starry fold.

LENOX HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The May meeting of the Lenox (Mass.) Horticultural Society was held on Wednesday, the 10th. The schedule for the Fall Exhibition was adopted. The class for twelve blooms of chrysanthemums in not less than six varieties disseminated in 1916 was altered to twelve blooms in not less than four varieties, owing to the apparent lack of good novelties this season.

A magnificent new orchid, Odontoda "Gladys," from A. N. Cooley, Pittsfield, was awarded a first-class certificate, and a vote of thanks given to E. J. Norman for Cereus grandiflorus.

A paper entitled "The Use of Native Plants for Ornamental Planting" was read and well discussed. Several members spoke of the poor success which attended their efforts to transplant the native flowers and shrubs, especially in the case of the mountain laurel.

The next meeting will be held on June 14.

J. H. FRAMPTON, Asst. Sec.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held in the Public Library, Providence, on Wednesday evening, May 17. Arthur Sellow lectured on the Cultivation of Dahlias for Home Decoration and for Exhibition.

The May meeting of the New London Horticultural Society was held on May 11. Mr. Davis, of the Connecticut Experiment Station, New Haven, gave an interesting talk on the Brown Tail and Gipsy Moths, which he illustrated with lantern slides.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

Visit to Gen. Weld's Garden.

Among the numerous private estates in the vicinity of Boston very few possess the individual charm of that of Gen. Stephen M. Weld of Dedham, Mass., where the Gradeners' and Florists' Club of Boston were privileged to spend a very delightful and pleasant day on Monday, May 15. Situated amongst natural surroundings, here exists one of the most beautiful pieces of rock gardening to be found anywhere in New England, and it is well worthy of a visit at the present time by anyone interested in this particularly pleasing form of gardening and one that is coming into vogue rapidly. Here a large piece of water is surrounded by rocky slopes that are literally clothed with a profusion of choice and interesting alpine plants. Any enumeration of the whole of these would be too lengthy a matter, but the benefit of those interested in rock gardening or who contemplates constructing one, some of the more showy and desirable subjects will be largely represented. The water is well wooded with alders, birches and drooping aspens, giving ample shade. Large clumps of rhododendrons grow close beside the water and bid well for a fairly good show of blossom, while Andromeda floribunda is fully out. By the side of the water, Adiantum is fully at home. Large groups of trilliums are noticed in several rocks. Epimediums are conspicuous in many places. Arenaria balearica is one of the gems of the rock garden, loving to grow over damp rocks, where it forms a carpet of green and is covered with pretty white flowers. The soft blue of Phlox divaricata and its white variety are plentiful, also P. subulata. On the higher places Rhododendron Kaempferi is just commencing to flower, while covering the larger rocks in many places were quantities of Hydrangea petiolaris. The pink flowered Saxifraga cordifolia does well and Leucocymum aestivum looking like a large white snowdrop was flourishing, many of the flower scapes a foot high. The delicate mauve-blue Virginian cowslip (Mertensia virginica) flourishes close beside the water, while higher up grows the sweet scented Daphne Cneorum, also one of the gems of the rockery. Another very interesting subject noticed was Gentiana acaulis, usually a difficult plant to establish, but here grows one of the finest patches to be seen for many a mile. A moist, cool situation with good drainage is essential for success with this plant. Primulas abound in several places, usually near the water. The yellow Alyssum saxatile does well hanging over the front of a rock. Aubrietias, Arabis and Erythroniums are right at home. The pretty rose colored Helonias bullata is seldom seen in gardens, but is flourishing here in the damper portions of the rockery. In one shady part the blue Anemone blanda and other species are prevalent. Dwarf irises, Euphorbia polychroma, Fritillarias, imperialis and Meleagris, Dodecatheon Meadia and violets especially by the side of the walks are very much at home. Viburnum Carlesii, Rhododendron carolinianum, Doronicums and tulips of various species are all in abundant evidence. Stepping stones and water falls make this rockery a place one could linger in indefinitely, and also it was noticed that fortunately there is lots of room left for further extension of this charming feature.

There are other things besides the rockery here. Adjoining the residence is a conservatory full of showy flowering plants. A small flower garden is glorious with pansies and tulips, with peonies to flower later.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

Four exhibitions, open to commercial growers, private estates and amateurs, will be held by the Houghton Horticultural Society, of Lynn, Mass. Numerous prizes are offered. The first exhibition will be held June 2 and 3 at the Public Library and will include hardy herbaceous flowers and German irises. Roses, peonies and hardy flowers will be exhibited June 23 and 24 and sweet peas July 14 and 15. The 42d annual autumn exhibition and festival will be held in Odd Fellows' hall Sept. 19, 20 and 21. For this exhibition 107 prizes will be given. Cash prizes are to be awarded in memory of former members of the society.

The Worcester County, Mass., Horticultural Society's May exhibit in Horticultural Hall on May 11, was declared one of the best May exhibits the society has had in years. The potted plants were of exceptional fine quality, and table decorations were artistically designed. H. F. A. Lange, E. W. Breed, A. W. Hixon, Lucy M. Coulson, Mrs. L. C. Midgley and Mrs. W. E. Sargent were among the prominent prize winners.

EFFECTS OF THE WINTER IN THE ARNOLD ARBORETUM.

The high temperature of January started the development of the flower-buds of some plants, for example those of the Silver Maple (Acer saccharinum) which was in full flower on the first day of February, or several weeks before the usual time. January was followed by two months of cold weather and frequent snow-storms. The snow protected small plants which without this covering would probably have suffered, and the number of plants that have been killed or seriously injured in the Arboretum is surprisingly small. The flower-buds, however, of many plants have been entirely or partially killed, while other plants which in an ordinary season lose their buds have not suffered and promise to yield unusual crops of flowers. The flower-buds of all Peach trees are killed but those of the Plums and Crabapples appear to be uninjured. The spring is from ten to twelve days later than usual.

Rhododendrons have suffered less than they did in the winter of 1914-15. Occasionally a leaf has been browned or a small branch killed, but apparently a good many flower-buds have suffered and the prospect for flowers is not so good as usual. Rhododendron ponticum, which usually suffers in this climate, appears to be killed outright. This plant which is so hardy in England, where it sometimes becomes a troublesome weed, has seriously interfered with the successful cultivation of Rhododendrons in this part of the world, for it has been used in European nurseries as stock on which is grafted the hybrids and varieties of other species, and the hardiness and vigor of many of these plants has been unfavorably influenced by this tender stock. A little hybrid Rhododendron known as R. praecox, "Little Gem," is perfectly hardy here but it blooms so early that in about nine years out of ten the flowers after they open are spoiled by frost. This year not a flower-bud has been injured and the plants are now in flower.

Forsythias. Many flower-buds of these plants have been killed as they were two years ago. In the low ground of the general shrub collection the flower-buds of all the species and varieties of Forsythia have been entirely killed with the exception of those of the Albanian F. europaea which are uninjured. If the flower-buds of this species are better able to support cold than those of the other species, which are all natives of eastern continental Asia, the European plant should be better known and more generally cultivated. One of the last plants discovered in Europe, it is a vigorous, fast-growing shrub with more erect stems and branches than are usually found in the other species of this genus. The flowers are not quite so showy as those of F. suspensa and its hybrids and varieties, but they are always abundantly few retailers did not then and would not now obtain stocks direct from the grower, thereby automatically and unnecessarily robbing the commission men of what in my opinion are his just commissions. See how inconsistent that is. Under the existing and at times more or less chaotic conditions of the business which imposes a hardship on the commission men to do business on a 15 per cent. basis, to do business in such a way as to bring out the best efforts, is no sinecure, and I feel positive that a large proportion of the commission men, if the truth be known, could testify that it is not possible to earn an income above an amount necessary for a respectable living on a 15 per cent. basis, hardly earning enough that could be considered commensurate with the responsibilities and risks taken and untiring energy put forth in the distributing of the stocks in order to obtain the highest possible market prices. I insist that if the commission men would not use every aggressive method, generally accepted as wise by progressive merchants, they could reduce their selling expenses by selling in bulk often at great sacrifice (selling in bulk when market is glutted, acts as a great advertising medium) but this method would not always be in line with best endeavor and while the wholesalers may save on the item of selling expenses the consignor will positively be the chief sufferer thereby while some wholesalers may encourage selling to outsiders. I firmly believe that the far-sighted ones—those who are tried and experienced merchants—do not encourage and engage in selling to other than retailers. There should be a greater degree of mutual understanding and confidence among the various groups in our business.

So in closing, I say I thoroughly believe that the three groups—the grower, the wholesaler, and the retailer, could by co-operating materially enhance the whole industry. Each is necessary to the other; each has his special function and is a vital unit in our whole economic structure. Volumes more could be written on the subject but I feel that I have covered a good deal of the ground, while not very thoroughly, still to the extent that my thoughts may inspire our leaders to make an honest effort towards further wholesome progress and in my opinion this can only be accomplished by approaching and treating each question from the principle of merit.

HAIL STORM IN ST. LOUIS.

There was considerable loss of glass sustained by the South End florists when a sudden hail storm broke out at 5.30 P. M. May 13 and made an almost complete job of it, it being estimated that the loss will average 60 per cent. Among those who lost heavily were F. J. Fillmore, Wm. Schray & Sons, John M. Walther, F. W. Bruenig, W. H. Kruse, Chas. Juengel, John Held and Meurer Bros. Others not quite so heavy were G. B. Windler, A. Meyer, Jr., Fred W. Pape, C. Bergestermann, M. Herzog, Chas. Beyer, H. J. Weber & Sons, John G. Knoll and Fred Loewenan. F. Fillmore, Emil Schray and John Walther, who sustained the greatest loss, say there was no time for sheltering any of the houses, as the storm broke so suddenly, and aside from the loss of glass, considerable damage was done to bedding stock, which was cut to pieces. About 50 per cent. of the glass lost was insured by the Hail Association.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON

Despite the overhanging skies and inclement weather market conditions have improved considerably over those existing last week. The volume of business has steadily increased and prices have been stiff and unyielding. Carnations, colored varieties only, are a trifle too plentiful but white on the other hand is decidedly scarce. The growers are not holding back for prices are ideal for them and they are taking advantage of the situation. Roses, short grades particularly, are moving rapidly, but Beauties still continue to show the effect of last week's slump. Snapdragon is coming in heavily and much is being thrown away after unsuccessful attempts have been made to sell it. The same is true of sweet peas. The market is literally flooded with them. They are still being shipped in heavily by the growers and there is no relief in sight. Cattleyas are scarcer than usual with the demand running rather high. Both callas and lilies are being disposed of readily at fair prices, and they are practically the only things which have remained in a normal state. The new crop of southern ferns have arrived to relieve the depressing scarcity and are eagerly bought up at $2.00 a thousand. Taken in its entirety the market has passed through a very favorable state.

BUFFALO

Last week was almost a holiday week, considering the volume of business done. On some lines a scarcity was seen. Of course the demand fell toward carnations for Mothers' Day and the buying was brisk especially for white. The supply was very short, which helped the sale of roses and other stock. There was an oversupply of lilies and these had to be forced. Prices were all cut up to move the heavy quantity of lilies received. Peas fell short, and on Saturday night the market was cleaned up on everything.

CHICAGO

The opening of the peony season is the important event of the week. A few early ones had struggled in, but May 15 saw the counters of the wholesale houses heaped with the big packages. The warm weather has brought out the stock in southern and central Illinois and prices are from 4 cents to 8 cents, which is not a high beginning. Lilacs are also coming in quantity and there is no fixed price, as each day varies. There has never been a finer lot of snapdragons in this market and the sale is steady. Iris, too, is in good demand and quality very good. Sweet peas are cleaning up well and cover quite a range in price with deep coloring quite marked as bright weather is more general. Of carnations there are none too many when any extra demand comes. Roses are in good crop and quality all that could be desired. Outdoor gladioli and Darwin tulips are still to be had in quantity. White and yellow daisies, always in demand at commencement time, are bringing good returns. A few violets are finding slow sale. Rose Hoosier Beauty is making a fine record.

Taken as a week business was by far the best this market has had for that day. A heavy demand easily took up the receipts at good prices. Shrimp business, particularly in roses and carnations was very large. Quite a number of the carnations, and for that matter some of the other stock, were so badly pickled that they were unfit for use. Roses are in a good supply and include some very excellent blooms. Carnations were cut very close for Mothers' Day but by the middle of the week became again plentiful. Lily receipts exceed the demand for them. Sweet peas are very plentiful. Peonies may be had and the supply of both forced and outdoor gladioli is large.

Flower Market Reports

Last week was one of the most drowsy and lackadaisical the wholesale flower district has experienced in a long time. Of course there was the Mother's Day fuss towards the end of the week, which pretty well towelled up the carnation end of the business and was the occasion of more or less tumult and not a little acerbity of temper, the net result being a clean-up of white varieties at inflated prices and a redundancy of pink and red ones of questionable age, many of which were left over for garbage purposes Monday morning. There is an enormous overload of Spanish irises, sweet peas, snapdragon, yellow daisies, etc., just at present and the congestion is intensified by the receipt of immense quantities of lilacs, apple blossoms, dogwood and other garden shrub and tree bloom as well as outdoor bulbous flowers, etc. Heavy shipments of peonies arriving from the south and in excellent condition. All these factors have contributed to break the back of the flower market but it will not be for long as the finishing of these spontaneous crops will be sure to leave a keen June market for the choicer goods.

In the rose market the past week the best demand was on the shorter grades and especially so in the white classes. Long-stemmed stock went rather slowly and prices were not as satisfactory as they should have been for fancy quality. There were too many carnations early in the week, but they cleaned up fairly well by Friday and Saturday. There was very little advance in price except on white. Even the white went at regular prices by the high-grade retail stores, as they wished to show their customers they appreciated regular trade. Cattleyas are still bringing fairly good prices and there is enough stock around to satisfy all demands. Lily of the valley of the indoor brand brings the usual figures, although there is a lot of fine outdoor stock at present going for very little. We wonder are those buyers really more of the sheep than we have been imputing to them for all these years. It seems so. Some of that outdoor stock going for a dollar is worth more than the five-dollar indoor. And yet these slaves of habit must pay the five. Sweet peas hold their own very well. Gladioli, indoor and southern, and in "Baby" and "Grandiflora" are now plentiful and good. Snapdragon goes well in the fancy grades, but there is an immense lot of poor stock. Daffodils are nearly over.

Mother's Day is steadily growing in popularity. Last Sunday by far over-reached any previous celebration of the day. Indeed, at least one retail firm finally had to resort to white paper flowers, after disposing of cut blooms of all varie-

Obituary

Jose Krug.

Jose Krug, florist at Alton, Ill., aged 80 years, died on Tuesday, May 9. The funeral took place from his late home in Alton on May 11. Mr. Krug was well known in local trade circles and in St. Louis, where he was a regular buyer in the flower market and was greatly loved and respected.

J. Gurney Fowler.

J. Gurney Fowler died at Brackenhurst, Pembury, Eng., on April 27, after a few days' illness, in the prime of life. He was a member of the Council and treasurer of the Royal Horticultural Society and chairman of its orchid committee.

The latest meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society turned out to be a first-class exhibition of spring flowers. The judges awarded a first-class certificate and special mention to J. F. Huss for specimen hydrangeas and polyanthus primroses; also a first-class certificate to W. S. Mason for primroses. Mr. Huss among other things stated that the winter had been especially hard on all kinds of shrubs. The California privet hedge that surrounds the Goodwin estate has been killed in many places, which to say the least is very discouraging after years of laborious work in trimming and culture to its present excellent growth. Next meeting will be Tulip night. ALFRED DIXON, Secretary.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Henry M. Robinson, of Hiram & Beale, arrived in Boston last night on a trip to the Florida State Fair and will be in the city for a few days.

A very successful show of flowers was held at the exhibition in the May Flower Show on the second day by Julius Rochrs Company, Rutherford, N. J. It had been delayed in transit.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club enjoyed a memorable outing on Monday, May 15, when they visited the estate of Gen. S. M. Weld at Dedham and were hospitably entertained.

Henry M. Robinson has returned from his extended southern tour, and in direct contrast to the weather which we have been having here he reports an average temperature of 90 degrees during his entire trip.

An exceptionally novel feature may be seen in Henry Penn's show windows in the shape of flower-trimmed hats. A black straw model trimmed with cattleyas and maiden hair is attracting special attention.

Victor Hartford was ill the earlier part of the week with a severe cold which threatened to develop into pneumonia. The crisis has been averted, however, and Mr. Hartford will resume his duties the first of next week.

David and Edward Welch, of Welch Bros. Co., are making extraordinary preparations for the Decoration Day rush, and with increasing shipments and every facility to handle a large business, are anticipating one of the busiest weeks of the year.

Darwin tulips are rapidly forging ahead in popularity in this market. A big advance in their relative position among the favorite forcing bulbs is noted by Patrick Welch, who has been giving them a special push. These richly colored flowers, with American Beauty roses, peonies and astilbes, will be among his leaders for Memorial Day.

Elliott Filson, the popular Waltham boy who sells Peirce Bros.' stock in the market was married on last Tuesday night to Miss Harriet Carter, also of Waltham. The ceremony took place at the bride's residence where Sam. Beck had charge of the decorations, the profusion of which elicited much praise. Mr. Filson's brother salesman presented him with a complete set of electrical household appliances, and he also received gifts from many local firms. They will spend a week among the Berkshires.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Adolph Gude has been honored by unanimous election as president of the Anacostia Bank.

The Harrisii lily crop this year was a pronounced success and as a result Gude Bros. Co. are going into their production for next Easter heavier than ever. They have already placed pretty heavy orders for bulbs.

A large King snake became excited last week and sunk its fangs into the left hand of Fred H. Kramer, while the latter was practicing a new act in which the reptile and several of its brothers were to play an important part in an entertainment at the Lyceum.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the outing of the Florists' Club. The committee in charge is headed by Capt. William H. Ernest, chairman, Harry B. Lyster, George C. Smith, Thomas C. Smith, Edward S. Schmidt, William Marche and O. A. C. Schenck.

The Civil Service Commission has announced that an examination will be held early next month in Alexandria, Va., to secure eligibles for appointment as specialist in insects as carriers of plant diseases. Further information can be secured upon application to the Commission.

CHICAGO.

The peony season is again open.

Chas. McKellar is said to be convalescing from his recent severe illness.

Mothers' Day is one occasion in which the plant sales do not nearly approach the flower sales, and the artificial flowers have as yet no foothold.

John Poehlmann was able to visit the store last week, where he found everyone on the jump filling orders. Mr. Poehlmann has been ill for some time and his presence was most welcome.

The store at 52 East Monroe street, which is just round the corner from the present location, has been secured by George Weinhoeber for August 1 and will be made a part of the present store at that time.

Local papers are announcing the engagement of A. Miller and Miss Dorothy Frankel, of Chicago. A. Miller is a member of the firm of A. Henderson Co., seedsmen, and is well known to the trade. The young lady is reputed to be one of Chicago's prettiest girls.

Mothers' Day made a good record in Chicago. The optimistic see in it the promise of a day that shall rank with Christmas and Easter in the florists' holidays. It was far ahead of any other Mothers' Day and that with the handicap of a rain storm for hours. The orders from the first called for a large quantity of carnations, but there was little difficulty in securing a change to roses, which were no dearer than carnations.

An event of importance called the wholesalers together this morning (May 16). A strike of the drivers of the express companies throughout the city went into effect at that time, working havoc with the handling of perishable goods and crippling the florists' shipping trade. The vacant store in the Le Moyne block was soon filled with an anxious group, from which a committee was appointed to see what could be done. Fred Lautenschlager, who brought about the settlement in a similar case a few years ago, and Mr. Kroeschell, were delegated to wait upon the express company and report to the committee. As generally understood, the question is not one of wages, but of recognition of the union as such.

PITTSBURGH.

George Marshall, of the McCallum Company, has been confined at home with illness this week.

Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Langhans with their son and daughter are taking an eastern automobile trip.

The Victoria Flower Shop owned by A. Krongold is now located opposite the William Penn Hotel.

Accompanied by their family Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Ludwig left on last Tuesday morning to spend the summer at their farm. DeForrest W. Ludwig has returned from North Carolina much improved in health.

Mrs. William Thaw, whose summer home is at Cresson in the Allegheny Mountains, has offered five prizes of $10 each and five prizes of $5 each for the best kept lawns and yards in Cresson during the season.

The local Daughters of the Confederacy co-operated with the Civic Club's Vacant Lot Committee by arranging to furnish flowers to be distributed in the city hospitals. Their only stipulation is that preference be given to southern flowers.

The Audobon Society, of Western Penna., has purchased trees to supply the members and others desiring to provide natural food for birds. Recently State Game Commissioner John M. Phillips, who was active in its formation personally purchased 500 mulberry trees, which he presented to 2,000 Boy Scouts for distribution throughout Allegheny County.

Experiments are being conducted by the Fayette County Farm Bureau on the farm of Charles M. Steele in land fertilizing with a view of perfecting the cultivation of blue grass. Previous to the advent of coke works in that section the soil was admirably adapted to blue grass, but the sulphur smoke has practically killed the product. The next project of this bureau will be corn variety tests.

Since the Easter flower shows attention has been directed to the magnificent display in the conservatories and on the grounds of Richard Beatty Mellon. Prominent among the attractions is the formal Italian Garden, which, under the supervision of Ernest Guter, is a vision of loveliness. This was recently carried out with hyacinths, tulips and scillas. Mr. Guter has recently lowered and remodeled the vegetable garden and is about to begin remodeling the rock garden. Another splendid private tulip collection was seen on the Charles D. Armstrong grounds on Lexington avenue. Thomas Edward Tyler, head gardener, had about 60,000 bulbs, making a gorgeous display. In the greenhouse were seen about 500 orchid seedlings.

WEED KILLER

THE VERY NEWEST AND QUICKEST METHOD OF DESTROYING WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

We manufacture the strongest line of DISINFECTANTS on the market.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. Albert M. Herr and Mrs. Brown of Lancaster, Pa., visited our annual society event, the "Flower Market" in Rittenhouse Square on the 17th. They were after pointers. Lancaster means to go Philadelphia one better.

There will be a flower show at Lansdowne Saturday, June 3rd, in Century Hall, opening at 2 P. M. Samuel S. Pennock, president of the American Rose Society, lives in Lansdowne and will do his share as an exhibitor. He has a very complete rose garden, full of rare varieties from all over the world, and is always glad to show his neighbors anything in season. He wants all readers of HORTICULTURE to come out to the exhibition and enjoy themselves and help to spread the enthusiasm.

FLOWERS ARE LOVED FOR THEIR OWN SAKES.

Every month in the year they rise up amongst us in a new dress, calling forth admiration, love and praise. They are the pride of the rich and the joy of the poor.

Some of the old flowers, such as the Marigold and Sweet Williams, are like the old-fashioned old gentleman, and the Red Clovers and Buttercups, of which there are ten times more than we need, are like the roguish little children, of which we never have enough to play among them.

The Poppies and Morning Glories are the debutantes in the glow of young womanhood. How your mother loved those Roses and Sweet Peas and Honeysuckle! Don't you remember?

The rich have paintings and books and rare gems.

The poor have few things and little to get them with. If there were no flowers they would be largely shut off from the exquisite pleasure of graceful shapes, colors and perfumes.

They are messages of affection. They constitute tokens of remembrances and brotherhood and sisterhood of the human race.

ties and colors until there was a complete exhaustion of the stock in trade. Of carnations the demand far exceeded the supply, other flowers, in turn, falling in line, according to popularity. Carnations, which sold from 25 to 35 cents apiece, are now retailing at 50 cents a dozen. Other flowers remained about the same. At time of writing, there is some scarcity of all varieties with the exception of roses, including American Beauties, and sweet peas.

There was and is plenty of stock of good quality at the wholesale market. On "Mothers' Day," May 13, carnations cleaned up well at 100 prices. White carnations, for 5 to 8 cents. In other stocks the market had a great supply, with very low prices. Lilies and callas drag and can be bought as low as $3 per 100. Sweet peas are hard to dispose of at any price. Outdoor lily of the valley, peonies, daisies, snapdragon, cape Jasmine and miniature gladioli are all quoted very low. All greens are selling well, especially asparagus.

The Mother's Day business in this market was very good and white roses as well as white carnations sold well. As in former years, the stock of carnations soon became exhausted. The price was $8 per hundred and the quality of the flowers was very good. Peonies are in and sell well because of their recent arrival. Violets are off the market. Sweet peas are not in the heavy supply noticeable last week. American Beauty roses are still very plentiful and low in price. Gardenias are in heavy supply and are being sold on the streets in profusion. Orchids continue scarce, with very high prices prevailing. Dogwood is to be had in huge quantities, and snowballs and fruit blossoms are offered in the market places. Greens are quite short in supply. Scarcity of lily of the valley is again reported, although outdoor stock is helping.

A Metropolitan Promise Is as Good as a Bond

Promises even though made with the best intentions are usually very uncertain unless the source of the promise is backed up by a firmly established reputation for reliability and dependability.

Everything should be incorporated in the contract. We seldom make a promise—but, when we do, our reputation proves conclusively that its fulfillment can always be depended upon.

The N. J. Agricultural Experiment Station, at New Brunswick, N. J., placed their greenhouse building operations with us, and the following is what Dr. J. G. Lipman, the Director wrote after it was completed.

"In so far as I know, the work done by you was eminently satisfactory, and I trust that we shall have occasion in the future to request your company to bid on other work."

to be done, they decided to be made in a greenhouse. They got their paper and pencil and set out to build it right.

When they had done a little for a greenhouse, they found that they could make a good one. We will show you how to do it.

It was just as they started to build it, that they

Last fall we completed another house 68 x 200 feet.

The first was our reconstructed construction with 6 lights of 20 inch glass to each section. The last one has 7. The sides are 7 ft. 6 inches high instead of 5 ft. 6 inches.

It's the only house of its kind in the Vineland section of New Jersey. Just at this grower was the first to put in overhead irrigation in the section, so he was the first to appreciate that the grower's house is the best house any way you figure.

HYDRANGEAS FOR SUMMER-BLOOMING

We have an unusually fine stock of these plants, which have been kept dormant during the winter and are now starting into growth. They will begin to bloom in July and will remain in flower during August. These plants are in great demand for summer resorts for lawn and park decoration. We offer the following varieties in 1 1/2-in. pots: Otaka and the new French varieties, Avalanche, Fraicheur, E. G. Hill, La Lorraine, Mme. Maurice Hannar, Mme. E. Monillere, Mile. Renard Gaillard, and Radiance—$2.00 to $3.00 each.

Also Otaka, very large fine symmetrical specimens in half-barrels, unusually heavily budded, $10.00 to $15.00 each.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toll, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Care of Begonias

For strong plants in 4 or 5-inch pots there is no better place than a mild hotbed that has 4 or 5 inches of ashes or soil over the manure. In this plunge the pots up to their rims, and they will make good headway and can be hardened off without any check. They should stay here until the first half of June because about the end of May we are liable to get a few nights at such a low temperature that will make them look sick for weeks. Bedding begonias such as Vernon or Erfordii that are pot bound should be given a shift, using a rich porous soil. This will prevent them from becoming stunted before planting time. Begonias of the tuberous rooted sorts intended for bedding out should be given plenty of room between them to spread out.

Dracaena indivisa

This stock needs a house a little closer and warmer than an ordinary house. They should never go lower than 60 degrees during the night. Plants that are over a year old can be planted outside in June where they will grow and make fine plants by September which can be potted and grown on for next spring's sales. Plants that were raised from seed sown soon after the New Year should be ready now to go into 3-inch pots. Keep them inside and give them a compost of turfy loam three parts, well-decayed cow manure one part, with a liberal sprinkling of sharp sand. Drain the pots with crocks and when they have filled the pots with roots they will want copious waterings. It is most essential to give them a good syringing every morning during the summer.

Increasing Ficus by Mossing

This is a very good month to perform the operation of mossing on these plants. Select about 6 or 8 inches of the leafy tops and cut them about half way through, then split the stem about half an inch upward inserting something to keep the split open, such as a match or piece of gravel. Cover the cut so the whole will be enveloped with sphagnum moss. Put enough sphagnum around so as to form a ball from 2 to 2½ inches in diameter. In about six or eight weeks they will be fit to cut off and pot. Keep the moss always moist by frequent light syringing and see that the plants are kept rather on the dry side at the roots. Place them in the warmest house and at some end where they can have abundant atmospheric moisture all the time. It is a good plan to take all the lanky and unsalable plants and work them up into salable stock by this mode. When rooted they should be potted and kept growing right along.

Nerines

When all the foliage assumes a golden hue the pots should be laid on their sides on a sunny bank or high piece of ground where they will not be likely to get much water. When the foliage of nerines begins to turn yellow it shows that they are finishing up their growth. They can be given this treatment until the middle of September when they should be moved into a frame or cool greenhouse. After they have had their rest and begin to make fair growth they will take an abundance of water with overhead syringing. When the flower scapes make their appearance, remove about an inch of the surface from the pots and give a top dressing of rich compost. Give an application of liquid manure once a week. To be successful with nerines you should syringe so as to keep their foliage free from insects and healthy, until leaf-growth is complete. They do well in an ordinary greenhouse that runs from 55 to 60 at night.

Palms

If there are large palms that need repotting this is an excellent time to do this work, as nearly all the palms and other decorative stock make a heavy growth during the summer and the more they are encouraged the better. If larger pots are not required remove some of the old soil from the roots and replace with a fresh compost of fibrous loam three parts, well-rotted cow manure one part, and about a 5-inch pot of bone meal to a barrow load. Select some of the tougher leaved kinds and stand them outdoors. If rains have washed off considerable of the shading applied to the glass some time ago it will be necessary to use some more whitening on the roof as many palms are quite easily scorched. Air freely, now that the days are so warm, and keep plenty of moisture in the atmosphere. A couple of hoses overhead on clear days should also be given with a carefully directed pressure, which will not only keep them clean but make them grow better.

Vincas for Next Year

Vinca cuttings rooted during the winter should now be planted outside in the field. Give them a piece of fairly rich ground and keep them cultivated and hoed and they will not be any further trouble until lifted and potted up in the fall.

Next Week: Bouvardias, Young Primulas; Ericas; Feeding Orchids; Hydrangeas for Next Year; Start Cultivation.

Memorial Day

Next Tuesday is Memorial Day. In a thousand cemeteries tombstones will be garlanded and grassy grounds strewn with flowers in loving remembrance of dear ones gone. This beautiful custom of placing the flowers of spring-time on the graves of fallen heroes and departed friends is something that will never pass away so long as the human race remains. Artificial flowers and other expedients may have a little run here and there, because of the expense or the fleeting character of fresh material, but it will be for a brief period only and the natural flower will have the right of way. This year we hear something of a scarcity of flowers in some markets to supply the Memorial Day demand. We hope there will be none. An inadequate supply of flowers at such a time will do much to counteract any advance in prices, and to increase the feeling of unity and peace of resentment, distrust and aversion for the florist, which far outweighs any apparent advance accruing from the advanced prices made possible by a short supply. So we hope there will be an abundance of good flowers, that normal prices will prevail everywhere and that the great floral holiday of 1916 will pass into history as "the last ever" for ever and every reader of HORTICULTURE.

The flower show fever

The Flower Show outlook for next spring seems quite promising. Three big exhibitions, to be held in Boston,
 New York and St. Louis, respectively, are already fixed for March, and there are others as yet in embryo. Under the requirements now essential for the successful conduct of a public exhibition, one year in advance is not any too soon to begin work. That this is generally realized is shown in the preparatory steps already taken in the three cities aforesaid. Boston's preliminary schedule of prizes (March 21-25, 1917) is already printed and distributed Cards bearing the legend "St. Louis 1917 Spring Flower Show (March 15-18, 1917)—Be a Booster—Visit us in 1917—We Want You"—have been sent out far and wide. As mentioned in our news columns this week, Cleveland which has the exhibition fever ever since last fall's happy event, is in the ring for a September blow-out under the guidance of the same hustlers who managed things so well last year. All will find a wide field for the exercise of aggressive executive ability, for the old-style show has no chance whatever, and it is equally certain that even a modern show, however deserving in itself, will lose, out unless energetically exploited according to modern publicity methods.

A questionable project

We wonder how much money the S. A.
 F. will be able to gather in for that present to Miss Jarvis. The S. A. F. has had on its hands for several years the matter of a testimonial of more commendable character and nobler purpose which might well have been completed before plunging into this hasty scheme, the propriety and decency of which, from the Society's standpoint is seriously questioned by many of its members. We have received a number of letters approving of our views on this "Mothers' Day" subject as expressed editorially in a recent issue of HORTICUL-TURE. One of these communications is from the President of the American Carnation Society, which we take the liberty of quoting from, as follows: -

My Dear Mr. Stewart:

I do want to congratulate you on the timely editorials in reference to the Mothers' Day fund, especially the one in the issue of HORTICULTURE under date of May 13th.

I fully agree with you that speaking from strictly a commercial standpoint it's a mistake to promote any special days for the use of flowers, and furthermore I consider it very inappropriate for any line of business to ever try to commercialize that which we should revere.

I sometimes think it's no wonder old Europe often looks upon us Americans as being money mad. I regret very much that as an official of the American Carnation Society I must send out an appeal for this fund, but this was agreed upon by the Executive Board at Philadelphia in my absence and officially we must sometimes do that which we would not do individually.

Very truly yours,

J. F. AMMANN.

THE IRIS IN CALIFORNIA.

Having spent the winter in California, of course I was on the watch for the most successful all-around flowers.

There are frosts in winter even in that Land of the Sun. The Exposition continues another year in San Diego, and it may be perpetual, as they have very fine buildings and their grounds are a dream of beauty. We stopped at the Knickerbocker Hotel which is in the center of the car system. It is a homelike place and the proprietor went with us, pointed out the car we needed for any part of the city. I was looking for a flower which would be in bloom all the year. I found beautiful iris in flower on the ground in December.

After I went to the justly famous Iris Gardens of Moneta, California, I found that there were iris blooms every day in the year. Remember the iris is one of the largest flower families. There are over 170 distinct varieties besides the rare new crosses. Mrs. Dean, the proprietor, is about the best informed person in America on this flower. She has Dykes' colossal work which cost $35.00, also every book she could hear of on this flower. Some of the newer sorts are superb and defy description. Macrantha or Amas from Asia Minor has immense radiant petals broad as a lady's hand. Monsignor is a new one from France with a wonderful blend of violet and purple. Dorothea is a beauty of the dwarf variety of a lovely smiling and open face. Mesopotamia is a glorious Amazon, a queen among the rest, four feet tall and a splendor. Sheffield Giant is a wonder. Mrs. Dean assisted in the last edition of the Iris Manual, spending much time in classifying and describing the various kinds. The iris is the best drouth resistant we have, marvelously adapted to all the semi-arid regions.

York, Neb.

C. S. HARRISON.

IN LILAC TIME.

Go down to Kew in lilac time, in lilac time,
in lilac time;
Go down to Kew in lilac time (it isn't far from London!)
And you shall wander hand in hand with love in summer's wonderland;
Go down to Kew in lilac time (it isn't far from London!)

The cherry trees are seas of bloom and soft perfume and sweet perfume,
The cherry trees are seas of bloom (and oh, so near to London!)
And there they say, when dawn is high and all the world's a blaze of sky,
The cuckoo, though he's very shy, will sing a song for London.

The nightingale is rather rare and yet they say you'll hear him there
At Kew, at Kew in lilac-time (and oh, so near to London!)
The linnet and the thrush, too, and after dark the long halloo
And golden-eyed "twit" in whom "owls" that ogle London.

Nor Noah hardly knew a bird of any kind that isn't heard
At Kew, at Kew in lilac-time (and oh, so near to London!)
And when the rose begins to pout and all the chestnuts' spikes are out You'll hear the rest without a doubt, all chorusing for London:—

Come down to Kew in lilac-time, in lilac-time, in lilac-time; Come down to Kew in lilac-time (it isn't far from London!)
And you shall wander hand in hand with love in summer's wonderland;
Come down to Kew in lilac-time (it isn't far from London!)

—From Alfred Noyes' poem "The Barrel Organ."

ROSE LOS ANGELES.

NEW ROSE "LOS ANGELES."

This new rose, said to have been raised by Fred. Howard, of Los Angeles, Cal., recently received its formal "christening" in the Chamber of the Los Angeles City Council, under the name of "Los Angeles." It is described as a sturdy bloom, five inches in diameter, of luminous coral pink shaded at the base of the petal with translucent gold, its fragrance equal in intensity to the odor of the finest Marechal Niel. Buds are long and pointed, expanding into a flower of mammoth proportions, with an ever increasing intensity of color as the blooms mature, wonderful lasting qualities, petals thick in texture and the whole flower substantial to a high degree. One of the best growers in the entire family of roses, producing an endless succession of flowers from early spring to late autumn, etc., etc. It is also claimed for the new rose that it is absolutely mildew proof. Having all these superlative qualities, Los Angeles should have a triumphant entry into the ever-increasing retinue of the Queen of Flowers. We hope the claims so confidently put forth may be established. "Time will tell."

FALL FLOWER SHOW AT CLEVELAND.

There is to be a big show held in Cleveland, Sept. 2nd to 9th, under the name of The Industrial Exposition and Fair. One feature will be a Flower Show. The co-operation of the Cleveland Florist Club, The Ohio Horticultural Society, The Cleveland Garden Club, Shaker Heights Garden Club, and Lakewood Garden Club, has been invited. Committees representing these societies will meet in the very near future and arrange the details of their premium list. H. P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., florists, is a director and a member of the executive committee of this coming event. M. A. Vinson, manager of the successful Cleveland Flower Show last November, will have active charge and general direction of the entire show. Copies of the premium may be secured by addressing Mr. Vinson, at 2515 Franklin avenue, care The Cleveland Chamber of Industry, Cleveland.

A GREAT REFORM.

The following letter from a gentleman, who was a shipper to the St. Louis market for over a quarter of a century, in approval of the closing of the wholesale flower stores on Sunday is self-explanatory.

Edwardsville, Ill., May 1, 1916.
St. Louis Wholesale Florists, St. Louis, Mo.
Gentlemen: In this progressive age as in all past ages I appreciate the amount of courage required and the amount of abuse to withstand, to, in only a small measure inaugurate a reform in any line of business.

I too appreciate the lack of compliments coming even from those who fully agree with such reform and now take this opportunity of congratulating you as a body of highminded business men for the courage of your convictions, each one of you, in recognizing Sunday as the one day in seven to refuse to do business.

I fully appreciate the temptations you must resist, and the abuse you surely receive, but I predict you will win out in the end. And I sincerely hope to see the day when all those who are now heaping this abuse on you will thank you for having taken the initiative in this great reform.

Very sincerely yours,

J. F. AMMANN.

PREPAREDNESS.

Some day the soft ideal that we wooed
Confronts us fiercely—fœe beset, pursued And cries reproachfully "Was it then my praise,

Am not myself you loved? Prove now thy truth.

I claim of thee the promise of thy youth,
Give me thy life or cover in empty phrase
The victim of thy genius, not its mate!"

Life may be given in many ways
And loyalty to Truth be sealed
As bravely in the closet as the field
So beautiful is Fate.

But then to stand beside her
When craven churls deride her,

To front the armies and not fly
This shows, methinks, God's plan

And measure of a stalwart man,
Limbed like the old heroic breeds

Who stand self-poised on unshakable solid earth.

Not turned to frame excuses for his earth.

Fed from within with all the strength he needs.

—James Russell Lowell.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

Milwaukee Convention.

A spirit of true co-operation appears to have laid hold of the members of the American Association of Nurserymen, and the forty-first convention to be held in Milwaukee, June 28th, 29th and 30th, will average in attendance any former gathering of the representatives of the nursery trade. With the adoption of the new constitution at Detroit, last year, a general revival of determination to place the organization on a higher plane than it has ever before attained was manifest.

At the coming convention a report by Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass., who was appointed counsel of the Association, will consist of a review of his work for the past year and of recommendations for the future; and the various papers to be read will all breathe the same spirit of effort to raise the moral and commercial ethics of the organization. The intention is to make a membership in the American Association a guarantee of all that is honest in the carrying out of contracts, the stock handled, and in general business conduct. The dealer who follows the "gold brick" methods and whose representations either to customers among the public or with his brethren in the trade, is to reform or suffer elimination from the Association.

The quality of the program for the Milwaukee meeting, in variety of topics and discussion, surpasses anything ever before presented to the nurserymen, and the sessions will be full of life and profit. The receipts for membership dues are more than double those of any previous year, and the correspondence accompanying renewals indicates satisfaction with the new constitution.

Members of record in 1915 may renew without coming under the new rule, and if this notice should be read by such as have not yet renewed they may feel at liberty to send in application so as to reach the secretary not later than June 3 and be included in the Badge Book.

The address of the secretary is John Hall, 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

At the last meeting the date for the Flower Show was fixed for the 9th, 10th and 11th of November. A picnic committee was appointed consisting of Elmer Weaver, A. F. Strickler and Rudolph Nagle and it will report in full at the June meeting. The programme committee through its chairman, Harry K. Rohrer reported the possibility of the June meeting being a Peony Symposium with B. F. Barr as the essayist. Rudolph Nagle exhibited a fine specimen of Pelargonium Easter Greeting.

The paper of the evening was by A. M. Herr, entitled "Looking Backward and Forward in the Florists' Business." In the discussion the matter of prices was pretty thoroughly threshed out. As a counteraction to the planting of hardy material in small city yards, crowding out the annual plant trade and reducing the revenue of every florist in the United States, it was suggested by the writer that several florists make an exhibit of yard effects in our public parks as educators of what a yard should look like. If this were carried out all over this U. S. it would mean millions of dollars to the florists of the country. W. M. Hahman, a rose enthusiast, suggested that a rose garden be a feature of one of the parks to create a love for roses and educate the people as to what to buy.

The after-meeting talk would fill a volume and if the paper did no other good it made some discussion.

ALBERT M. HERR.

WOMEN'S FARM AND GARDEN ASSOCIATION.

Women garden enthusiasts by the hundred came to Boston last week from all parts of the United States and had a Convention and incidentally a grand good time. They came as the Women's National Agricultural and Horticultural Association and they went as the Women's Farm and Garden Association, which is more concise.

Mrs. Francis King of Alma, Mich., who is president, presided at the meetings in Horticultural Hall. Governor McCall opened the convention on Thursday morning, May 18, with a short address and words of welcome were added by Stanley Wilcox, secretary to Mayor Curley, and President R. M. Saltonstall, of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The program included talks by Mrs. Edith L. Fullerton of Medford, L. I., N. Y., Miss Mabel A. Turner of Milton, Mass., Miss Mary Youngs, Garden City, N. Y., Miss Annie E. Burke of Brockton, Mass., E. H. Wilson of the Arnold Arboretum, Geo. T. Powell of N. Y. Experiment Station, R. W. Curtis of Cornell University, Jane B. Patton of Simmons College, Jane B. Haines of Penn. School of Horticulture for Women, Amy L. Cogswell of Lowthorpe School of Landscape Architecture, Florence I. Davis of Bridge-water State Normal School, Miss Helen Holmes of Kingston, Miss Edna Cutter and A. A. Shurtleff of Boston, Miss Alice L. Day of New Canaan, Conn., Mrs. A. H. Gross of Chicago, and others. Mrs. George U. Crocker, chairman of the national committee, Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy and Mrs. W. W. Edgar, together with a score of other ladies from the vicinity of Boston looked after the program and preparatory work previous to the convention and during its continuance in the most efficient manner. E. H. Wilson's talk on the Flowers of Japan, with stereopticon views, drew an attendance that filled Horticultural Hall to the limit.

On Friday the ladies visited the Arnold Arboretum in autos and were entertained at the home of Prof. C. S. Sargent. On Saturday they motored to Ipswich, stopping at places of interest along the North Shore, and while at Ipswich they were the guests of Mrs. Geo. E. Barnard. In connection with the meeting there were many exhibits of flowers, plants, bees, garden work clothing and tools.

Considerable interest centered about the historical table. Here were seen specimens of plants and flowers from the historic spots of Massachusetts. Mrs. William L. Eaton, of Concord, showed the curious irises from Hawthorne's Old Manse, hollyhocks from Longfellow's garden, rare June roses from Ralph Waldo Emerson's home, lilacs from Shady Hill, the home of Charles Eliot Norton in Cambridge; English ivies from Mt. Vernon, and Grey's ivy from Stoke Pogis.

These officers were elected: Mrs. Francis B. King, president; Mrs. Hilda Loines, general secretary; Miss Louisa G. Davis, treasurer; Miss Jean Cross, recording secretary, and the following vice-presidents: Miss Mira L. Dock, Mrs. H. B. Fullerton, Miss Jane B. Haines, Miss Elizabeth Leighton Lee, Mrs. J. Willis Martin and Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer.

INTERNATIONAL GARDEN CLUB.

Summer Flower Show, New York, June 1st to 4th.

Preparations are now completed for the first annual Summer Flower Show of the International Garden Club, to be held on their grounds, Pelham Manor, Pelham Bay Park, New York City. Two large tents and smaller tents will be erected on the grounds. A sunken garden effect will be arranged in the tents for the display of the groups of plants, etc. The schedules are now ready with entry blanks and same can be had from the secretary-manager of the show, Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J. The grounds can easily be reached by automobile, which is on the main Boston Road from New York. It is also on the Harlem division of the N. Y., N. H. R. R., and freight and express can be sent to City Island Station, which is nearest the grounds. People coming from the east can change at New Rochelle or can take the 3rd Ave. Elevated trains to 129th St., where they can get the train to City Island Station.

A generous prize list of nearly $5,000.00 is being offered about equally between the trade and private estates and additional premiums will be given to meritorious exhibits.

Governor Whitman opened the grounds last year for the Club and it is expected that Mayor Mitchell will be on hand to open the Flower Show.

For further information write to Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Southold, L. I., N. Y., Garden Club held a successful flower show in Grange Hall, Southold, on May 13.

The first annual flower show of the New Century Club, of Chester, Pa., will be held early in June in Library Hall, Chester.

The Village Improvement Association, of Moorestown, N. J., will hold its tenth annual flower show in June, date to be announced later.

The St. Louis Retail Florists' Association held a splendidly attended meeting May 15 at the Mission Inn Garden. They will continue summer meetings at the garden, but out of doors.

The National Association of Gardeners and American Association of Park Superintendents have been invited to hold a "field day" at the Cromwell Gardens of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., on June 21.

The Development of the Modern Winter Flowering Sweet Pea

An Address by Howard M. Earl before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, on March 7.

TO DEVELOP the modern winter flowering sweet pea we must go back to the origin of that fine old variety, Blanche Ferry, for undoubtedly the American winter flowering sweet pea can be traced back to that variety, or the early flowering mutations which have since arisen from it. The history of Blanche Ferry is very interesting and, strange to say, the name of its originator is not known. Over fifty years ago a quarryman's wife in Jefferson County, New York, procured some seeds from a bright flowered plant of that very old, in fact, one of the original varieties, Painted Lady (introduced in 1700), and for many years after she sowed and selected the best plants from her original selection, thus carefully and painstakingly improving her stock of what was in later years to be known as Blanche Ferry.

W. W. Tracy, who was then connected with the firm of D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, in passing that way saw the plants and was immediately impressed with their distinct character and obtained a small stock, only, we believe, about one hundred seeds. The variety was named by the firm Blanche Ferry and was introduced by them in 1889. In 1895 Messrs. Ferry introduced an earlier flowering type of the same variety, calling it Extra Early Blanche Ferry; then, in 1898 W. Atlee Burpee & Co. introduced Earliest of All, this being a still earlier type and this variety is what is known on the market and grown so extensively as Christmas Pink. There is a much earlier flowering variety, but the growth is smaller and it is questionable if under glass the flowers attain quite the size of its later blooming counterpart. Undoubtedly, all our winter flowering sweet peas have the Blanche Ferry blood in them. Although the crosses later may not have been made on that variety, still, the originals of the type all emanated from it.

The Telemly sweet pea, which originated with the Rev. Edwin Arkwright at Telemly, Algeria, also sprung from Blanche Ferry. Mr. Arkwright explains that a sport from Blanche Ferry showed itself in his garden, blooming in February, when he promptly marked it and the seed saved showed flowers the following January. From this time on he got various sports from this and also crossed them with some of the best of the summer flowering sorts. He explains that he sows all his peas about the end of September, and while the summer flowering varieties do not bloom until May, these early varieties come into bloom from January. As soon as Countess Spencer was introduced in 1904 Mr. Arkwright procured it and has been crossing his original type with the new waved, or Spencer varieties, and I believe he has now a number of Spencer early flowering varieties quite fixed to color.

Mention should also be made of the early flowering type known as Englemann's. About 1903 some plants of the flowering type sported with him producing plants of winter flowering habit. These he grew for some years under glass in England, but on account of the dull weather usually experienced there throughout the winter, he has ceased to grow this type.

The first introduced of Zvolanek's varieties of winter flowering Spencers are, we believe, the direct results of crossing the winter flowering Grandifloras with the summer flowering Spencer type, but there have also been introduced several varieties of true Spencer form, but winter flowering type, which we understand came as direct sports from the summer flowering varieties, namely, Yarrowa, Rose Queen and Anita Wehrman.

The origin of Yarrowa, is very interesting. Arthur Yates, of Sydney, explains that for many years sweet peas were looked upon as one of the most difficult plants to grow successfully in the warmer sections of Australia. The regular summer flowering types bloomed in the late spring when they were liable to sudden bursts of hot weather and heavy winds which often shortened their flowering season to a few weeks. Occasionally they failed to bloom at all. However, the introduction of such varieties as Earliest of All, Mont Blanc and later the Telemly and newer American Grandiflora varieties quite revolutionized sweet pea culture in Australia, as these early varieties flowered in the winter and early spring, giving them a supply of flowers for several months when practically no other flowers were available.

This was a great advance and sweet peas soon became one of their most popular flowers. But the quality of the winter flowering varieties was so much below the standard of the modern Spencers that the Australian growers were not satisfied and efforts have been made with considerable success by a few enthusiasts to raise by selection and cross-fertilizing a superior type of the winter flowering varieties of the Grandiflora section.

However, a decided advance was in view, as in 1908 there appeared in the garden of a Mr. John Young, of Sydney, in a patch of new summer flowering Spencers, one plant of true Spencer type, but quite distinct from all others. It was different in its vigorous habit and upright growth, earliness and color, and was in full bloom when the others were only a few inches high and had gone to seed before the normal type had commenced to show flower buds. The seeds from this plant were carefully saved and sown the following autumn, when it came quite true to the parent and instead of remaining more or less dormant all winter as the original Spencers do it commenced to bloom in the late autumn and continued to flower right through the winter, going to seed in the early spring, as Telemly and American winter flowering varieties do in Sydney.

This early Spencer is quite distinct in habit from any of the previous early flowering varieties. It is an extremely vigorous grower and with good cultivation will in the vicinity of Sydney top a ten-foot trellis, while the Telemly and American older varieties grown alongside only attain half the height. The Australians have been working on Yarrowa as the seed bearing parent of many crosses using the best of the summer flowering Spencers and we believe they have now quite a family of Yarrowas in the best colors, but, so far as we can judge by reports they are as yet far from being properly fixed, though doubtless in a year or two this will be remedied and as we consider Yarrowa the earliest doer of all winter flowering sweet peas, if these Australian children of Yarrowa embody the characteristics of the parent, they will be well worth having.

My experiences and observations have been that in all lines of plant breeding the experimenter has to admit many times that nature's own crossing produces a type that is far easier fixed than when one sets about to try and obtain a given color, or type—and to no other flower does this apply more than to sweet peas.

Florists were quick to recognize the superior qualities of the Spencer sweet pea which Burpee first offered in America in 1904 under the name of Countess Spencer and with the distinct new type came an earnest desire on the part of those interested to produce, if possible, a strain of the proper growth and flowering characteristics for forcing under glass.

The first to endeavor to place a type of winter flowering Spencer on the market was Anten Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, N. J., and later of Lompoc, California, but Mr. Zvolanek's experience, judging from trials I have made, must have been very similar to those which Morse, Burpee and other growers had had when trying to fix crosses, or sports, of the original or Grandiflora types.

As a summer cut flower the Spencer so quickly superseded the Grandiflora type that it was only natural for florists to be most eager for a winter flowering strain producing the same beautifully waved flowers that today appeal to all flower lovers during practically the entire twelve months of the year. To me it seems that this extreme eagerness was solely responsible for some selections being placed on the market in an unfixed condition. Such a demand had been created for the seed of the Spencer type for forcing that many growers were satisfied to pay what might be called fabulous prices for seed which did not represent a fixed type, realizing that the high prices obtained for the waved flowers would permit a severe roguing in the bed or bench, or a careful assorting of blooms after they were cut.

The field of sale for seed of forcing sweet peas is very limited, and while watching the work of George W. Kerr at Fordhook I always had in mind the fact that it was better to "make haste slowly." One of the strains of the modern winter flowering sweet pea which I have had the pleasure of watching develop represents practically six years of hard and patient work on the part of Mr. Kerr, and after repeated trials we were forced to concede that it was better and more sure to start at the bottom and work up slowly in his way.

As in all other lines of horticultural work, the seedsman is forever on the lookout for something better and those firms who maintain extensive experimental grounds always have a great number of selections coming on, the majority of which the public will never hear of. This applies to sweet peas as well as to other blooming plants.

The following questions, put by a commercial grower, were answered by Mr. Earl at the conclusion of his address.

1. What is the best treatment of winter-flowering Spencer sweet peas, planted in a carnation bench, to produce seed?

As sweet peas grown under glass will not set seed until towards the end of April, nothing would be gained by starting the seed very early in the fall. Therefore, as there would be no advantage in allowing the flowers to remain on the vines, meanwhile would advise cutting them regularly until towards the middle of April.

2. And how soon ought they to set seed?

If the plants referred to have been flowering now for some time, they should be given regular applications of liquid manure and perhaps a top dressing of thoroughly rotted manure, the desire being to keep them growing strongly until the period when they would be likely to produce the most seed.

3. There are a few vines I particularly want to get all the seed of that is possible.

As the days get longer and the sun, naturally, much stronger, the vines are likely to be attacked by the green fly, and, unless this is seen to in time, the plants might be so badly crippled as to preclude any chance of seed setting. It is, therefore, well to fumigate the house at intervals of ten days or so as "Prevention is better than cure."

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

The meeting of this Society held in the Annex Hotel, Pittsburgh, was an interesting event. Among the speakers were W. E. Marshall of New York City, Mr. McCullom of the U-Bar Company, Michael Curren, gardener for Mrs. W. M. Horne, Sewickley Heights, and Wm. Murphy, supt. for Henry Lee Mason, Sewickley Heights. Walter James of the W. Henry R. Hilliard place, received a cultural certificate for Spiraea Gladstone and Michael Curren got a certificate of merit for hybrid calceolarias. A certificate of merit was also given to Wm. Murphy for seedling anthuriums.

MOVEMENTS OF GARDENERS.

Peter G. Brough has taken charge of the "Wenga Estate," Armonk, N. Y.

David Ridpath has been appointed head gardener for J. W. Johnson, New Brunswick, N. Y.

H. Taylor succeeds D. Hothersall as superintendent on the George Bullock place at Oyster Bay, N. Y.

William Ford has accepted the superintendency of the A. E. Smith estate at Oyster Bay, N. Y.

Harry Jones, formerly of Glen Cove, N. Y., is now gardener for the R. A. Strong estate, Portchester, N. Y.

Andrew P. Clarkson goes from Dedham, Mass., to take charge of the estate of Mrs. A. R. Meyer at Kansas City, Mo.

M. J. Collings, recently of Richmond, Va., has removed to Litchfield, Conn., where he has charge of the B. S. Clark estate.

David Hothersall, recently of Oyster Bay, N. Y., has accepted the position of superintendent of the Du Pont estate, Wilmington, Del.

The new superintendent for Mrs. A. S. Alexander's place in Roslyn, N. Y., is Alexander Robinson, formerly at Catasauqua, Pa.

Andrew Forsyth, gardener in charge of the grounds of John Daub, Pittsburgh, Pa., who has been seriously ill for some time, has returned from Hamilton, Ontario, and Lenox, Mass., much improved in health. During his stay at Lenox he was the guest of Alexander McLeod.

Obituary

George W. Cardwell.

George W. Cardwell, well known in the horticultural business, died at his home in Detroit, Mich., on May 13, 1916, at the age of 70 years.

Robert Haentze.

Robert Haentze, head of the Haentze Bros. Co., 1001 E. Lake St., died at his home in Detroit, Mich., on May 13, 1916, at the age of 68 years.

Mrs. M. Ullenbruch.

Gertrude M. Ullenbruch, wife of John Ullenbruch, died at her home in Port Huron, Mich., on May 13, 1916, at the age of 70 years.

U. B. Wakeman.

Uriah B. Wakeman died in the Harper Hospital, Detroit, Mich., on May 1, at the age of 70 years. He was the head of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply Co.

John Wright.

We learn from the columns of our British exchanges of the death on Tuesday, May 2, of John Wright, V. M. H., one of the veterans of horticulture and for many years editor of the Journal of Horticulture, succeeding Dr. Hogg. Mr. Wright was eighty years of age.

John Kral.

It is with deep sorrow that we record the death of one of the best-liked men in the wholesale cut flower trade of New York City. John Kral was in the employ of Moore, Hentz & Nash in their salesroom at 55 and 57 West 26th street. Genial, manly and attentive always to business, "Johnnie" Kral made a friend of every one with whom he came in contact. He passed away on Sunday morning, May 21, in Greenwich, Conn., after a few days' illness. His age was 41 years.

Alfred Ross.

Alfred Ross, pioneer seedsman of Wichita, Kas., died on Sunday morning, May 14, at his home on North Market street, aged 67 years. Mr. Ross was known to seed and commission men all over the country, and bore a reputation as a fine business man with the traveling men of all the large eastern and northern wholesale seed firms. He was born at Mill Creek, Va. In the year 1884 he, with his brother, J. M. Ross, went to Wichita and embarked in the seed business under the title of Ross Brothers, and since that time the firm has been a leading factor in the development of the farming and garden industry of that section, and Mr. Ross is said to have accumulated a fortune from his seed and commission houses. He was kindly and philanthropic in a quiet way and will be greatly missed. Of the eight pall bearers at his funeral all, with one exception, were employees of the firm, and two of these had been with the firm more than twenty years.

LOOKING BACKWARD AND LOOKING FORWARD.

The motto was the title of a paper read before the Lancaster (Pa.) Florists' Club at its last meeting by A. M. Herr. Mr. Herr reverted first to the time when as a 15-year-old youngster he worked with the firm of A. D. Rohrer & Bro. in the days when geraniums in 5-inch pots sold readily at $7.50 a dozen. He could see no reason why with proper working up, a market at equal prices could not be attained. He averred that entirely too much second-class stock is grown and sold. He spoke of the possibility of 12-inch pot and tub specimen geraniums for porch decoration and which might be sold at from $2.50 to $10.00 each, adding, "never sell one of these specimen geraniums where you as an educated florist know that it will not give satisfactory results and the customer the best of satisfaction. Better to lose twenty sales than to have one dissatisfied customer, who can truly attribute his dissatisfaction to you."

He compared the pansies sold now with those sold formerly at two or three times the price obtainable now, saying that "the florists are the losers, as they always are when they purchase cheap stock. There is no fortune awaiting the man who tackles this problem, but a young man who would undertake the improvement and selection of pansies to-day would, I believe, find the market ripe before many years for pansies of quality at a reasonably fair price."

Speaking of the formal beds of coleuses, alternantheras, petunias, salvias and similar stock once so popular for the city yards he attributed the abandonment of these to "the persistent efforts of our landscape gardeners and 'artistic decorators,' who have trees, shrubbery and hardy stock to sell, but without business instinct enough to know that the ordinary city yard is not their field of endeavor, the sale being as far as they can see. Our retail plant men should exercise their selling powers to counteract this planting of shrubbery and get the people back to the beauty of a real flower bed or two."

"In the matter of hardy stock the advance depends entirely on the men who handle it as to what the future will bring forth. Many city yards are large enough to stand a bit of this planting but the most of them are too small and had better be left religiously alone. I can go to any part of this city and pick out yard after yard where the planting of shrubbery is ridiculous and an offence to any one with an artistic sense. A lecturer here recently told us that a bed of red geraniums was a slap in the face to any one with an artistic sense; some of these hardy plantings are enough to give any one with just a love for the beautiful, artistic paralysis."

"Window boxes and porch decorations are coming to be more of a feature and should be made the special study of every retail florist. When you sell material for boxes and customers want something that will not last the season through educate them to throw it out and replace it once or twice during the summer. This may be a bit hard to do but a little personal work on your part will give results that will make of them a permanent customer."

Mr. Herr called attention to the greatly increased price of coal and labor now and said that "the man who does not seriously set himself to the task of getting a little more money for his stock is not going to run out. The retailer does not feel this quite as keenly as the wholesalers who have been working on a narrow margin of profit right along. Personally, I know that it is not possible for wholesaler to sell stock at last season's price the coming winter and continue in business, unless the quality of the stock is cheapened considerable and in this case the buyer will not get full satisfaction for his money."

"If we want Lancaster County to be looked up to as a safe place to send orders we must not consider how cheap we can grow stock but how near right we can grow it and make the price accordingly. Estimate costs carefully and you will be surprised to find out how little you are making on some lines of stock, then figure an increase on the cost of your next winter's coal and everything else you buy—even a fifty per cent increase on the envelopes you use to send out letters, and see what it means."

"You retail men should go through the same line of cost estimating and for goodness sake stop cutting prices. You do no good to yourself and very little harm to the other fellow, but a lot of harm to the trade in general. In a town like this a uniform price is an impossibility as one man can sell a plant at a profit for a nickel that another man would have to sell at seven or eight cents. Rather than sell at a loss cut out some lines and co-operate with the other fellow. Co-operation means much more than we as a Club seem to realize. Where would Sam Pennock's tug-of-war men have been last summer at our picnic if they had not all pulled together? Let us pull together and upbuild this business of ours."

ALBERT M. HERR.

Washington, May 22.—The Agricultural appropriation bill was reported by the Senate committee today carrying $23,900,000, a reduction of nearly $750,000 from the total as passed by the House.

The committee eliminated entirely $200,000 allowed for free distribution of seeds. If the bill passes as reported there will be a fight in conference, as the House always insists upon its free seeds.

American Seed Trade Association.

The American Seed Trade Convention, this year the American Seed Trade Association has been called to convene at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, Ill., June 29-31, 1916. The program has this year been purposely shortened as matters of vital importance to the Association and the trade will be up for discussion and it was thought wise to allow sufficient time to consider them.

The following are the rates at the Hotel Sherman, which has been selected as headquarters:

Room with bath $2.00, $3.00, $4.00 up to $5.00.
 Room for two with bath $3.00, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $7.00, $8.00, $9.00.
 Single beds in two rooms for two persons $5.00, $7.00 and up.

The management urges early reservations to avoid disappointment.

C. E. KENDEL, Sec'y.

Trade Conditions.

Retailers are generally pleased with the volume of business done, but feel that more or less valuable trade has been lost owing to the lateness of the season, which cannot be regained this year.

Last week there were reports of light frosts in various sections of New York, New Jersey and New England. The principal damage done was to tomatoes and beans where the latter were out of the ground.

The neglect of many dealers to place contracts for their future requirements until very late in the season is oftentimes embarrassing to growers. We are advised that at the present time quite a number have not placed their orders covering their future requirements in peas and beans, as also other seeds. Possibly a month hence they will come forward and should the growers, because of unfavorable crop conditions, or being too fully booked up to accept more business, hesitate to accept these late orders, the tardy ones would be greatly surprised and more or less indignant. Some day conditions will be reversed and the growers will hold the whip hand; if they do not use it on a few of the procrastinators, they will be worthy to wear wings and play harps.

Seed Trade Convention.

The Convention of The American Seed Trade Association is now about four weeks off. Matters of unusual and vital interest will be up for discussion and every seedsman who wishes the organization to be a forceful vital factor should aim to attend. It is unnecessary to be specific as to the matters that will be considered, excepting to say that the "Disclaimer" will be one, as the question as to whether it should be modified or retained in its original form will be up for serious consideration. Many conservative growers express the opinion that the "Disclaimer" is a little too drastic, and that its absolute repudiation of all responsibility on the part of the seller is not in accord with the spirit of the day. This absolute repudiation of responsibility has been the cause of much agitation among the ranks of various State Experiment Stations, and certain officials who are always thinking to cater to the farmers' interests, (but primarily for the farmers' vote) looking to the enactment of laws compelling the seedsmen to assume responsibility for the seeds they sell, and it is felt by many that the "Disclaimer" can be softened and toned to some extent without vitiating its legal and protective value.

It has been suggested that eastern seedsmen who propose attending the Convention and who are not in too desperate a hurry, would travel part of the distance by water. They could take train to Buffalo and go by one of three lines to Chicago, either by the Great Northern Steamship Company, the Anchor Line, or the D. & B. Line. The latter would involve two changes—one at Detroit, the other at Mackinac, but as these changes are made at the same dock where the passenger lands, they are easily accomplished. The two first named lines will carry the passengers to destination without change. The time consumed is about thirty-six hours from Buffalo.

One Week's Imports.

Imports at the Port of New York of horticultural material, for the week ending May 12, were recorded as follows:

Bulbs—France, $2; Netherlands, $4,034; England, $87; Jamaica, $1; Hongkong, $30.

Plants—Belgium, $1,070; France, $38; Netherlands, $8,296; England, $1,109; Scotland, $144; Bermuda, $14; Jamaica, $2; Trinidad, $90; Japan, $74; Guatemala, $300.

Red clover seed—France, $17,910.

Grass seed—Scotland, $2,219.

Other seeds—France, $15,038; Germany, $512; Italy, $365; England, $10,525; Argentine, $2,389; Chile, $611; British Indies, $13,280; Hongkong, $301; Morocco, $11,203.

Nitrate of soda—Chile, $546,887.

Other fertilizers—Argentine, $10,208.

New Australian Sweet Peas.

A. T. Boddington Co. has just received the first shipment of all the new varieties of Australian sweet peas. Many of these are regarded as great improvements over previously existing types and it is expected that the blooms will create a sensation when put on the market next winter. Some good things in the line of sweet peas were expected from New Zealand, but, unfortunately, the New Zealand crop was an almost complete failure, growers barely saving enough seed to preserve their stock.

Grass.

Do not happen to know, Mr. Seedsman, how many varieties of grass there are? Five thousand, Professor Montgomery says in his "Productive Farm Crops," (Lippincott Farm Manuals). But out of this great number, man uses only ten, as a rule, and only five of those are extensively cultivated. It is a curious fact that while practically every other farm crop has undergone great changes under cultivation, grasses are almost the same now as when man first began to use them as a wild plant. 1,000 varieties of wheat, 500 varieties of corn, and only one variety of blue-grass, or any other grass under cultivation; grass varieties developed themselves before man took a hand in the game. And no matter what their deficiencies, he has so far been content to use them without attempting improvement. If all flesh is grass, it might be a good idea to improve the grass, and note the effect on the ultimate product.

MINNESOTA NURSERY LAWS.

A Wrong Interpretation.

A mistaken idea exists among some Minnesota nursery stock dealers and florists that they are required by the Minnesota law to purchase their supplies from Minnesota nurseries and not from nurseries or dealers in other states. This impression is epitomized by the prominently displayed paragraph on the letterhead of a Minnesota nurseryman, reading:

"Nurserymen have to furnish their customers with nursery stock from a bona fide inspected Minnesota nursery, according to law passed by the state legislature at the 1913 session."

If this were true, the provision would clearly be unconstitutional as a discrimination against stock grown in other states. (In re Schechter, 63 Fed. Rep. 695; Minn. v Barber, 16 U. S. 313, 322.)

The Minnesota Legislature in 1915 amended the law of 1913, section 7, so that the Minnesota dealer or florist can, by filing an affidavit that he will buy and sell only stock duly inspected by an official state inspector (not necessarily a Minnesota inspector), and filing with the state entomologist a list of all sources of stock, sell his stock freely. CURTIS N. SMITH.

NURSERY STOCK IMPORT RULES.

The Federal Horticultural Board, U. S. Department of Agriculture, has just issued (May 15, 1916) Rules and Regulations governing the importation of nursery stock into the United States effective July 1, 1916, and superseding all former rules. The most important change is the provision that permits to import nursery stock from countries which maintain nursery stock inspection and permits to import orchids and tree seeds from countries which do not maintain nursery stock inspection, instead of being reissued each year, will be valid until revoked. CURTIS NYE SMITH.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

Wholesalers were notified today that no more shipments of ferns would be made from Massachusetts to Chicago at present.

A new cottage is now completed at Williams' Bay, Lake Geneva, and the Budlong and Schupp families will soon be settled there for the summer.

At Kennicott's, peonies are coming in and are being promptly placed in cold storage. The greater part of the blooms are arriving in satisfactory condition, and it looks now as if the season will be a profitable one.

The Stanley rose is each year gaining in favor at the J. A. Budlong place where it made its first appearance in some unknown way. Thinking it something entirely new, Mr. Schupp named it Priscilla, after his daughter, and later learned that it is the Stanley. One large bloom of this bloom was by actual count found to contain nearly 100 petals. Mr. Schupp has now quite a stock and likes the rose for its pink color, form and fine stem and foliage.

The strike which is now on does not affect those growers within a few miles of the city who use motor trucks. So far shipments by train have generally been delivered without much delay and no violence, but with outgoing shipments there has been more or less delay and with Memorial Day almost upon us and commencement season at hand, it is much to be desired that the difficulties of the express drivers be adjusted soon, if possible. Everything possible is being done by the representatives of the trade to bring this about.

ST. LOUIS.

The Art League offers $50 in prizes for floral displays in downtown windows for the week of the Democratic National Convention, beginning June 11th.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, reports that his rose grower, George Schmidt, broke his arm last week when his horse ran away near his greenhouse plant.

The new greenhouse plant of H. Blixen is almost completed and will be, when finished, 20,000 feet of glass. This is just across the way from J. F. Ammann's place, which consists of 50,000 square feet of glass. The new firm, known as the Woodlawn Gardens, will grow roses, carnations and chrysanthemums for this market.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

George A. Comley, of 1204 Wisconsin avenue, suffered a rather painful accident recently, badly bruising his hand and breaking one of his fingers.

The Brookland Rose Society announces that because of the cold weather it has postponed until Monday and Tuesday of next week the annual exhibition of roses which had been scheduled for the present week.

Peter Bisset has returned from a trip to New York City and Philadelphia, to which places he went to inspect the cooperative tests of American and Holland grown bulbs. He also inspected newly-introduced materials in the nurseries and greenhouses.

Fred H. Kramer is complaining of the way in which shipments of rhododendrons and boxwood from Holland reached him last week. Both were in such poor condition as to be worthless. In all probability the plants were held up on the docks in Europe for a long time before being loaded.

There is now required but the signature of the President to make the Johnson measure, prohibiting fraudulent advertising in the District of Columbia, to become a law. The proposed law carried with it fines of up to $500 and imprisonment of up to six months for violations. Washington merchants have been working hard for a long time in the effort to have this law enacted.

BOSTON.

Miss E. B. Snell, of Cambridge, is now in the employ of Henry R. Comley, Park street.

An exquisite display of pond lilies is the attraction in Thomas F. Galvin's window this week.

Wm. T. Chase, who has been with Julius Zinn for many years, is taking a much-needed and well-deserved rest at Hudson, Mass.

Martin Lally, manager of J. Newman's Tremont Street store was by illness forced to temporarily relinquish his duties last Wednesday.

There has been considerable discussion over the advisability and legality of keeping the Boston Market open for business on Sunday, May 28. Those in favor of the plan contend that Saturday is a bit too early for transacting the bulk of the holiday trade and that Monday, on the other hand, is too late. No official action has yet been taken by the directors.

The entire wholesale florist district of Boston will be completely isolated from all shipping points during the Preparedness Parade on Saturday the 27th. The route of the parade is such that Winthrop Square and Devonshire street will be surrounded by a practically impenetrable human wall during the busiest half-day that the florist calendar knows. Permits for crossing the line of march cannot be obtained and there is but one way to get bundles and packages to the North or South Stations. This is afforded by the subway on Franklin street, and it will be woefully inadequate in serving the purposes of the wholesale consignors. There seems to be no other way out of the difficulty.

PHILADELPHIA.

Dennis T. Connor, of the Lord & Burnham Co., has been confined to his bed for the past two weeks, the result of a fall while visiting Baltimore.

Theodore H. Bird, a well known public accountant of this city, died on the 20th inst. He attended many of the festivities of the florists and was a wonderful singer and a great humorist.

Mr. Prince at the W. K. Harris place states that their business from Thanksgiving to Easter was unprecedented, especially in the sale of azaleas. Six houses are now being started with chrysanthemums.

Wm. J. Muth, of the King Construction Co., is much pleased with his new quarters in the Harrison Building where the added facilities for meeting customers are greatly appreciated on both sides. He still keeps up his private residence at Lansdowne where customers can ring him up as usual outside of business hours.

The J. Wm. Colflesh Nurseries at 53rd and Woodland avenue, contemplate moving to Glenolden, Pa., sometime in the near future, having bought a farm at that place. They will retain the present place for the retail end. Mr. Colflesh deplores the lack of geraniums, saying he could dispose of 20,000 plants, if he had them.

Going through the immense nurseries of the Robt. Craig Co., at Norwood, the old adage "Big oaks from little acorns grow," is well exemplified. In 1856 when that portion of West Philadelphia now denominated as the 52nd street district, was a practical wilderness, Robert Craig started the nucleus of this immense business, at 49th and Market streets. Starting with one house 50 ft. long, right by his dwelling, as was the custom of florists at that period, by strict attention to his business and a perfect knowledge of his profession, Mr. Craig had the pleasure of seeing his original plant expand and expand, until the nursery finally took in four city blocks, with 75,000 feet of glass. Among the new things being pushed now are the John Wanamaker fern and Ficus Craigii, for which the demand is very lively. The Craig business has developed so as to require at times the services of 75 to 100 expert packers, under the direction of Joe Hetherington, who has been with them since 1882, shipping over 6,000 cases a year to various parts of this country. There is comparatively little left of the original plant at 49th and Market streets, it being used practically as a receiving and shipping station of the Norwood Nurseries. The quaint old houses of 1856, together with some of the later houses are still retained, but there is little if any selling here, with the exception of one house which they still retain as a retail flower market during May to July.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

Arlington, Mass.—Rawson Conservatories, Inc., capital stock, $75,000. Incorporators, Guy Q. Ham, Wm. H. Taylor, 53 Farragut Road, Boston, and G. A. Ham.

St. Louis, Mo.—Foster, the Florist Company, 8th and Olive streets. Capital stock $2,500. The shareholders are J. H. Vette, 23 shares; Frank Alwoel, one share; Fred J. Foster, one share.

DECORATION DAY.

Do you know what it means, you boys and girls.

Who hail from the North and the South,
Do you know what it means—

This twining of greens

Round the silent cannon's mouth?

This strewing with flowers the grass-grown grave,

This decking with garlands the statues brave;

This flaunting of flags,

All tatters and rags;

This marching and singing,

These bells all a ringing;

These faces grave and these faces gay,

This talk of the Blue and this talk of the Gray.

In the North and the South. Decoration Day?

Not simply a show-time, boys and girls,

Is this day of falling flowers;

Not a pageant, a play,

Nor a holiday

Of flags and floral bowers;

It is something more than the day that starts

War memories a-throb in veteran's hearts;

For across the years,

To the hopes and the fears,

To the days of battle,

Of roar and of rattle—

To the past that now seems so far away,

Do the sons of the Blue and the sons of the Gray

Gaze hand clasping hand Decoration Day.

For the wreck and the wrong of it, boys and girls,

For the terror and loss, as well,

Our hearts must hold

A regret untold,

As we think of those who fell.

But their blood, on whichever side they fought,

Remade the nation and progress brought!

We forget the woe,

For we live and know

That the fighting and sighing,

The falling and dying,

Were but steps toward the future—the martyr's way!

A-down which the sons of the Blue and the Gray

Look, with love and with pride. Decoration Day.

Flower Market Reports

A synopsis of this week's BOSTON market conditions is scarcely indicative of the true state of affairs, for while business has been fairly brisk there has been an undertone of calmness which usually precedes a storm. With the possible exception of roses there is an appalling shortage of all flowers, and there are none too many roses, if the supply be carefully compared with the demand. First-class whites are bringing record prices, and short lengths in red are unusually busy. Short Beauties have taken a rise from last week's slump and the entire rose market is striving to adjust itself to the sharp falling off in the shipments from the growers. Carnations are even scarcer. Retailers report a constant demand for peonies, and the wholesalers have been forced to call upon the Philadelphia markets to fill their orders. Snapdragons are fairly active with sweet peas a shade better. More than one grower will be forced to admit his crop of feverfew a failure, at least as far as the holiday is concerned, for at present it is far behind schedule. Stocks are coming in goodly quantities and they form an old standby for this particular day. Spirea has not made its appearance yet and is being eagerly awaited. The Darwin tulip is the only bulbous flower to be obtained. Present indications point to an unparalleled volume of Decoration Day business and if the all-powerful sun will but shine for the next few days Boston may expect a record sales-total. Darwin tulips are quoted at $3.00 to $4.00 and Spanish iris at $6.00 to $8.00.

For the past week cold BUFFALO drizzly days and heavy rains has shortened up the stock and there is a scarcity on some lines, especially carnations. Demand was heavy and this helped the rose situation. Lilies are now growing less each day, also callas, and there are not too many outdoor flowers. Some fine Darwin tulips are had and these sell up quickly. Lily of the valley is scarce and high. Beauties are only fair in quality, but other roses are fine. Indications again point toward a heavy Memorial Day.

Warm, bright weather is bringing forward a fine lot of stock of every seasonable kind. The peony crop this week is in full swing and drifting steadily into the cold storage vaults. Some are coming in too far open, but the greater proportion of the stock is being received in fine condition. Roses are all that could be desired, with every kind in good supply. Carnations are all that the growers could ask, with Memorial Day just a week off, and it looks now as if these favorites of this holiday are to be in enormous supply. Of miscellaneous stock there is much to choose from and the buyer on the spot has a wide range, with every known color of sweet peas in quantity, extra fine snapdragons, irises, calendulas, etc. The difficulties in the way of shipping out by express are temporarily working to the advantage of the local buyers, but it is expected that the troubles of the express companies will soon be adjusted.

There is a noticeable falling off in the receipts of most staple flowers in the wholesale market but the demand has been slow and there is plenty of material for all comers. Decoration Day trade is always an enigma in this market until it has transpired and much of the result depends upon the calls that come from points North and East where, in some years, the outdoor crop of desirable flowers for cemetery use is too late for the occasion. Indications this season are that there will be a market for everything that comes in time for out of town calls and prices on some things are already stiffening up in anticipation. Never has the quality of material in all lines been better, the cool weather and slow growth being conducive to the production of sturdy substantial blooms. The dealers in greens are very busy all of the present week.

The continued cool weather here for the past ten days has kept the flower market in a very healthy condition. Stocks generally all along the line have been coming in rather scantily. Carnations especially have been on the short side and prices firmed up quite a little. Sweet peas are also scarce. It seems a sort of "between wind and water" with these—the indoor about over and the outdoor only just commencing. The market on roses kept steady and there was no over supply. In the American Beauty and Russell class the higher grades are most in evidence. In Killarneys and others of that type there is a fair supply of all grades. Indoor lily of the valley went still higher notwithstanding the big influx of very nice outdoor stock offered at very reasonable prices. Blue cornflower is more in evidence than it has been so far this season. There are no local peonies as yet (22nd) and unless we have a few hot sunshiny days right off our nearby growers will miss their usual Memorial Day market—which is about their only chance. If they miss that there is little in it for them. We hope the weather man will relent and be good.

May weddings seem to have come into their own, as it were, and together with continual excessive demands in funeral work, are creating a demand for cut flowers, which is well-nigh impossible to supply. Not in a long time have flowers of all kinds been as scarce, and accordingly as high in price. Long-stemmed roses are practically the only ones obtainable, all others being relatively "out of sight." Home grown peonies are as yet only a vision with an accompanying fervent hope of realization. Practically all that are on the market now come from the South. Landscape and bedding work has never been as good, owing undoubtedly to the exceptional financial prosperity hereabouts. Both city and suburban florists and landscape engineers and gardeners alike affirm that they have never had as busy a season.

Business has been ST. LOUIS hardly up to the usual standard. The growers are all busy with plants. Stock of anything is in large supply and of extra good quality. It has taxed the capacity of the wholesalers all week. Prices are low and the poor stock has little chance of being sold. Out of door stock and cape jasmine buds from Texas add to the congestion.

Business continues WASHINGTON to be very good. Stock is very plentiful with the exception of lily of the valley and orchids. There is an over-abundance of peonies. The shipping business on peonies to the northern markets is very good, enabling these flowers to maintain a fair price. Carnations are in heavy supply but are cleaning up well, and there has been a good market for roses of all kinds. There is a heavy supply of gardenias. Sweet peas are again coming in good and are in fair demand. Gladioli are very plentiful and good. Snapdragon is being used to some extent in many dinner decorations.

and Nursery Practice By
M. G. KAINS

So many discoveries of new facts by plant investigators, shortcuts and "wrinkles" worked out by plant propagators, and nursery, greenhouse and garden methods simplified or made more effective, have made books hitherto available on plant propagation out of date.

There has also been an insistent call for a volume that would not only include the character of information wanted by nurserymen and other plant propagators, but also discuss the subject of plant propagation from the standpoint of fundamental principles, and include the latest conclusions advanced by investigators throughout the world.

This new book by Professor Kains will appeal with equal force to the amateur, the professional propagator, and the teacher in agricultural colleges and schools.

The book devotes many pages to special plant lists and condensed directions for propagation of vegetables, fruits, annual and perennial flowers, bulbs, ferns, orchids, cacti, evergreens, deciduous trees and shrubs, vines, water plants, greenhouse and house plants and palms.

The table of contents includes: An introduction on general principles, germination, seed testing, potting, layerage, bottom heat, cottage classes of cuttings, graftage, and theories and laws, Daniel's experiments in graftage, tree stocks and stem handling, grafting waxes and wound dressing, methods of grafting considered individually, budding methods, nursery management, and laws affecting nursery stock.

Illustrated 5 1/2 x 7 1/2 inches, 342 pages. Cloth. Price, net, $1.50.

THE RED SPIDER

(An Address by Parker Thayer Barnes before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia May 2, 1916.)

The red spider is a pesky pest with which every person who grows plants under glass has a tussle sooner or later, usually sooner. It also gives much trouble at times to shade and even fruit trees. There really seems to be no limit to which its ramifications extend.

The red spiders are mites. They belong to the great class of Arachnida (A-rach'ni-da) to which spiders, scorpions and the daddy-long-legs belong. They bear to the more highly developed and complex insects, such as the moths and flies, a position somewhat similar to that of the ferns to flowering plants, although this is rather a poor simile.

The red spider is not a new insect in any way one may look at it. New species are being found from time to time but that is because but few specialists have worked on this branch of the animal kingdom, and they are so much alike that it is really hard to distinguish them. They have four pairs of legs, only three when born, but the other pair develops while they are young.

They winter over outside under stones and in leaves and other rubbish and when warm weather returns—about the time the leaves appear—climb the trees or other plants and start laying eggs. Each female can lay from five to ten eggs a day for a period of eight to twelve days. In five days they become adults. Brood after brood is produced all summer—but wet weather sometimes interferes. Much the same conditions exist in the greenhouse except that the spiders do not hibernate because it is warm there the year around.

The mites do not travel fast except when disturbed; ordinarily they move slowly, and for a greater portion of the time they are stationary, sucking the sap from the leaf on which they are resting. The removal of the sap from the cell causes the cell to dry out and die which gives it that peculiar look always associated with a severe attack. A similar appearance is caused in the fruit trees sometimes by a little leafhopper.

The genus of mites which contains the common red spider is Tetranychus and all the members of this genus spin a very fine thread. In severe attacks these threads are so abundant as to form a web, either upon the upper or lower surfaces of the leaves or covering the branch or a number of leaves. I have seen this occur in greenhouses where things were allowed to run in a haphazard way. The use of this web nobody seems to understand. It affords no protection to the mites. Dr. Bailes suggests that its chief use is to hold the eggs while another scientist suggests that it keeps them from falling off the plant while they are molting. Experiments have proven that it does not in any way serve to aid their progress.

The spinning organs which produce this web are supposed to be situated in the head, the threads coming out through the palpi or feelers, but some very delicate dissection work under a high-powered microscope is still necessary to locate the red spider's spinning.

The common species of the greenhouses is T. bimaculatus. It is supposed to be red in color but any one who has ever examined them under a hand lens knows that some of them have a washed out color, much like the crushed strawberry colored shirt that has gone through the laundry. But the color does not vary in a colony; all of one colony are the same shade of color.

This species is by no means confined to greenhouses as I have already intimated nor to our northern climate. It is common in the south, at first on violets but it has now spread from this humble plant to the cotton plant. On this it works such damage that it has been necessary for the Federal Bureau of Entomology to detail men to learn how it can be easily and cheaply combated. In California it has threatened the hops crop and again the government has come to the aid of the beer drinkers and saved the backbone of their staple beverage. From this you can see that the grower of plants under glass is not the only sufferer from the mites or red spider.

The orange groves of Florida and California are infested with a couple of species. It was a serious pest as far back as 1889, for the Report of the Entomologist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture of that year reports it as a menace to the crop.

A pale greenish species, T. pratensis, is abundant in the west on alfalfa and other crops. A bright red species T. opuntiae plays hide-and-seek on the prickly pears of Texas. A very short-legged short-haired European species is found on the spruce tree of Canada. Another species is common on the leaves of the oak and chestnut, and a comparatively newcomer from Europe is T. pelouse which much prefers the fruit trees of our orchards. The European plum seems to be the favorite food plant of this species.

The array of species is no doubt uninteresting and to the average person a red spider is a red spider and just as much of a pest as Elias Butler Parker's guinea pigs of "Pigs is Pigs" fame.

How are we to get rid of them? That's the question and I suppose it was upon this point that our friend Watson hung the word explosion "A Red Spider Explosion." He thought that maybe I would blast all your preconceived ideas about the subject of red spiders.

The first thing I learned about red spider while serving my novitiate in the greenhouse was that as the cold of winter begins to strengthen making hard firing necessary, with the resulting drier air the red spider commenced to flourish and so we all believed that an arid condition was congenial to the red spider. I suppose it is in a measure, but it is not absolutely necessary. Last summer was far from being a dry summer, there were no long droughts in it, and yet I found red spider infesting shade trees in the vicinity of Harrisburg to such an extent that the trees had lost their green color, and had taken on a greyish or brownish color which gave them the appearance of much road dust having settled upon their surfaces.

We were taught that water was the only specific. It will wash them off, but do they have time to drown before the water has drained away from the soil where they fell under the plant, and so are they or are they not ready to crawl back on the plant. I do not know. I have not had sufficient time to watch them to find out.

Sulphur is the one best bet with which to fight the pest. You can blow it on by means of a blow gun; you can use lime-sulphur wash such as is used to kill the San José scale on the fruit trees, but of course, very much weaker, or you can use potassium sulphite (Liver of sulphur) one-half ounce to the gallon of water. This last you will all probably recognize as a standard remedy for mildew on roses.

Instead of blowing the sulphur on you can spray it on. One pound of sulphur mixed in three gallons of water and just enough soap to make it stick is a standard remedy on fruit trees as a summer spray, but in the greenhouse I would use it much weaker at first to make sure of not burning the foliage.

Prof. S. T. Maynard reports having successfully killed the red spider in a house of grapes by boiling the sulphur but this is a rather dangerous and tedious method.

If I was called upon today to fight a case of red spider in a greenhouse or on fruit trees, I would do one of two things. The first thing would be to spray the plants with a flour paste. That sounds like a very reckless procedure but you will find the paste is so thinly spread out that once it dries you cannot see it.

Mr. W. B. Parker of the Federal Bureau of Entomology invented the flour paste method of fighting red spider while working on the hop problem on the Pacific Coast. It is made as follows and these directions are for use in the open but you can modify them and figure down the amounts for use in greenhouse practice.

"Use a cheap grade of flour; take eight pounds. Make the flour into a thin batter by adding a little cold water at a time until eight gallons of water are used. Mash out all lumps. Cook until a paste is formed, stirring constantly to prevent caking or burning. Cooking slowly until the paste just begins to boil will usually be about right. If the paste is not sufficiently cooked the resulting spray will not be effective, and if overcooked the paste will harden when thoroughly cool and will not mix with water very readily. Add cold water to the paste when done to make 100 gallons of material in the spray tank. Keep it constantly stirred while spraying. Apply thoroughly to both the upper and under surface of leaves. Use a nozzle making a coarse spray, and not under 150 pounds pressure, as the driving force is necessary to penetrate the webs and reach the spiders. A fine moist spray will not be effective. This is a contact insecticide and the liquid must actually touch the spider. The materials are cheap; apply liberally. Watch the plants carefully, and if newly hatched spiders are appearing repeat the spraying in about seven days. No spray will kill the eggs without injuring the vines."

I have used this spray against red spider on plum trees in the Pittsburgh district and it worked, and I see no reason for its not working in the greenhouse. It is cheap and effective and will not in any way damage the foliage or flowers. We used Red Dog flour when making our paste. This is a cheap brand of flour that is a favorite food for hogs, and my recollection is that it cost us in actual cash outlay for material about seven cents a barrel (50 gallons) ready to apply to the trees.

We bought some potassium sulphide to try at this time, as this material had been very successful in the cotton experiments in the south, but the flour paste was so effective that our experimenting stopped.

My one other safe bet would be sulphur, blowing on the dry sulphur; or I would use atomic sulphur. This latter is a paste of very finely divided sulphur manufactured and sold by the Thomson Chemical Co. at Baltimore. I have not used it because at Harrisburg we have no facilities for experimenting. This material is now used in large quantities as a fungicide on peach trees for the scab and brown rot. In California Prof. W. M. Scott tells me that it is used against the red spider on citrus trees and a great variety of plants with success. Use when you commence to experiment with this form of sulphur about one-half to three-fourths of a pound in ten gallons of water and a little soap, say one-fourth of a pound. Dissolve the soap before putting it in the solution. Soap acts both as a spreader and sticker.

I have spoken of lime-sulphur wash. I do not recommend it because it is violent stuff and there is danger of burning the foliage until more experimental work is done. Prof. R. D. Whitmarsh in a recent bulletin from the Ohio Exp. Station makes the following recommendation with regard to its use on violets: In 25 gallons of water mix one-half pint of Neco-fume and two quarts of concentrated lime-sulphur wash. I have no doubt that it will work like a charm but at that strength of lime-sulphur I am sure some kinds of stock grown under glass would rebel, for it is strong enough to burn peach foliage in the open.

HENRY A. DREER, Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, and Supplies, 714 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.*AMHERST, MASS.

Henry D. Fearing, in his 85th year, is one of the best gardeners in town, winning premiums at the annual fair and making his extensive grounds a charming place. But the oldest gardener is George Cutter, who is 92. He delights in his roses and raises the best of sweet corn and other vegetables.

Dr. George E. Stone, professor of botany at M. A. C., and for many years the Amherst tree warden, is about to publish a bulletin on shade trees which will be illustrated with pictures of typical trees. He believes that trees in New England have been seriously injured by the drouth of the seven years previous to this year. This drouth, he thinks, surpasses in severity any that has occurred during the past 250 years. But he will rely most upon the evidence to be found by examining the rings in the stumps of the trees recently cut in the primitive forests of New England which had been growing for 200 years. These trees grew but little in years of drouth and much in rainy seasons and registered the fact by the concentric rings to be counted on the stump. Great elms and large pines are selected for the purpose.

HYDRANGEAS FOR SUMMER-BLOOMING

We have an unusually fine stock of these plants, which have been kept dormant during the winter and are now starting into growth. They will begin to bloom in July and will remain in flower during August. These plants are in great demand at summer resorts for lawn and piazza decoration. We offer the following varieties in 1 1/2-in. pots—Otuka and the new French varieties: Avalanche, Francheur, E. G. Hill, La Lorraine, Mme. Maurice Hamar, Mme. E. Mouillere, Mlle. Renard Guillard, and Rudance—$2.00 to $3.00 each.

Also Otuka, very large fine symmetrical specimens in half-barrels, unusually heavily budded, $10.00 to $15.00 each.

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Bouvardias

There is certainly an increasing demand for these old favorites. There was a time when they were to be found in almost every greenhouse. Bouvardias should now be planted out. Give them a mellow soil; a sandy loam is ideal. Do not crowd the plants. They should have at least 15 inches between the rows and a foot in the rows. See that they get a good watering after being planted and when the hot and dry weather comes don't neglect watering. To make the plants husky they should be pinched back two or three times during their stay in the field. If wanted in flower for the holidays don't pinch any after the middle of August and lift by the first week in September. Cultivating should be done every week to keep the soil mellow and especially during dry weather to keep the moisture in the soil.

Care of Young Primulas

Never give them a chance to get a check by being pot bound but keep shifting on into larger pots until their flowering size is reached. From a four-inch pot up they like a rich soil, and there is nothing better than good fibrous loam three parts, cow manure and leaf mold one part each. They should always have a cool bottom to stand on; there is nothing better than ashes for this purpose which can always be kept damp and cool. Grow them as cool as possible during the summer. From the first of June until the last of August they are better under a shade of building laths which can be put on as the sun begins to get strong in the morning and taken off late in the afternoon. Go over the frames two or three times a day, giving attention to watering and syringing. Give plenty of room between the plants.

Ericas

Most of the species have now done flowering and the next move is a severe cutting back of the plants. This should be done before the new growth starts too much. All the long canes and the old wood are cut away, merely leaving short stumps of one or two inches in length. Some of the soil is taken off and the plants go into new pots, which should be more wide than deep, like azalea pots. Plenty of drainage material should be placed in the bottoms. I have found well-fibred turf-like sandy soil, six months old, roughly broken up and mixed with a goodly quantity of spent hot-bed manure to be the best soil. Climatic conditions in most sections of this country make erica culture difficult and risky. We have neither the soil nor the humid atmosphere in which they delight. Frequent syringing is essential, but in watering great care should be taken not to overdo it, or to let them become too dry at the roots as both have their bad points.

Feeding Orchids

Terrestrial orchids such as symbidiums, cypripediums, calanthes, pleiones, phaius, etc., will benefit in foliage and flower from an application of weak liquid manure water—that is, where they have plenty of working roots. It has now become well known that judicious feeding from now on will give these plants renewed vigor. For epiphytal orchids the Cookson formula would be better. This can be made with potassium nitrate three ounces and ammonia phosphate two ounces. Mix well together and place in a three gallon jar of water. When applying use one ounce of this mixture to a gallon of water about every ten days. All orchids will want plenty of moisture in the air from this out. Give them a spraying overhead in the mornings and right after dinner. Keep them clean by sponging occasionally.

Hydrangeas for Next Year

If hydrangeas have not been already propagated this should be done without delay. They will require twice the care as those that were done early. Take strong cuttings, leaving two or three joints to each one and trim the foliage up somewhat. Keep well shaded and moist for about four weeks and they should root without any trouble. When they have made roots about half an inch long get them out of the sand and pot them in 3-inch pots using fibrous loam three parts and well-decayed cow manure one part. Pot firmly and place outside in a frame and shade for three or four days, when they should stand full sun. Shift next into 5-inch pots, using a rich mixture. Keep well watered and syringed until the fall.

Start Cultivation

From this out keep the cultivator agoing once a week, if not twice a week. It will save a whole lot of labor later on, as well as being good for every crop grown outside. Putting off this work until crops are choked with weeds and also the surface of the ground all baked up makes it very hard to grow good crops, so cultivate now and often.

Our duty towards Houston

As in several previous issues, we present on another page in this number a street view in the city of Houston, Texas, and shall have other characteristic scenes frequently from now on until convention time next August. There are many excellent arguments in favor of this S. A. F. meeting in what is, to the great majority of S. A. F. members, a far-south southern city. While of course a very may have had to doubt the wisdom of going so far away from the centre of membership and horticultural activity in two consecutive years, that is now a dead issue. The one duty now for everybody interested in horticultural progress and in the organization which is its foremost exponent, is to do all that is possible towards assuring the success of the Houston Convention. That is what Horticulture, as the paper most remote from the convention city, will endeavor to do and our columns are open for any and all matter conducive to that end during the coming weeks.

What Houston has a right to expect

Houston's opportunity and the Society's obligation, in this important and far-reaching event is to open to the people of the great Southland with an adequate realization of their horticultural advantages and possibilities. In the present chaotic state of affairs in those European countries from which so much of our horticultural material has hitherto been procured, Texas with her vast area and great variety of soil and climate has within her reach an opportunity in the realm of ornamental horticulture fully equal to that in the way of fruit and vegetable production to which her people have already begun to awaken. This, it seems to us, is the direction in which the florists of the Southwest, who will undoubtedly form the majority of the attendance, can make the best use of this great convention privilege which comes but rarely to any city. It would be a pity to use up the time and energy of an occasion so fortuitous in debates on matters more connected with the politics of the Society than with the vital horticultural welfare of the great community which has the right to expect so much from this visit of the national Society. On the other hand it would be equally a mistake, from the standpoint of the Society, to rush through without serious discussion the various proposed constitutional changes slated by the Executive Board for action this year. If all these matters relating solely to the internal functions of the organization could only be tabled until some future occasion so that the Society's avowed mission to the South might have full right of way, it would, in our humble opinion, be for the good of all concerned.

Seed purity and philanthropy

As we read the communication from W. W. Tracy which appears in another column of this paper we are impressed by the fact that no business in this country is more investigated, inquired into and held up than the seed business. The average seed buyer today wants the seedsman to be a philanthropist. He must make all sorts of sacrifices for years to get his seed to his customers 100 per cent. germination, 100 per cent. purity of type—this he is expected to do regardless of season, unfavorable harvests and other conditions entirely beyond his control, and yet to sell his wares which he turns once a year on a margin of profit as narrow as that made by the grocer who turns over his stock and capital in each one of the fifty-two weeks of the year. Mr. Tracy mentions that planters for the market demand that at least 90 per cent. of the plants from seed of a specified variety shall produce true to type, but there are plenty of buyers who will kick up a protest if they find 1 per cent. of inferior mixture. Unquestionably varietal purity is a quality of far greater importance than high germination percentage, but the market gardener is not willing to pay the price but expects to buy the refined article at a figure away below what it costs to produce it, and in the case of corn, for instance, below the wholesale price which the seedsman is obliged to pay for such carefully grown seed.

THE TRUTH REGARDING CALIFORNIA.

The settlers of California wear corns and they are tender and you must be careful how you step on them. There are "pros and cons" to every state and climate. There are those who are glad to have you give the "pros," but don't say anything about the "cons."

Southern California has probably the most delightful climate in the United States. Los Angeles is the magic city. She came into being when science and invention threw their treasures into her lap. It is the best paved city in the world. Many of her streets seem to be planed and sandpapered. Many parts of the city are of almost matchless beauty. The laurel, rubber, magnolia, and the large family of the palms, make splendid parks and delightful shade. Roses do well, except in winter when in many places they present a bedraggled appearance. We spent days riding through the city and the surrounding country. It seemed a land Elysian and much more attractive than shoveling snow at 20 below.

And yet paradise is a little further on. We were marooned in the beautiful city of Escondido—situated in one of the most charming valleys in America. I told the people there that with all the premiums they claimed they ought to get one on their weather, for they could raise more of it to the acre than anywhere on earth. People think they have a mild climate and build and dress accordingly. The fact is, we suffered much more from the cold than we ever did in our home in Nebraska. We hired a fair cottage of five rooms and in six weeks burned a cord and a half of wood, and had to keep up a fire every day, and then suffered with the cold. During that time we had eight frosts and about as many more nights it came as near frost as it dared to. I have seen the mercury 20 in the morning and 80 at 2 o'clock the same day. There you have four seasons packed in the 24 hours and you must change your clothes or suffer.

Many people have made money out of land and oranges, but a man who buys an orange orchard who knows nothing about it had better hide when the fool killer comes around. The amount of navel oranges grown is something enormous. They flood the market and often there is loss. My sons bought forty acres in an inland valley, where the mercury is 120 in summer and that hurries up the oranges for the holiday trade and nets them a fine sum. Then they planted a grove of Valencias in a good location. These oranges mature in August when oranges are scarce. But it takes no end of care to raise oranges. It won't do to neglect them. They can't take care of themselves. They must be duly fertilized and watered. I noticed thousands of smudge pots through the orchards. When the mercury drops you can have the privilege of sitting up

ASTER VIMINEUS STAR SHOWER.

ASTER VIMINEUS STAR SHOWER.

There are over two hundred recognized species of hardy asters and three hundred and fifty or more have been described as such. The majority of them are natives of North America. Numerous varieties of garden origin are also listed. Under the name of Michaelmas Daisies, these asters are extremely popular for garden planting abroad, but in this country they do not receive the full appreciation which they merit, doubtless because of their great abundance in a wild state. Some of the hybrids and varieties are handsome improvements in color, form and abundance of bloom. Our illustration shows one of the best, which is well-named Star Shower. It is from a photograph taken at Mt. Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me.

nights to watch Jack Frost and then perhaps the old rascal can sneak in and defeat you. Eternal vigilance is the price of oranges. Then the markets are uncertain and sometimes your crop don't pay expenses. Many raise fruit with no assurance of market. One man in Escondido had a beautiful lot of peaches and let whole wagon loads go to waste for lack of a market.

California is a land of extremes—tremendous floods and prolonged drouths; sometimes there are tremendous rains, and always they are unprecedented—never heard of before. But 25 years ago a friend went there. I asked him how he liked the country. He said it was a land of floods, so wet you might throw out a blanket anywhere and it would mire down. Railroads washed away and land slides—wherever they could slide. Well we had a taste of the flood. How it rained in some valleys! The dams went out and Jamestown was repeated. Houses, barns, cattle, horses, pigs and fences were swept out into the ocean. An eye witness told me he saw thousands of rattle snakes washed down from the mountains, floating in San Diego bay—probably his imagination was a little too vivid.

It is possible that the San Diego Exposition will be perpetual. The grounds are splendid and the best taste and art were displayed in laying them out. The buildings are fine. The exhibits of the early days and of Southern and Central America are unique. One building which gives a representation of Indian arts is very interesting. The hotels are fine and they know how to treat strangers. We stopped at the Knickerbocker, which is in the center of the street car system. The proprietor said, "My sons can attend at the desk and I attend to the guests." We wanted to go to the exposition. He took us out to the track. "We will wait for car No. 6." He saw us safely aboard. One day we wanted to go out three miles away. Said he, "I will show you; take car No. 2," and he saw us safely aboard. So when you go to the exposition, summer or winter, you will find The Knickerbocker autobuss waiting for you. Get into it and you can feel at home—assured you will be taken care of. Many of the attractions of the San Francisco Fair have been taken down to San Diego and those who could not go last year can do so this year. San Diego is on the ocean and you have an ideal climate in summer or winter.

C. S. HARRISON, York, Nebr.

FORSYTHIA INTERMEDIA SPECIABILIS.

Our cover picture this week very inadequately illustrates the most beautiful of all the Forsythias, as it bloomed this spring in the Forsythia collection in the Arnold Arboretum. Color value and effect in a photograph of a bright yellow subject cannot be adequately brought out in the absence of a strong dark background. The superiority of this hybrid (F. intermedia is a hybrid between F. suspensa and F. viridissima) above any the Arboretum plantation this spring was so marked in its rich profusion of bloom that the rest looked commonplace in comparison. Nurserymen should prepare a big stock of Forsythia intermedia specabilis for the call that is sure to come as soon as the public know about it.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Society held its annual convention at the Hotel in the month of May. The program of the evening of the 20th. Warren S. Mason and H. R. Hurd made fine exhibits of tulips and they were awarded cash prizes and certificates.

Mr. John H. Popp, president, the Ladies' Garden Club of Hartford, outlined the doings and plans of this new organization. An interesting paper entitled "Notes on the Dahlia," by P. W. Popp, was read by the secretary.

Plans for the June Flower Show to be held on the 27-28 are progressing favorably. Four additional special prizes were announced.

ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

NURSERYMEN'S CONVENTION

E. S. Osborne of the Charlton Nursery Company is endeavoring to arrange for a special train to run out of Rochester to Milwaukee, with the expectation of securing a company of at least one hundred persons. He hopes to arrange for one or more sleeping cars to leave Boston in ample time to be hitched on to the Nurserymen's Special at Rochester, and which will pick up the different nurserymen east of Rochester. In this way he expects to get enough members and their friends to make up the special. These interested should write Mr. Osborne at No. 448 Cutler Building, Rochester, N. Y.

MISSOURI STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

This latest addition to the rapidly increasing number of florists' organizations had its birth at Columbia, Mo., last week under promising auspices. Quite a good number were in attendance and organization was duly perfected. G. A. Kaupp of Nevada, Mo., being chosen president; Edwin Denker, St. Charles, vice-president, W. S. Wells, St. Louis, secretary and C. C. Sanders, Clayton, treasurer. The University people extended a royal welcome and entertainment to the visitors, all of whom were highly elated by the good start which had been made.

ST. LOUIS CLUB AND SOCIETY MEETINGS FOR JUNE.

June 8th, the St. Louis Florist Club will hold its 30th anniversary meeting at Pilchers' Place in Kirkwood.

June 7th, the County Growers' Association will hold their monthly meeting at the Eleven Mile House.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle will meet at Mrs. H. G. Bernings' home, 4211 Westminister Place, Wednesday, June 14th.

The Retail Florists' Association June 19 at the Mission Inn Garden.

The Gardeners' Union of Lewiston and Auburn, Me., held their first spring exhibit at the Chamberlain school, Auburn, on the evening of May 26. The floral displays were very beautiful.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Tulp Show held by this society at Glen Cove, N. Y. on May 15, brought forth a magnificent display of flowers, although Cottage, Breeder and Potted were also well represented. Almost every class was very keenly contested and the judges had a rather difficult task. John F. Johnson, gardener to George D. Pratt, Forest We take, gardener for William H. Porter and Henry Gaut, gardener for Herbert L. Pratt were the principal prize winners. Cultural certificates were awarded to Geo. D. Pratt for salpiglossis and clarkia and to S. D. Brewster for gladioli. Honorable mention to G. D. Pratt for gypsophila. Special mention to S. D. Brewster for myosotis and W. H. Porter for tulips.

Why I Should Retain My Membership in American Association of Nurserymen

To Members of American Association of Nurserymen:

First. It is the one organization representative of nurserymen of the United States, the one organization where the interests of all merge.

Second. Under the new constitution it is an organization of comprehensive possibilities, organization money co-operation, is provided under the Detroit constitution.

Third. While the benefits emanating from the reorganized association will prove beneficial to the nursery interests as a whole, those benefits will be much greater to the membership than to the fellow on the outside. Today, as not heretofore, the troubles of the membership, for instance, along legislative lines, are the Association's troubles, and ample provision has been made for the protection of every member of the Association. Unjust and discriminatory legislation in many states, coupled with the domineering spirit of "ye inspector" oftentimes, has been the nurseryman's "nightmare." Today the Association's flag of protection floats over every member. To feel that the great American Association of Nurserymen is going to demand a square deal for every member, that the troubles of the individual member find a hearty response on the part of the Association, brings a feeling of confidence, protection, and hope, the worth of which is inestimable. To feel one's self a part of a big, intelligent, capable organization inspires hope and confidence.

Fourth. It is worth while to be a member of the American Association of Nurserymen because of the possibilities of service to others as well as to one's self. It is building along co-operative lines. There is more real satisfaction in serving than in being served. One man can accomplish little in working alone. Five hundred men, our present membership, can be a power when their energies are directed to a single purpose. Five hundred men unselfishly striving to better conditions in their chosen avocation will bring results. It means a greater volume of business and better profits than formerly. It means better and happier homes for the nurserymen. It means a more intelligent service. It means success.

Fifth. It is worth while to be a member of the American Association of Nurserymen from a purely social point of view. One of five hundred of the biggest hearted, biggest brained men in the United States. If there were no other benefits, it is worth the cost to come in contact with the membership of the National Association because "I become a part of every man who comes in contact with me." No man can be satisfied with less than his best who mingles once each year with members of American Association of Nurserymen in convention.

Sixth. For these and many other reasons which could be enumerated, it is desirable that every worthy nurseryman in America retain his membership. The small additional cost under the new constitution is infinitesimal, the benefits incomparable. Every member of June, 1915, remains a member by subscribing to the provisions of the new constitution. The Association needs every worthy nurseryman in the United States, and every nurseryman needs the Association. There may be some features of the work which you do not understand. Any member of the executive committee, or the secretary, Mr. Hall, will be glad to enlighten you. There are many reasons why the 1916 convention at Milwaukee should be the greatest meeting ever held. It is most probable that it will be necessary to adopt amendments to constitution and by-laws from time to time. Whatever may be necessary to make this organization the most potent factor in the upbuilding of the nursery interests of America, with patience, with loyalty, and with courage, let us approach the task.

J. R. MAYHEW.

Something for Nothing

SUCCESSFUL trade journals are becoming more than ever averse to giving free copies. The average person does not value something that is thrust upon him without charge. He reasons with exactness that "something for nothing" is unscientific and that gift enterprises have some ulterior motive back of them. Thoughtful business men prefer to subscribe and pay for such literature as they desire and are not likely to read papers that are mailed to them without an order. They have learned that free papers are poor papers.

Then again, by accepting free papers they encourage that class of circulation which must necessarily depreciate the value of the paper itself. The more free circulation, the poorer such journals are bound to be. The right and logical thing to do is to refuse positively to accept papers sent free, but to pay for and read the better class of journals. Such a policy is constructive and aids to the production of better papers and higher class service. Free circulation is destructive in every way.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Except upon special occasions, HORTICULTURE is not sent to members of the trade who are not advertisers or subscribers. This rule is in the interest of subscribers, who should not be compelled to pay for what others are getting for nothing.

The reconstruction of Main street boulevard, five miles in length, is rapidly nearing completion, and assures the city of Houston a strikingly attractive and beautiful boulevard, a tribute of the citizenship of today to the memories of Wm. M. Rice and Geo. H. Hermann. Mr. Rice bequeathed to posterity the William M. Rice Institute, and Mr. Hermann, likewise, the Geo. H. Hermann Park of 287 acres, and the Geo. H. Hermann Charity Hospital, all located on Main street boulevard.

We give these statistics as a matter of justice to this progressive Texas city, for the information of our readers, especially those who are members of the Society of American Florists, many of whom we feel sure will be rather surprised to learn how rapidly Houston is progressing in everything that appertains to municipal greatness, in hopes that this knowledge, together with additional interesting information which we hope to present from time to time, may perhaps serve as an incentive to some who have not yet made up their minds to take the trip to Texas next August. Considerable has been said as to the duty of the S. A. F. to carry its banner into districts remote from the scenes of its former activities and to shed its benign influence for the uplift of horticulture impartially in every section of our great country. How the S. A. F. may do this and how it might, perhaps, fall short of accomplishing its full purpose in Texas, is considered in an editorial note on page 754 of this issue.

Obituary

Michael J. Tobin.

Milford, Mass. Michael J. Tobin, formerly a gardener employed at a greenhouse, died of cancer of the stomach, on Thursday, May 18, at Hyde Park.

Wm. F. Jones.

William F. Jones, superintendent of the Mishkan Tefila cemetery in Wakefield, Mass., dropped dead in the cemetery on May 26, while talking to Louis E. Carter, superintendent of the Lakeside cemetery, which adjoins. He had been superintendent of the Jewish cemetery for the past 40 years. He leaves two sons and three daughters.

Herbert J. Palmer.

Lance Corporal Herbert J. Palmer was killed in action (casualty list) while fighting with the Canadian contingent at the front. The news just reached us through his cousin, Albert Jay, of Hingham, Mass. Mr. Palmer was for some time employed as assistant under Charles Sander on the estate of Prof. C. S. Sargent in Brookline and was a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.

Mrs. A. J. Simmons.

News of the sudden death of Mrs. A. J. Simmons, 63rd St., Chicago, came as a shock Saturday morning, when word was received in the market that she had passed away apparently in full health. Mrs. Simmons was the practical head of the flower store, Mr. Simmons having been in poor health for some time, and was greatly respected for her business methods as well as for her pleasing personality. Death found her at her post. With the telephone receiver in her hand, she was taking an order about ten o'clock Saturday, May 27th when a customer chanced to see her apparently fainting. She was caught and tenderly laid down, but in that brief instant life had departed. For twenty years Mrs. Simmons had been engaged in the florist business on the south side, and would have been 42 years old on June 10th, invitations being out for celebrating that event. Besides her husband she leaves one daughter Ruth, 18 years old, two sisters and one brother. The funeral was held on Monday, May 29, from Oak Woods chapel and in spite of a downpour of rain, the building was crowded and many could not get inside to pay their last respects to one who was a friend to all and an honor to the florist trade.

HOW MUCH INSURANCE MONEY IS WASTED.

Readers of these articles know that from time to time I break out with something about the great need of knowing the provisions of an insurance policy and following them. As a matter of fact, these outbreaks are practically all aroused by cases which have been brought to me, wherein somebody has failed in his duty, and is confronting a loss in consequence. It seems so exceedingly plain that any business man paying good money for insurance should know enough to be able to realize upon his investment, if the occasion arises, that I cannot get it through my head that there is the slightest excuse when these things happen.

One of the most expensive forms of insurance is indemnity insurance, such as is carried by firms using delivery wagons, more particularly motor delivery wagons. It is astounding how many men carrying this form of insurance fail to comply with the invariable provision that the company must be immediately notified of the accident if there is one. Every indemnity insurance policy contains this provision, usually in the following language:

Upon the occurrence of an accident the assured shall give immediate notice in writing of said accident with the fullest information then available, to the Company at its home office. If no claim is made on account of such accident, the assured shall give like notice thereof with full particulars.

I was sitting in the office of another attorney only yesterday when a client of his—a large wholesale house—telephoned in about a suit that had apparently just been begun against it. The attorney was inquiring about the facts and after listening for a time said this, which tells the story of another case precisely like those I am discussing: "Did you notify your insurance company when you first heard about the accident?" * * * Well, then, your chance is gone. You're too late now. Didn't you know the policy said the company should be notified right away?" * * * "Well, too bad, but you'll have to stand the brunt of it yourself now."

It was really that which inspired me to write this article, coupled with the fact that an appeal court about the same time handed down a decision in a case of exactly the same kind. In that case the court applied the above provision of an indemnity insurance policy, which is in practically general use throughout the entire United States. One of the delivery teams of a business house had run down and killed a 3-year-old child. The parents sued the driver's employer and recovered heavy damages, about $2,600.

The employer in turn sued the insurance company in which he had an indemnity policy, to recover the above amount, the company having refused to pay because it was not notified of the accident when the policy said it should be.

I reproduce the following from the court's decision, upholding the insurance company in refusing to pay:

On October 30th, a three-year-old child was accidentally injured by one of the insured teams which was in charge of its driver. The fact of the accident was known the same day by the immediate superior of the driver, a Mr. Clark, who represented the insured in the county where the accident occurred. On January 27th, nearly three months after the date of the accident, the insured was notified by a firm of lawyers that a claim for damages resulting from the accident had been placed in their hands. On April 1st, an action to recover was commenced, and the summons was served on Mr. Clark, the insured's representative, on April 7th. It was not until April 20th that the plaintiff gave to the defendant, at its head office, any information concerning the accident which had occurred on October 30th of the year before, or as to the claim made therefor by the attorneys in January. Counsel for appellant contends that this was not immediate notice, such as was plainly required by the contract. We think his contention is well founded. The provisions regarding the giving of notice to insurance companies upon the happening of an accident are valid and of the essence of the contract, being designed to enable the company to investigate the circumstances of the accident while the matter is yet fresh in the minds of all, and to make timely defense against any claim filed. It was the plain duty of plaintiff to report the accident as soon as it had knowledge of its occurrence.

So that the business house in question was obliged to pay out probably $3,000, counting attorney's fees and costs, merely because it failed to comply with the simple provision of its policy that when an accident happened, the company which is supposed to pay for it should be immediately notified.

There were some features in this case which show how slip-ups often occur in the giving of notice. It appeared that the man named in the above extract from the opinion, Clark had known of the accident shortly after it happened, but had failed to tell his employer. That often happens. There should be a standing order in all establishments carrying insurance of this character that immediate notice of all accidents must be given to some responsible head whose business it is to look after such things. In this case when Clark was asked why he didn't report the accident, he said: "He did not know he was supposed to, and he thought nothing would come of it."

The business house in question also claimed that it did give notice—to the insurance company's local agents. This, too, often happens, although the policy almost always provides that the notice must be given to the company's head office, as did this policy. Therefore the court said "this was not in compliance with the policy, either as to time or place."

Nitrate of soda—Chile, $80,144.

"Titanic" Wheat.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has recently been advised by a correspondent in California that a variety of wheat is being advertised under the name "Titanic." The assertion is made that it is a new variety of wheat discovered in England about four years ago, and that a small quantity of seed was brought to the United States by one of the survivors of the ill-fated Titanic. The wheat is represented as having extremely high yielding power, the returns reaching as high as 7,000-fold. A photograph sent by this correspondent shows a head identical in appearance with the widely exploited "Alaska" wheat. Five acres of the wheat are said to be growing in the State of Washington, and the seed, it is believed, will be offered at high prices after harvest. The Department has no further or more definite information concerning this variety, but farmers and dealers are cautioned to be on their guard concerning this new exploitation.

The Wind and the Seed.

After all, the wind is the great sower. Bad seeds and good seeds are sown by the wind—here, there, everywhere! Good seeds are dropped where they cannot grow and bad seeds are sowed where they are not wanted—even amongst the flowers that are so delicate and beautiful.

But it is the whim of the wind to do wanton sowing. Into the wheat is dropped the cockle, and into the park the thorn. The weed does not ask that its seed be harvested for the spring. It leaves them to the wind. It trusts the wandering wind and is not disappointed.

The wheat and the corn rely on other sowers. The good they do when grown guarantees their protection and planting again and again, but the evil done by weeds never condemns them, except to partial destruction. They prosper on negligence and thrive on sloth. They are the rags of beggars that decorate abandonment. They follow and fare with the wind that, like a roving hag, sows them up and down the land wherever Satan walks.

Better Seed

Of recent years there has been constantly increasing appreciation on the part of seed planters of the importance and the large amount of the seed used. There has been increasing demand, naturally, that seed furnished should be of better quality, better stock and every grain should be of the distinct varietal character of the sort. Planters, particularly those who plant for market, are not satisfied when a planting of Minnesota sweet corn produces a large yield of 8, 10, 12 or 16 rowed ears, but demand that at least 90 per cent. of the plants shall produce only typical ears of the sort. Experienced planters recognize that the varietal character, and often the quantity of the yield, while influenced by local climatic and cultural conditions, is very largely predetermined by the breeding of the seed used, which is rarely clearly revealed by the wisest and most careful inspection of the seed itself.

The planter has to depend as blindly upon his seedsman in the character of the seed furnished as the physician does upon his druggist. The doctor may be mistaken as to the effectiveness of a drug ordered for a certain case, but common sense and the law sustain him in his demand that, if the druggist undertakes to fill the prescription, he shall fill it as it was ordered, and not by substituting something else which he has heard and believes is as good or better. The planter has a similar right to expect to receive the exact variety of seed he ordered, quite independent of the seedsman's opinion of its comparative merit.

A horticultural variety propagated by seed is made up of an infinitude of individuals, each carrying a potentiality of variation, and seed is valuable in proportion to which every undesirable variation, be it ever so trifling, is cut out from the line of probable transmission, so that the stock becomes uniform in varietal character.

The call from garden and farm is not so much for new and improved varieties, as for truer stocks of old sorts of proven merit, and the seedsman who can offer such stock is going to get the trade rather than the one who relies upon newer sorts or lower prices.

Washington, D. C.

And I cannot say nor surmise why the wind is such a sower of bad seed, nor why the whirlwind scatters them afar. A slattern with red tongue and lips black with libel could not so slander broad and fertile acres.

And, with infinite mischief and sinister design it rots the noble oak with poison vines and chokes old temples with lush leaves and rank growth.

"Sow the wind, and riot in destruction," comes the piping, shrill, discordant voice as it drags its drabbed skirts across the land and swishes them into the salt seas.

It sets thistles in pastures, fennels in plowed fields, vetches in rose gardens, traitors amongst friends, and a Judas at the feast.—Anonymous.

Mushroom spawn is a very scarce commodity this season.

Mr. J. Lally, florist, died at his home in Boston, Mass., of typhoid fever, at the age of 45.

Boston florists will be sorry to learn that Martin Lally, who was reported to be in with a cold last week, has contracted a severe case of typhoid fever and will probably not resume his duties for some time.

One of the features of the preparedness parade on Saturday, 27th, was the gigantic float decorated by William Penn. Carnations of all colors were used and the result was striking, especially as it was the only floral float in the entire parade.

A deer, which probably wandered from the Middlesex Fells, jumped through the greenhouse roof owned by Kamerana, a Japanese florist at North Cambridge, at 6.40 A. M. last Wednesday, and did considerable damage to the plants. The animal managed to elude pursuers and escaped.

The lilac display at the Arnold Arboretum has been the mecca for throngs of admiring visitors during the past week. Not alone at the Arboretum, but all over this section the lilacs have bloomed this season with an exuberance rarely attained. Their perfection and abundance while many other plants have done so poorly is one of the remarkable features of this unusual season.

A. R. Hutson, foreman at W. H. Ellett's greenhouses in Brighton has just received information of the killing of his aunt and her two children together with seven other members of the household by bombs dropped from a German Zeppelin upon their home, which was located in the coast district of England about ten miles inland from Brighton. Although the fatality occurred nearly six months ago the news never reached Mr. Hutson until now.

PHILADELPHIA.

Jos. A. Heacock, of the Joseph Heacock Co., the well known growers of palms and orchids at Wyncote, Pa., has been nominated on the Democratic ticket to represent the 8th District in Congress. The election was very close, Mr. Heacock winning over his opponent by 46 majority. We trust Mr. Heacock will make as successful a congressman as he is a florist, in which case all precedents of congressional records will be upset.

whose obituary appears on another page. CHICAGO has lost one of its most capable florists. Busy as she was she always had time for the little courtesies of life and many a flower was handed over the counter to help make life brighter for some one. On Mother's Day, one of her friends relates that Mrs. Simmons remembered with a small bouquet every aged mother in her vicinity. It was typical of the woman that she died at the telephone with her last order on her lips.

Chicago "Kidlets" will have one great nature lover, Jens Jenson, to thank if they have two more holidays, the object of which will be to study and learn to love the great outdoors as seen outside of Chicago. Mr. Jenson has made this plea to the school board and has backed up his idea by statements of his recollections of such days in his own childhood and the effect they have had on his life. Mr. Jenson is a well-known landscape architect much sought as a public speaker as well as in his regular profession.

The strike of the express drivers and some other employees of the express companies continues to interfere with the prompt shipment of flowers from this market, but the trouble has been very light compared to what had been feared. All packages are obliged to be delivered to the depot by the senders and this is all arranged for under the management of Fred Lautenschlager, and the majority of the stock has been promptly placed aboard the cars. Other shipments have been delivered to outside points and caught the express trains there. It is expected that the strike will be over before another week.

IN THE SPRING.

Have you seen an apple orchard
In the spring, in the spring?
An English apple-orchard in the spring?
When the spreading trees are hoary,
With their wealth of promised glory,
And the rooks' pipes, 'ho, ho, ho' in the spring?

Have you walked beneath the blossoms
In the spring, in the spring?
Beneath the apple-blossoms in the spring?
When the pink cascades were falling,
And the silver brooklets bawling
And the cuckoo bird is calling
In the spring?

Have you seen a merry bridal
In the spring, in the spring?
In an English apple-country in the spring?
When the brides and maidens wear
Apple-blossoms in their hair,
Apple-blossoms everywhere
In the spring?

If you have not, then you know not,
In the spring, in the spring.
Half the color, beauty, wonder of the spring.
No sight can I remember
Half so precious, half so tender
As the apple-blossoms render
In the spring.

—William W. Martin.

NEW YORK

Henry Schurmann of Schurmann has been divorced and ordered to pay alimony to Mrs. Schurmann, but he has the honor of being heralded as "a wealthy florist" in the paper, which is quite an offset. "Wealthy florist" comes as naturally to the newspaperman as "beautiful bride," "talented musician" or "learned judge."

The S. S. New Amsterdam, of the Holland-America Line, for Rotterdam, which sailed from New York on Monday, P. M., May 29, carried a big list of Dutch salesmen who have been canvassing this country for several weeks on plant and bulb import orders for next season. Almost simultaneous with the departure of these salesmen, special reduced price lists have begun to arrive.

J. B. G. Rinehart, a well-known lawyer and politician of this city has been arrested on a charge of theft preferred by Frederick Bauer, a man of 81, who for sixty years has conducted a florist business at 207 Metropolitan Avenue, Brooklyn, opposite Evergreen Cemetery. Bauer's complaint accuses the lawyer of swindling him by pretending to invest money for him, the amount in question being $18,000.

THE RIGHT TO CHARGE AN ADVANCED PRICE WITHOUT PREVIOUS NOTICE TO THE CUSTOMER.

In these days of rapid and unexpected advances in all commodities, the following case should strike a responsive chord:

Columbus, Ohio.

For several years I have been dealing with a firm of Cleveland, Ohio, jobbers, buying the general line, among which is a line of staples, on which the price has not varied in a long time. For as long as I can remember the price has been the same, $1.75 per dozen, f. o. b. Cleveland. The last order which I placed was placed as usual with the salesman who calls on us regularly. He said nothing about any advance in price, but advised me to increase my order, as the market might advance. He said, however, that he did not expect it to advance in the near future.

The goods were duly received and also the bill. I did not have time to check the bill up for a few days, and found then that the price on the line of staples I refer to had been advanced nearly 25 per cent. without notice to me. I took the matter up with the firm, but they refused to adjust the matter, saying that all wholesalers had advanced the price. It was too late to send the goods back because I had used some of them. I wish to know if I am liable for the advanced price, as I was charged same without notice.

E. R. K. & CO.

As I said before, this is vitally important just at this time, because all kinds of commodities are advancing, and the chance is that many more readers of this department may encounter this problem.

Whether a buyer who places an order relying upon a price previously quoted him, is responsible for a higher price, no notice of the advance having been given, depends on several factors.

First, what is the seller's method of doing business? Many manufacturers and jobbers print on all their business stationery and their order forms a line reading: "All prices subject to change without notice." Any seller who has put this wording on his stationery, if it is conspicuous, can raise his prices without notice to a buyer, and if the buyer places an order without inquiring, and afterwards finds the price higher, he must pay it if he keeps the goods. He can of course return the goods but must do so promptly.

Even if the seller does not use the notice referred to, it may be a custom of the particular trade to advance prices without notice. If this is so, the buyer is bound by it and could not object to an advance without notice.

If the seller has not adopted the blanket notice, "all prices subject to change without notice," and there is no custom of the trade about it, then in my judgment, he could not advance the price without notice. Perhaps I should qualify that. If the buyer had been buying a certain thing regularly every week or every month, and the price had for a considerable period been stationary, then it would be the duty of the seller, before filling the current order, to get confirmation of it at the advanced price. If he shipped the order and it was taken in and used by the buyer before the bill was sent, the buyer, in my judgment, could refuse to pay more than he had paid before.

This same question was asked me some time ago by a retail merchant who had bought some goods and had found the price higher than he had paid the last time. Inquiry demonstrated that the order on which the price had been advanced was the first for over two months. The price two months before had been so much, and the buyer expected it to be the same as his last order, and did not inquire. It proved to be 33½ per cent. higher when the bill came in. The buyer had to have the goods quickly and he therefore used them, but objected to the charge. I advised him that his objection was not well founded. Where goods are bought infrequently, there is no connection between the transactions, and it is decidedly incumbent on the buyer to ask the price when he buys. He has no right to assume that it has not meanwhile changed. In such a case the buyer would have to pay whatever the price was.

There is still another factor which ought to be discussed, and it is present in the case cited by the Ohio correspondent, viz., the effect on the situation of a salesman's acceptance of the order without notice—perhaps without knowledge—of any advance. If the salesman has authority to actually accept orders on the spot—his previous conduct would decide this—then the former price governs if he accepts an order without changing the price, even though he didn't know of the advance, as seems to have been the case with the Ohio salesman.

But if the salesman had no authority to accept the order, but simply was to get it and forward it to his firm, they to pass on it, then what the salesman did or said has no bearing on the case.

Flower Market Reports

Even the most exacting BOSTON and fastidious of florists could ask for no better conditions than surrounded the Memorial Day trading this year. Everything was in excellent conditions. Roses were plentiful but none too numerous. Short Beauties, Hadleys, Ophelias, Russells and Killarneys were the favorites, but all varieties were worked off. As for carnations the colored blossoms went lively, but white stuck rather badly and in more than one instance the buyer was forced to take a large dose of white with his colored purchases to enable salesmen to clean up on the former. Sweet peas were not exceptionally active and have quieted down still more during the last part of the week. Lilies moved fairly well during the rush but have fallen down considerably since. In fact a dead calm has struck the market since Tuesday. Darwins seem to be rather on the dull side at present, although they did well previous to Tuesday. Darwin Tulips sell rapidly at $3.50 and $4.00. Lily of the valley is not moving but June weddings will soon live it up. Gardenias were very quiet all week. Gladioli, snapdragon and stocks have resumed their normal state, both in quantity and price. Decoration Day was by far the biggest that the florists of Boston have ever known. The growers, with few exceptions, were able to bring in their cut at exactly the right time. Feverfew and peonies excepted, there was a good supply of everything, and even the above-named could hardly be called scarce. The total number of roses marketed during the week was enormous and carnations were a close second, but the public seems partial to the rose as a Memorial Day flower. A canvass of every wholesale house in the city indicates an unusually large volume of trade. Darwin tulips, extensively handled by nearly all the wholesalers, are a source of revenue not to be discounted. The scarcity of peonies was regrettable for while the retailers and the general public were loudly clamoring for their favorite Decoration Day flower the growers and wholesalers were powerless to answer their demands. The old staple, stock, was plentiful and much sought for. Nevertheless, there was no decrease in the sales of artificial wreaths and designs. Every local retailer reaped a rich harvest from this field and it is getting to be more profitable every year, as many evidently feared it would. A unique feature in this line is the cypress wreath, made of small-sized cypress leaves.

There is a large supply CHICAGO of flowers in the market on this, the day before Memorial Day. During the previous week, local trade had not been heavy. Warm weather, which culminated on Friday with mid-summer heat, did not tend to help conditions. The thermometer registered 90 degrees till late afternoon and roses particularly were the worse for it. Saturday trade was fair, locally, with a good lot of shipping orders. Sunday was quiet and Monday's trade was reduced by a steady rain. Altogether, the florists are not counting on trade footing up to the usual returns of Memorial Day week. Peonies are arriving in large quantities and a good proportion going into cold storage. Local demand for peonies is regarded as very good. There are plenty of good carnations and roses for all orders and the poorer ones are being sold for anything they will bring. Sweet peas, daisies, snapdragons, calendulas, iris, lilies, etc., give good variety. Ferns are quoted at $4 per 1000. The strike has greatly hampered the Memorial Day trade. The fact is, telegrams are coming in today saying Saturday shipments had not come through promptly. The market is full of stock and all the definite information on prices at time of writing is that shipping orders are billed at quotations of last week, and local trade is handled for whatever they can get.

Taken as a whole CINCINNATI Memorial Day business was very good for the retailer. There was a large quantity of stock and an active demand. A very considerable competition came from outdoor stock which the farmers brought in or from the people's own gardens. The commencement of the local High Schools on Thursday and Friday of this week should use many blooms and help business accordingly. Roses and carnations are in a heavy supply. Lilies are plentiful. Gladioli are excellent, coming in in a fair quantity and sell well. Peonies are very plentiful. Some good outdoor sweet peas as well as greenhouse grown ones are offered.

Business up to and NEW YORK including May 29, was exceptionally good, and flowers of all kinds were disposed of at very good figures. After 10 o'clock on Monday morning, however, the market went to pieces. Carnations dropped fifty per cent, lily of the valley and lilies were the same and the situation became gradually worse until the afternoon shipments arrived, when the market went completely to pieces, and no staple prices could be maintained. On the morning of Decoration Day the market was as quiet as an ordinary Sunday. All commission houses were well stocked with almost everything, nothing moving. Even cattleyas were in great supply and gardenias, which had been selling for very fair figures, also took a big drop. At present enormous quantities of peonies are flooding the market just two days too late, and where they would have sold at from 8 to 12 dollars a hundred, they are now being sacrificed at any price from $15 to $60 per thousand, according to the variety. Lily of the valley is moving slowly, and it is almost impossible to dispose of smilax, adiantum and such stock. All things considered, this market is in a very unsatisfactory condition.

One feature PHILADELPHIA stood out prominently in the Memorial holiday flower trade of Philadelphia. Up to the last shipping day the commission men had a headache from an avalanche of peony orders which they could not fill, because the peonies were not in bloom. The very next day, the peonies came in with a rush, and they had a headache with peonies for which they had no orders. Sad. Sad. But, outside of that, business was up to the usual mark—and perhaps a little better. If it had not been for the peony situation the aggregate would have been away ahead of all records. There was no marked advance in prices on the staple lines except on carnations. These went up about twenty-five per cent. during the four days preceding the holiday as the cool weather and the “cease-firing” custom had shortened the supply. Another good seller was the gladiolus—both the grandiflora and the baby went very well indeed. German irises were plentiful and good and cleaned up pretty well. The rose market was a little slow, and the same may be said of other high-priced stock such as orchids and gardenias. Their turn will come next week—when the June Girl gets busy.

Contrary to the expectations of last week, there was a plentiful—in fact, an over-plentiful supply of cut flowers for Memorial Day. The extremely hot weather forced quantities of practically all kinds, so that there was no shortage as predicted. Too, the demand was not quite as good as usual, probably owing to two reasons: Falling so early in the week, many observed the day on Sunday; and again there is a growing tendency to use blooming plants and magnolia wreaths owing to their more lasting quality. For both of these the demand has never before been as great. Returning to cut blooms; the demand for special goods was not as good as usual, the cheaper varieties selling decidedly better. Decoration Day itself was a keen disappointment to those shops which cater to late trade, the steady downpour of rain precluding really any business. Bedding work, as well as landscape, continues surpassingly good.

The conditions of the ST. LOUIS wholesale market have not been satisfactory to the commission man nor the grower of late. Stock has been glutted up and prices away down. The overcrowded market of the previous week was intensified by the coming in of large shipments of peonies and cape jessamines. The arrival of these always causes a less demand for roses and prices have to suffer. The coming and carnations, also other staple stock of Memorial Day this week clears up some of the overcrowded conditions, but there are many other outdoor flowers coming in now. Lily of the valley should be well in demand this month for weddings and the National Convention and school closings should keep the retailer somewhat busy for a while.

WE ARE WHOLESALE FLORISTS
We handle every variety of cut flowers. We have 22 years' experience behind us, and we do not expect a gold medal for doing our full duty by our customers and ourselves. You cannot go very far wrong when dealing with us.

NEW BOOK*JUST ISSUED*Plant Propagation Greenhouse and Nursery Practice By
M. G. KAINS

So many discoveries of new facts by plant investigators, shortcuts and "wrinkles" worked out by plant propagators, and nursery, greenhouse and garden methods simplified or made more effective, have made books hitherto available on plant propagation out of date.

There has also been an insistent call for a volume that would not only include the character of information wanted by nurserymen and other plant propagators, but also discuss the subject of plant propagation from the standpoint of fundamental principles, and include the latest conclusions advanced by investigators throughout the world.

This new book by Professor Kains will appeal with equal force to the amateur, the professional propagator, and the teacher in agricultural colleges and schools.

The book devotes many pages to special plant lists and condensed directions for propagation of vegetables, fruits, annual and perennial flowers, bulbs, ferns, orchids, cacti, evergreens, deciduous trees and shrubs, vines, water plants, greenhouse and house plants and palms.

The table of contents includes: An introduction on general principles, germination, seed testing, potting, layering, bottom heat, cuttings, use of cuttings, graftage, and theories and laws, Daniel's experiments in graftage, tree stocks and air layering, and the methods of grafting considered individually, budding methods, nursery management, and laws affecting nursery stock.

Illustrated, 5 1/2 x 7 1/2 inches, 342 pages. Cloth. Price, net, $1.50.

REPORT OF THE FLORICULTURAL PATHOLOGIST, UNIV. OF ILL.

BRANCH ROT OF THE CARNATION.

Branch Rot of the Carnation.

Branch rot of carnations was much more serious this past season than formerly. This condition was due in part to peculiar weather conditions. The excessive rains produced plants that were large, bushy and soft. As they made such rapid growth, a large amount of topping was necessary which increased the number of wounds and so increased branch rot. Also, the plants being bushy prevented them from drying out completely after the rains, and this factor also induced this trouble.

The fungus causing branch rot cannot attack a healthy plant below the surface of the soil like stem rot, but it is more in the nature of a wound parasite, attacking branches where the flower stems and shoots have been broken off and slowly working its way down into the stems and finally killing the entire plant. The fungus is also able to get in at the nodes and kill the young shoots even before they are visible. In bad cases of node infection, the nodes become discolored and split and in a short time the whole branch dies. It was observed, for the first time, this season that the fungus is the principal cause of the dying off of the lower leaves of the plant, especially in cases where the plants have yellows.

Methods for Control.

To control this trouble, I would make the following recommendations:

1. It is better, for several reasons, to use a medium sized, sturdy plant than a large, bushy one to set in the bench.
2. In planting, do not set the plants too close together. Overcrowding will increase branch rot considerably.
3. As in the case of the control of stem rot, keep the temperature down, especially during the first three months.
4. It is always better to syringe early in the morning of a clear day, so that the plants will dry out by evening.
5. In topping, be careful not to leave stubs and broken parts on the plants, for these are open doors for branch rot to enter.

6. In gathering flowers, experiments have shown that carefully breaking off the flower stems at the node is to be preferred to cutting the stems between the nodes. Branch rot will enter a stub easier than it will at the nodes.

7. Of the utmost importance in the control of branch rot, as well as other diseases, adopt for your slogan, "keep the houses clean," which means under, as well as on top of the bench.

Carnation Yellows.

Carnation yellows appears to be increasing in seriousness rapidly and is now to be found on all the standard varieties on the market. While the cause of this disease still remains unknown, I would make a few suggestions, which if carefully followed out will help eliminate this trouble from your greenhouses.

1. Always bear in mind that anything that will lower the vitality of your plants will increase the amount of yellows. Also, that any check the plants receive will, likewise, tend to increase yellows.

2. Before making cuttings, select and mark the strongest and healthiest plants in the benches. Watch them closely and if they develop yellows do not take cuttings from them.

3. Make your cuttings from plants in bloom in preference to stock plants. In this connection, when you grow a new variety remember the plants are generally propagated from stock plants and in many cases weak cuttings, due to overpropagation, are used. Therefore, it is well worth your while to select the best and strongest plants of the new varieties the first year and watch them closely and then make cuttings in the manner I have outlined above.

4. Root your cuttings early in the season and do not leave them in the sand after they have rooted. It is better to put up cuttings with the root system fairly developed than to wait until the cuttings have a great mass of roots. From my observations, I have found that the later cuttings are made, the longer they take to root. Also, that the late rooted cuttings will be troubled with yellows much more than the plants rooted early in the season.

5. Although the more plants are shifted, the more yellows will increase, never let the young plants become pot-bound, or stunted.

Antirrhinum Rust.

Antirrhinum rust, like the carnation rust of old, has spread over the whole country and is now found in the east as well as the west. Like carnation rust, it will run its course and the ultimate result will be that the antirrhinum breeder will give us rust-resistant varieties as in the case of the carnation. However, the question now before the grower is to know how to control it at the present time.

This rust as well as anthracnose, another disease of the snapdragon, can be prevented by applying Bordeaux mixtures every two weeks from the seedling stage until the spikes form, followed by a weekly application of ammoniacal copper carbonate during the rest of the growing season. Bordeaux mixture discolors the foliage, so that it cannot be used through the season.

In my former reports I recommended the use of seeds instead of cuttings. However, I have learned from experience, that suitable plants for commercial purposes cannot be obtained from seeds. Therefore, I would modify my recommendation to this extent. Do not use cuttings if you must send for them. Start your first batch from seed and then select cuttings from the most promising plants. Rust cannot be introduced in your establishment through seed, but infected cuttings can be easily overlooked. It has been proven rather conclusively, that the rust was spread over this country in the last three years, on infected cuttings.

Aster Wilt and Yellows.

Last summer, work was started on aster wilt and yellows, two of the most serious troubles of this crop. About ten thousand plants were used in the experiments. Twenty-five varieties, representing all the commercial types, were grown from seed obtained from various states in this country and different localities in Europe. All the plants used were more or less infected with yellows, showing that the variety or origin of the seed has no influence on the amount of yellows. The more young seedlings were shifted, the more loss from wilt occurred. This was true to some extent with yellows also. The lowest percentage of loss occurred where the seeds were sown directly in the field, although the plants bloomed later. Disinfecting the seed with mercuric chloride (1 part to 1,000 parts of water) for 5-10 minutes, and the use of clean seed beds, with a minimum of shifting or transplanting, will materially decrease the loss from wilt. No recommendation can be made for the control of yellows at this time.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The girls of America owe a large debt of gratitude to the Page Company of Boston, Mass., for the many interesting and deserving girls' books they send out each year just about the time the vacation period is beginning. This vacation literature is always clean, wholesome and vivacious and marked by a refreshing absence of anything morbid or objectionably sensational. "Social mush" finds no place in The Page Company's publications.

One of the books just out is "Blue Bonnet Keeps House." This is the fifth in the popular Blue Bonnet series by Caroline E. Jacobs and Lela H. Richards. It is the tale of a girl of wealth who owns a ranch in the west and of her social experiences in a sojourn in Boston. A book just suited for a present to a girl in her teens. Price $1.50 net.

Sylvia of the Hill Top, the Second Cheerful Book, by Margaret R. Piper, author of "Sylvia's Experiment; The Cheerful Book." "The Cheerful Book" is a trademark, well taken considering the phenomenal success of the "Glad" books which carried the name of the Page Company all over the world. Sylvia of the Hill Top starts off with an episode in which a young gardener becomes "part of the landscape" and as the hero of the story "makes good" all through. The heroine of the first Cheerful Book proved herself a messenger of joy and cheerfulness to thousands of readers. This book tells how she continued her sunny mission during her summer vacation and made friends with everyone. The frontispiece is in full color. Price $1.25 net.

The Girl from the Big Horn Company; by Mary Ellen Chase. Since this book was issued its popularity has so spread that the Page Company have been compelled to put it into its fourth printing. It is one of those big whole-souled healthy stories which, sad to say, we see so little of in these days. This is the story of a typical Wyoming girl and her experiences among new social surroundings in Vermont. It is full of life and spirit. One reviewer of this book says: "Virginia Hunter, with her fresh western ways and her wholesomeness, is so infinitely superior to Gladys Fulcrn Goat or some other individual who is made the heroine of the social penny thriller that it seems almost a shame that the publishers have to sell the unique book alongside of the commonplace."

Bulletin of the American Dahlia Society, Vol. 1, No. 3. The May issue of the Bulletin is a progressive and useful document. Articles on Dahlias from Seed, Preferred Varieties, Dahlias in Public Parks, Affiliation, Judging Points, The Dahlia as a Cut Flower, and many notes on cultural topics by growers of repute form the contents which dahlia growers will find interesting and instructive.

FREAKISH FACTS AND FACTLESS FREAKS.

Rosebush Yields Apples.

Dr. Irwin's rosebush this year produced apples instead of roses. The crop was gathered by Dr. Irwin last week. It consisted of five apples, each about the size of a hen's egg, and of delicious flavor.

In Mr. Ogden's yard in Fulton Avenue is another rosebush which has produced flowers for ten years. But it, too, became tired of the humdrum existence it had been leading, and also produced apples this year.

Raises Strawberries in Cellar in Winter.

St. Louis, April 2.—Mrs. Katherine Schuch of Randle street, Edwardsville, Ill., has found that the basement of her home is good for something beside storing coal and doing the week's washing. She grows a winter crop of strawberries there. While the snow is piled around the house, it is a common practice of Mrs. Schuch and her sons to step downstairs and fill a bowl with ripe, deliciously flavored berries for luncheon. The basement strawberries are not so red as those grown in the sun in strawberry season, but it seems to the family that they equal the spring berries in taste.

No Peanuts for Orchids.

"Do not feed the plants" was an order that was repeated to surprised guests at the Flower Show, at the Grand Central Palace, recently, as thousands of men and women made the acquaintance of the collection of mouse and bug eating flowers on exhibition there.

The orchid hybridizing exhibit of Clement Moore, amateur floriculturist, attracted particular attention when it was learned that the mother orchid captured and devoured small insects that might injure the young seedlings when they first appear above the ground. Other carnivorous plants whose tastes run largely to dainty field mice also were included in the collection.

—New York Tribune.

Judges at the International Flower Show at Grand Central Palace who were to pass on the comparative merits of modest violets rubbed their eyes, blinked, looked again and then demanded to know what variety of bloom was a new one that reposed in the midst of a mass of mauve tinted flowers.

Somebody had tried to play a little joke on the horticultural wise men by including among the entrants a variegated cubist cabbage labelled "Violet Ascending to the Sun." Every tint in the rainbow was reflected in the common or garden variety of vegetable which had carefully been colored and stuck all over with flower petals. The judges refused even to consider the floral novelty and it was hastily removed by the management of the show, who took care to suppress the Scranton, Pa.—Scranton society ladies made substantial profits for a worthy charity and incidentally had a good time at the "Flower Market"—an outdoor garden fete given for the benefit of the Home for the Friendless on May 23rd. So successful was the first occasion that it is planned to make it an annual event hereafter. The market was laid out along three walks at the east of the Court House. There was a tea garden, handsomely furnished, and tables and booths for flowers, plants, seeds, garden furniture and clothing, miniature landscape planting, Japanese garden, insecticides, birds, etc. Baldwin, Clarke, Baumann and others connected with commercial floriculture supported the affair very generously and made attractive exhibits. One of the most active ladies in the management was Mrs. Chas. S. Weston and she was ably assisted by Mrs. Everett Warren and her other associates on the executive committee. The local newspapers gave large space to the account of the affair.

On Turning Horse Sense Into Heating Dollars

HORSE sense is one thing.

Horse play, another.

Playing horse with one's self, still another.

Bad, because they turn things all up side down in the houses at just the time when they should all be right side up.

To state that a man plays horse with himself seems ridiculous, doesn't it?

But what about the man who knows that his heating must be overhauled, and puts it off week after week, until the very last thing before frost, and then raises "merry hail" because we can't do it day before yesterday?

Doesn't that come pretty close to playing horse with himself?

One thing certain, if anyone can do a hurry-up-heating-haul-over, we can. But these hurry-up-on-the-dead-run jobs are bad business. Bad, because they cost so much.

Of course when we mentioned this brand of playing horse we didn't have you in mind—it was the other fellow.

We know you are the horse sense kind, who will have us get after your heating problems the very first thing possible.

All we really wanted to speak to you about was that men—(especially good heating men)—are mighty scarce, and from the looks of things they will be scarcer. So if you want your work done early as usual, you had better get at it unusually early.

HYDRANGEAS FOR SUMMER-BLOOMING

We have an unusually fine stock of these plants, which have been kept dormant during the winter and are now starting into growth. They will begin to bloom in July and will remain in flower during August. These plants are in great demand at summer resorts for lawn and piazza decoration. We offer the following varieties in 14-inch tubs:—Otaksa and the new French varieties, Avalanche, Fraicheur, E. G. Hill, La Lorraine, Mme. Maurice Hamar, Mme. E. Mouillere, Mlle. Renard Gallard, and Radiance—$2.00 to $3.00 each.

Also Otaksa, very large fine symmetrical specimens in half-barrels, unusually heavily budded, $10.00 to $15.00 each.

"It vain our toll, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Miltonias

Miltonias are very subject to thrips so they should be dipped or sponged with fir tree oil or aphine about every two weeks. Give plenty of ventilation both day and night until fall. Keep them well syringed overhead during bright weather. Where you can, use removable blinds or lath shadings; they are the best, but where you have not these do not make the shading too dense. When through flowering the plants should have any necessary repotting. They do well in pans or pots, which should be half-filled with broken crocks and lumpy charcoal. A good compost is osmunda fern fiber mixed with a little live sphagnum. They can be kept rather close for three or four weeks after potting, but after that place them in as cool a house as possible during the summer months.

Preparing Compost for Carnations

All good growers know that without a congenial compost from which to draw the necessary food supply returns from the plants will be very unsatisfactory. Much success or failure is dependent on the soil used. In reality there is no dull season for the carnation grower, for there is always something to be looked after. Sod that was piled up last fall and exposed throughout the winter is the soil to use. Where this was mixed with manure at the rate of three of soil to one of manure it will not require anything else outside of a good turning over so as to have it thoroughly mixed. Always keep the pile clear of weeds and it will be time well invested.

Propagating Begonias

If you want to work up a good lot of flowering and ornamental leaved begonias now is a good time to start. The new side growths including such as come directly from the base of the plant make the most satisfactory cuttings. All flowering begonias will root now with the greatest of ease. An ideal place is a shaded house where the ventilators can be adjusted to avoid sweeping air currents, with an atmosphere that is charged with a reasonable amount of humidity. The floors and benches should be kept cool by frequent wettings, during the hot weather. For shading the house, a thin mixture of naphtha and white lead will do. When rooted they should be potted into 2½ or 3-inch pots in sandy loam, leaf mold and sand. In the shifts after this use a turf like, crumbly sod three parts well decayed cow manure one part, and enough of leaf mold and sand to lighten it.

Poinsettias

Poinsettias that were started early should now furnish some fine material for propagating. Such as are rooted now will produce bracts a foot or more in diameter and be suitable either for benching or making up later into large pans. Don't break them off the wooded stem but use the knife and let one or two eyes of the soft wood remain on the plants to give more cuttings in about four weeks. A common error is to leave cuttings too long in the sand after being rooted. Pot into stiff loam mixed with about one-third of well rotted cow manure. Pot just as soon as the roots have formed. By keeping them covered with glass and not giving too much ventilation, they will come along in good shape. If convenient and suitable greenhouse bench space is not at disposal, spread a coating of coal ashes in a cold frame and grow them there.

Stocks for Winter Flowering

The best place to care for these plants through the summer is in a frame where the sashes are elevated 6 to 8 inches, which will afford at all times a free circulation of air. In this abode they will do fine until very late in the fall. It is better to pot them when quite small. A 2 or 2½-inch pot is a good size to use and as these become filled with roots shift into 4 or 5-inch pots. Give them a rich compost, say three parts turfy loam to one of well-decayed manure. Ventilation is one of the most important points in growing stock successfully so give them plenty of it. Give regular fumigation to keep down the green fly. It is a good plan to wait until the buds can be distinguished before they are planted out, for you can tell the double flowered ones by their stubby buds.

Planting Out Stevias

Stevias could be planted out in the field. I prefer to give them a piece of poor ground as they will then make nice bushy plants. When given a rich soil they make entirely too rampant a growth. They should have about two feet of space between the plants. Keep pinching until the last of August when they can be lifted and potted or benched.

Next week: Asparagus plumosus; Decorative Plants; Gladioli; Rambler Roses; sowing Perennials.

The old saying that "No rule is so good as that which admits no exception" applies in the case of St. Louis which has had the exceptional misfortune to be visited by two destructive hail storms, within a brief period, none of the sufferers in the first being among those worst hit by the second. HORTICULTURE extends sympathy to the victims, who, it is to be hoped, are all protected by the Florists' Hail Association. This organization has proved a veritable life-saver for many a florist in distress and, doubtless, this St. Louis experience will be the means of adding to the number of its members. Secretary Esler's notice

One being coloring, you can use the spot an dyes—M & P and B. P. Co., New York, last are Unifluent markers often sold with in rural life. Any movement which tends to promote more rational living and a fuller appreciation of woodlands, gardens and all the environment of rural life is surely important. The one we are now considering may have fallen short of expectations in its first public attempt under hitherto untried conditions, but it is a De Facto movement and it should be judged not merely for what it was but for what it means for now and for the future. The plans of its promoters in their ultimate aim and purpose are distinctly on lines in which HORTICULTURE heartily believes, as a stimulus to substantial horticultural growth and for the best interests and material welfare of the entire horticultural profession. A sincere endeavor to amalgamate the active commercial and the amateur horticultural interests in singleness of purpose for effective joint work seems very manifest in this unique enterprise. Every forward step taken in this direction should have unqualified commendation and every possible encouragement and assistance, for only such a policy can assure success. We hope that the people who stand behind this movement now so auspiciously started will not relax in their zeal and that the new organization may prosper in all it undertakes for the advancement of horticultural art.

We took occasion last week to call attention to the appearance in this country of a number of special low price quotations on nursery stock received by mail from Holland just as the turn of forty or more salesmen who had been traveling here were sent to meet their customers here. How far this disposition to cut prices will extend, how it will affect the Boskoop syndicate by whom prices are established in advance, or what course will be adopted by the American houses which have already placed their orders, in the event of a stampede to unload accumulations in this country, we cannot predict but we do know that a number of the larger buyers here, in view of the practical cutting off of most of the other markets which have been Holland's best customers, have withheld their customary orders this season, being convinced that the prices asked were not based upon present actual conditions and outlook in Boskoop. The thinking man naturally questions the wisdom of the policy of sending so many men to this country to do the work which might be better done by a small fraction of the number and at a great reduction in the expense which the buyer feels is sure to come out of himself eventually. It is a very grave and even disastrous situation with which the Holland growers and dealers are now confronted, but self-protection demands the exercise of prudent foresight as the only safe course for the American buyer under the circumstances. Unless he can have an agreement that, in the event of reduced quotations later in the season he can have the benefit of the same, then the buyer cannot be blamed if he adopts the conservative course which his judgment dictates. The safest and altogether best plan for all American buyers is to insist on prices being made, freight prepaid, to New York. The foreigner is always able to get a better freight rate than American buyers and it should be up to him, being on the ground, to superintend all such shipments during these perilous times.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Planting Time

Planting time has now arrived in earnest even on the smaller places, and with labor hard to get, no time should be lost in getting the houses planted and ready for another year's work. Do not use any poor plants as it is a big loss in the long run. It will be much better for the pocket book of the man backing the business to buy good plants if those grown at home do not come up to the mark. There are times when even with the best of care a lot of plants will become pot-bound and will not have a very good color. These plants are not poor though, for no sooner are they planted than they will begin to grow very fast. With prices always growing smaller and the cost of labor, etc., always climbing, it is necessary to keep the houses producing so that there will be no idle benches at any time. Grow the plants in four-inch pots if at all possible. With good culture and care in syringing and watering, these plants can be grown so as to cut even before they are planted, and after careful planting in the benches, will begin to cut more and more.

Depth of Soil in the Benches

Every grower has his own idea as to the proper depth of soil in the benches but with us we find that the less we can use the better. Three inches, with four as the limit, is plenty with our way of growing. This does not mean three inches of loose soil which when packed would not give the plants any space to root in, but three inches of well firmed soil. It is a great saving in many ways not to use too much soil. In the first place it takes about half the sod that it would were the benches heaped full, which means a great saving there. Then comes the wheeling in and then wheeling out. The less soil in the benches the sooner this work can be done, and the quicker the work is done the smaller the expense. Then when the roses are growing we find it much better to have their roots well confined as they are then much easier to handle. Too much soil is the cause of many a Beauty bench running blind all the time, with stems running along thirty or forty feet. Were the roots confined as they should be this would not be so apt to happen. With less soil in the benches, more can always be added towards spring when the plants need it, in the form of mulch whereas were the benches filled top full, none can be taken away in the winter should it happen to be a very dark one. The plants will also dry out much better in the winter if less soil is used, thus giving the grower an opportunity to give the plants more water, and the oftener the benches can be watered the better they will grow.

Building New Benches

Here and there new benches will have to be put up and a word or two on these will not be out of place. All joints should be painted if it is not possible to paint all the "two by fours" and boards. Care in driving nails will keep the benches from decay a great deal too. The less nails used the better. It is quite unnecessary to put two nails into a board wherever it crosses a cross piece. With good cross pieces, two nails ought to hold a sixteen-foot board in place, and they do not have to be twenties either, for eight-penny nails are long enough. It will not be necessary to use galvanized nails as the common wire nails will last as long as the boards and that is all that is necessary. One very important item is the drainage, or the space between the boards. When the plants are grown on the small amount of soil plan, the spaces between boards should not be more than half an inch, with one quarter to three eighths as the standard. This will be plenty of drainage unless there is a bench that is shaded badly, when more drainage will have to be given. Nothing is gained by leaving spaces an inch or more as these wide spaces only let a lot of earth through, making a great deal of extra work in cleaning it out from under the benches. It is hardly possible to keep only four inches of soil in the bench with such wide spaces for drainage as the watering will wash much of the soil right through, leaving the roots exposed to the air, which does them very little good and often a great deal of harm. In buying lumber be sure to order such as will fit the benches without much waste. Boards four, eight, twelve and sixteen feet long can be used without much cutting, giving preference to the latter, as the work of building can be done much quicker and it is easier to keep track of the lumber when it arrives. Narrow strips of one-ply roofing put between the cross pieces and the bottom of the bench, will shed the water away from the two-by-fours and thus make them last much longer. These should be wide enough to allow the edges to be bent down a little so that the water will run off.

Syringing

Care should be taken not to have the plants dry when syringing. It will not hurt to water late in the afternoon, especially if the steam pipes are kept hot at night, so that there will be no excuse for not having the plants wet enough for the syringing day. The sun is very strong now and it will not take much to burn the leaves. It will not hurt the plants to be a little wet, as they will dry out fast enough if they are old plants and growing freely and the young plants can be syringed so that hardly any water is thrown on the benches. Use plenty of pressure and use an open hose if possible. It will save the leaves, and save many a length of hose, for most nozzles are hose bursters. With an open hose the work can be done very quickly so that it will not take any more water, neither will it be necessary to soak the whole house if care is taken and the one syringing keeps moving. The old way of standing in one place a long time while syringing is a little out of date. The quicker the work is done the better.

INTERNATIONAL GARDEN CLUB FLOWER SHOW

The first attempt at an outdoor floral exhibition by the International Garden Club at Pelham Bay Park, N. Y. last week was a very creditable affair for a starter. Pelham Bay Park is the property of the City of New York but the grounds comprising thirty-five acres and the historic Bartow Mansion have been leased to the International Garden Club which has undertaken to beautify the grounds, establish trial gardens, hold frequent exhibitions in tents and in the open, to promote the preservation of our native flora and to develop by example and practice correct plant knowledge and a better style of gardening in the United States. The old manor house, at the time of the Garden Club's start in spring of last year was in a very dilapidated condition. It has been thoroughly repaired and put in fine condition for the purposes of a club house and much substantial work has been done on the grounds already including a spacious sunken parterre with fountain and pool, and which is kept bright with successive plantings of bulbs, annuals and hardy perennial material. From the start A. Herrington has taken a deep interest in the work of development and has acted in the capacity of advisory superintendent, James Macgregor being gardener. Improvement will be carried on steadily and the list of society patrons given in the program for the recent show would seem to give assurance that there will be no lack of money. A nursery has already been started and among the features to be introduced right away is a rose garden 300 x 300 and nothing will be spared to make it, if possible, the finest in this country. A range of greenhouses will be erected later on. The estate has a very interesting history, dating back to early colonial days and the royal grants by which the Pell family came into possession of this beautiful estate. The little family burial ground with its crudely chiseled gravestones is preserved as one of the most interesting antiquities of this section.

The prize schedule for last week's exhibition contained the names of some twenty-five national or local societies and clubs as co-operating. The competition for the very liberal prizes offered was not as great as had been expected, the busy season undoubtedly preventing many from entering. There were many classes with no entries. The principal displays were made under a series of tents, the character of which is shown in the accompanying illustrations. The outdoor department, with the exception of the fine collections of conifers, bays, clipped boxwoods and hedge plants, was insignificant but the groups under the tents were of high character, beautifully arranged and, because of the favoring moist and pure air, the plants and flowers retained their freshness until the close of the fourth day to a degree that would not be possible in an ordinary exhibition hall. Without a doubt next year's affair will be bigger and better and the year following will show a still greater advance as plans are shaped and permanent improvements materialize.

Among the special features of last week's meeting were addresses by Geo. V. Nash on the "Bog Garden," A. P. Saunders on "Peonies," Geo. D. Pratt on "Conservation," Judge Alton B. Parker and others.

TO PRESERVE OUR NATIVE FLORA.

Leaflet No. 27 of the Society for the Protection of Native Plants.

We have no new message this year, but we want to remind our members of our bed-rock conviction that very many flowers of each species must be allowed to go to seed if our woods, fields, and roadsides are to retain the loveliness of wild-flower growth, and that the existence, even, of the rarer species is threatened by our careless picking. Cultivation and building necessarily restrict the areas where wild flowers can flourish, and we must endeavor to give them the best chance of holding their own in the places which are left to them.

Even when all this country was wild, the Indian, with keen and unspoiled powers of observation, had an instinctive feeling that flowers should not be ruthlessly destroyed, but should be enjoyed in their natural surroundings.

The following passages are quoted from "The Indian Today," written by Dr. Charles A. Eastman, a descendant of the Sioux tribe, who bears the Indian name Ohiyesa. He lived among his own people during his boyhood, so that he possesses both by inheritance and experience the idealistic philosophy of the Indian people.

"In his sense of the æsthetic, which is closely akin to religious feeling, the American Indian stands alone.

"In accord with his nature and beliefs, he does not pretend to imitate the inimitable, or to reproduce exactly the work of the Great Artist. The Indian did not paint nature, not because he did not feel it, but because it was sacred to him. He so loved the reality that he could not venture upon the imitation. That which is beautiful must not be trafficked with, but must be only revered and adored. It must appear in speech and action. The symmetrical and graceful body must express something of it. Beauty, in his eyes, is always fresh and living, even as God Himself dresses the world anew at each season of the year. . . . This is the spirit of the original American. He holds nature to be the measure of consummate beauty, and its destruction as sacrilege. . . . I have seen in our midsummer celebration cool arbors built of fresh-cut branches for council and dance halls, while those who attended decked themselves with leafy boughs, carrying shields and fans of the same, and even making wreaths for their horses' necks.

"But, strange to say, they seldom made a free use of flowers. I once asked the reason of this. 'Why,' said one, 'the flowers are for our souls to enjoy; not for our bodies to wear. Leave them alone, and they will live out their lives and reproduce themselves as the Great Gardener intended. He planted them: we must not pluck them, for it would be selfish to do so.'

NEW YORK STATE FAIR.

The sixty-seventh annual fair will be held at Syracuse on Sept. 11 to 16, 1916. Department I is devoted to flowers and pot plants, for which 170 prize classes have been provided, the premiums offered in the preliminary schedule totalling $2,536.75. Charles S. Wilson is the commissioner in charge and David Lumsden, of Ithaca, will act as superintendent. Judging will begin on Monday, Sept. 11. Sept. 2 is the day for the closing of entries. In most of the classes 1st, 2nd and 3rd premiums are offered. For collection and display of roses $100.00, $50.00 and $25.00 are offered. In the plant section there are some equally attractive prizes; in fact the amounts offered are liberal all through and we advise our readers to send for a copy of the schedule and make a try for some of the "mazuma."

A ROSE GARDEN FETE.

One of the notable events of this week was the opening to the public, on Thursday afternoon, of Admiral Aaron Ward's beautiful rose garden at Willowmere, Roslyn, L. I., N. Y. E. H. Wilson, the explorer and plant collector of Arnold Arboretum, Boston, lectured on the history of the Rose and its evolution through hybridization. The affair was under the patronage of Mrs. Robert Bacon, chairman of the American Committee of the American Ambulance Hospital, and a number of the leading society ladies of New York. The proceeds of the lecture and the bazaar will be devoted to the American Ambulance Hospital in Paris.

Clyde L. Wilkins, of Wilton, who was appointed this week Maine State horticulturist, is one of the youngest state officials. He is only 24, but has been assistant horticulturist during most of the administration of Commissioner Guptill. Mr. Wilkins is a son of Wilbur W. Wilkins, a farmer of Wilton, who carries on an orchard, where the young horticulturist got his first insight into the science. Young Wilkins graduated from Wilton Academy in 1912, and then studied for two years at the University of Maine, following which he was principal of the High School in Liberty. While at college he helped pay his expenses by milking the University cows.

Change of Dates of the Peony Exhibition.

On account of the lateness of the season the Peony Exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society scheduled for June 10 and 11 will be postponed to Saturday and Sunday, June 17 and 18.

WILLIAM P. RICH, Sec.

The June meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held Monday, June 12th. Important business is coming before the meeting.

The Annandale (N. Y.) Rose Show will be held on Tuesday, June 13, and Wednesday, June 14 (Commencement Day of St. Stephen's College).

The annual Peony Exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday and Sunday, June 17 and 18. Peonies are liberally provided for in the prize schedule, as are also rhododendrons, irises and hardy herbaceous flowers.

The Dalton (Mass.) Horticultural Society, which has just been formed, will hold an exhibition at the Y. M. C. A. building Aug. 25 and 26, and all persons intending to exhibit must fill out the blank furnished, not later than Aug. 21, and return it to the chairman, W. S. Dunn, manager of Flintstone farm.

Rutland, Vt., will see at least two flower shows this season, as the Garden Club plans to hold one this month and one in August, in which all of the nature and flower lovers of the city are asked to compete. The Garden Club desires first of all to beautify the city and the grounds of the various residences and to accomplish this it is offering these shows as an incentive. A peony show will be held this month, probably the last

A NEW EXOCHORDA.

Exochorda Giralddii Wilsonii. The Chinese Pearl Bush (Exochorda racemosa) has long been a familiar and much admired shrub in many American gardens on account of its showy racemes of large pure white flowers. Old specimens assume an open and not a very attractive habit, and lose much of their early beauty. The variety (E. Giralddii) which was discovered by Wilson in western China and named for him, although in its native country it is a wide-spreading shrub, in cultivation here grows like a tree with a single straight stem and comparatively short branches which form a narrow pyramidal head. The flowers are much larger than those of the old-fashioned Pearl Bush, and this new introduction promises to be a better garden plant. It is now well established in the Arboretum where several plants are now in flower, and in other Massachusetts gardens. The Chinese Exochorda is best known as E. grandiflora, but the older and correct name is E. racemosa. E. macrantha, an interesting hybrid between the Chinese E. racemosa and E. Korolkowii from central Asia, is in flower. The flowers and foliage resemble those of the Chinese plant but the branches, like those of its Turkestan parent, are much more upright in growth. Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Obituary

Jonathan Nash.

A black-bordered card bearing the foregoing words has reached us. There are many connected with the flower business, ourselves included, who will feelingly subscribe to the sentiment carried by this brief but expressive announcement. Following so closely on the death of John Kral, who was head salesman for Moore, Hentz & Nash, the news of Mr. Nash's passing away when his convalescence was seemingly assured came as a stunning blow to the florist trade of New York City. Mr. Nash was born in Essex, England, in 1853. He came to this country 22 years ago and one year later entered the employ of the New York Cut Flower Company, afterwards becoming one of the firm of Moore, Hentz & Nash, wholesale florists. He was a gentleman of kindly disposition and unsullied character, an able and broad-minded business man, and his passing away is a great loss to the business he so faithfully followed.

The funeral was held at Grace Church on May 29 and a large representation of every department of the business was present. The pall bearers were Messrs. F. L. Moore and Henry Hentz, Jr., his business partners; C. L. Roberts and John Pritchard, representing the Bedford Floral Co.; Jos. Millang, representing the N. Y. Cut Flower Co., and Mr. Tanner, representing the retail trade. The employees of the firm also followed the pall bearers. Burial was at Woodlawn cemetery. There were many beautiful floral tributes, including a wreath from the clerks and salesmen and a blanket of lilies of the valley with cat-tleyas sent by the firm. Lily of the valley was Mr. Nash's favorite flower ever since the evening long ago when the young lady who afterwards became his bride wore these flowers at a regimental ball given by the Essex Yeomary, of which Mr. Nash was a member. Other tributes were a design in American Beauty roses from the directors of the New York Cut Flower Co., a wreath of orchids from Traendly & Schenck, a design in roses from the Bedford Floral Co. and a quantity, worth of orchids from the Grace Church Flower Association. After the funeral service many of the flowers were distributed among the poor and sick in Grace Church parish. Mr. Nash is survived by his widow, a daughter and three sons, one of the latter, A. S. Nash, being now associated with the firm.

James McBride.

The body of James McBride, a landscape gardener, who had not been seen since last Tuesday, was found in bed at his home on Kenoza avenue, Haverhill, Mass., by Frank Whitehouse of the fire department and Motor Cycle Policeman Joseph U. Ryan, who broke into the house. Medical Examiner John F. Croston found memoranda from Boston brokers which would indicate that Mr. McBride owned a large amount of valuable stock.

WRONG IMPRESSIONS ABOUT GLADIOLUS GROWING.

My attention has been called to an article in the Country Gentleman on the growing of gladiolus bulbs and what is as a crop for farmers. Some of the statements about profits are made. What is the truth about it? E. F. G.

The many well-known and some of the newest varieties of Gladioli are beautiful and valuable to grow in the home garden, and the cultivation of them should be encouraged for several reasons. They are easy to grow, and bulbs of such varieties as America, Mrs. Francis King, and many others are very moderately priced. The flowers are delicate yet showy, and when cut keep a long time in water. In the article referred to by E. F. G., the farmer is urged to plant them commercially, and a gross profit of $4,000 per acre is mentioned on Panama. The farmer is advised to plant fourth size bulbs, which are said to produce good to high grade flowers, and additional bulbs.

A Gladiolus bulb of one-half to three-quarters inch would not be bought by any florist to use for cut flower purposes, as it will produce a small flower that would be practically unsalable on the wholesale markets, which is proven by the tens of thousands that were thrown out on the New York market the past two seasons. The finest America and Mrs. Francis King often did not bring $1 per 100 in New York the past season, and these flowers were grown from bulbs averaging 1½ to 2½ inches in diameter. The small half-inch bulb is used for growing a larger sized bulb for flowering purposes the following season.

If you buy 1,000 large, or small, half-inch bulbs they will each produce one bulb for the next season's use and a number of small corms which require four years' growth to reach the large flowering size. The bulbs should be planted early in the spring, and in order to grow a good strong bulb from the half-inch size, the flower should either be left on the plant or be cut without a stem, as all the leaves should be left on the bulb to mature it properly. Thorough cultivation must be given to the end of the growing season. Figure just about how much you think it will cost you to weed and cultivate a lot of Gladioli, from early spring to the first frost. I feel sure you will find it cheaper to buy bulbs than to try to grow them.

I have purchased this winter for forcing largest size America and Mrs. Francis King at $5 per 1,000 from a grower who planted 30,000 the past season and did not make expenses. A neighbor florist who has been growing 50,000 each season has sold a large proportion of his stock for the same reason. He intends growing some of the newer varieties for a few seasons, such as Panama, Peace, Augusta, and several others. Salesmen from Holland have been offering large lots of America, small size, as low as $1.50 per 1,000.

Any farmer before going into this business should arrange for an outlet for his flowers, as I know of instances where such growers have gone to large commission houses, to find them so overloaded by regular, all-the-year consignors that they said they could not possibly handle any more stock. I was told of a young woman who went to a large Philadelphia commission house and begged them to sell gladioli for her. When told they could not possibly handle any, she began crying, and mentioned a number of other sources of outlet she had tried to no avail, and stated she read in some paper what a fortune there was in the business. It is indeed unfortunate that horticultural papers should allow such articles in their columns without investigation. The paper that protects its subscribers against such visionary schemes for money-making, as does The R. N.-Y. is of inestimable value and deserves a boost by every reader.—Elmer J. Weaver in Rural New Yorker.

Seedsmen wishing to send seeds to the Argentine Republic should conform to certain requirements, which as stated by the Consul General of the Argentine Republic at New York City are, that the seed grower must make an affidavit before a notary public, the notary public attaching his jurat and official seal, stating that the seeds are free from diseases. A similar affidavit should be obtained from the county clerk and both certificates or affidavits sent to the Consul General of the Argentine Republic at New York City for certification, the fee for which is $2.00.

CURTIS NYE SMITH.

Best Single Century: Ami Barillet, Fringed 20th Century, Rose Pink Century, Sensation, Setting Sun, White Century.

BREEDING FOR NOVELTIES

There is a popular fallacy in the recommendation, first, that Gladiolus should be crossed with IRIDOPSIS to produce striking novelties, and second, that strikingly aberrant forms be selected and bred, several crosses to produce abnormalities be used in breeding.

There is no doubt that seed gives average commercial product is desired, but exactly wrong if the object is rapid improvement of a specific kind. Extreme variations when they first appear are very apt to be accompanied by weakness and a faulty constitution, but these can be bred out by proper crossing, and the unique quality, otherwise unattainable, superposed on a robust and vigorous habit.

Experts in heredity estimate that each parent transmits about one-seventh of its own peculiar qualities to its offspring; for example, if two whites, each the offspring of colored sorts, were mated, about two-sevenths of the seedlings would show a decided tendency to whiteness. Mating these whites together should produce whiteness in a little over half the grandchildren, and so with other qualities. Nearly all our finest kinds have a long line of robust ancestors, and so reversion to robustness comes easily by crossing with a robust mate. Often it is the weaklings that show the highest development of some desired character, and this character is precious, because it can be fixed upon a robust constitution by repeated crossing.

For example, suppose we wish to produce a pure white, with flowers six inches across, of great substance, and borne on stems six feet high. Mating average normal "near-whites" would never get it, but if we mate the purest white, say a weak sort like Europa, with the tallest and most robust near-white, like Queen of Europe, and the resulting tallest and most robust near-whites back to Europa, and if necessary, repeat the operation, if we use enough material, we will certainly get seedlings as white as Europa and with the vigor of the others; and proper selection and intercrossing of these would in the end give what we want. Following this plan for only two generations has given me a strain coming mostly white with some as white as Europa and about 1½ inches across the flower, on strong stems, and some nearly white, large-flowered, and six feet high, and, of course, the work is only begun.

If a breeder gets a seedling with some unique and desirable character, but otherwise worthless, it is merely a matter of time and patient and judicious crossing to impose that character upon a robust and satisfactory variety, but he must make up his mind as to what he wishes to accomplish, keep track of his pedigrees (approximately, at least), and be willing to persevere through several generations in order to attain his ideal.

Baltimore, Md.—A mess hall and kitchen for Camp Conoy, recently purchased by the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. on South river, near Edgewater, has been given by Charles J. Bolgiano as a memorial to his mother. The hall will be 25 by 52 feet, and will contain an up-to-date kitchen and pantry, as well as dining-room for 150 boys. Mr. Bolgiano will have the building erected in four days, and a large force of carpenters will be taken to the scene to rush the work. It will cost about $1200. It is proposed to develop this into the finest camp for boys near any big city in the country. The site is an ideal one, hallowed by memories of Indian tribes.

BOSTON.

Joseph Dowd, recently with Thomas F. Galvin, New York, has been transferred to the Boston store of the corporation.

Silverman, of Winter street, has purchased two new auto trucks, one of which will be sent to the New London store and the other kept for delivery service in Boston.

The grounds at Holm Lea, Prof. C. S. Sargent's estate in Brookline, were open for the public to visit on Saturday and Sunday, June 10 and 11. The rhododendrons, irises and many other June flowering subjects were never more attractive here than they are this season.

The Polish wire-workers of Boston walked out on their employers only to return when an eight per cent. raise and Saturday afternoons were conceded to them. With the 200 per cent. increase in price of copper wire and the eight per cent. increase in wages florists' wire frames will soon go sailing.

The annual exterior plant decoration on the Wm. Filene building is exceptionally unique and interesting this year. Window boxes filled with geraniums and Japan maples, form the basis of the decoration scheme and streamers of English ivy and other trailers make a decidedly pleasing picture. John D. Twombly, of Winchester, attends to this work each year.

Mayor Curley last Monday announced the withdrawal of the name of John H. Dillon, to be chairman of the Park and Recreation Commission. Dillon's name was before the Civil Service Commission for reappointment, but a week ago he was subjected to an attack by the Good Government Association, which branded him as inefficient and in other ways undesirable. The Civil Service Commission had planned a public hearing on the appointment. The Mayor declares that Dillon will continue to hold office and that confirmation of a reappointment is not necessary. He charges that Secretary Bottomly, of the Good Government Association, is attempting to play politics and that a short time ago Bottomly opposed public hearings for appointments.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The florists of Providence and other sections of Rhode Island turned out 77 strong in the "preparedness" parade in Providence last Saturday, which proved the greatest civic demonstration ever witnessed here. Robert Johnston was marshal of the Florists' Division and his aids were Alexander Macrae and Maxwell Villar. The firms represented in the division included the following: Nelson W. Aldrich estate, Johnston Brothers, William Appleton, T. R. Peterson, M. Sweeney, O. H. Williams & Sons, Westminster Greenhouses, S. H. Toher & Sons, Joseph Koppleman & Company, Smith the Florist, William Bowers, Lawrence Hay, William Hay, T. O'Connor, Willis S. Pino, George Johnson & Son, John A. Macrae, Alfred M. Powell, R. J. Taylor, E. E. Howard, Francis Luther, Thomas Mack and V. Bernarducci. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the Florists' Division were Robert Johnston (chairman), James Dillon, Mrs. I. Dickinson, William H. O'Connor, Lawrence Hay, Alexander Macrae and Herbert West. S. A. G.

Baldwinville, Mass.—Frank Cogswell of New Salem has purchased two 100-ft. greenhouses here and will engage in cucumber forcing.

CHICAGO.

Some big orders are going out today for the Billings-Nickless wedding. Both church and house will be profusely decorated, the former banked with peonies and lilies against cibotiums, and the latter calling for quantities of roses. C. A. Samuelson has the greater share of the orders judging from the way his buyer was picking up stock.

August Poehlmann does not share the opinion of many that the American Beauty is declining in value as a commercial flower but only wishes that their 18 houses devoted to this flower, numbered 36 instead. Orchid plants are coming from this firm's collector in South America and another collector is now working in the Philippines. It is between seasons for cutting but the gigas are doing exceptionally well and the cool spring favors a fine crop soon.

"Preparedness" was celebrated to such an extent June 3rd that local florists missed a large part, and in some cases nearly all of their Saturday trade. With all the other lines of business suspended, it would be little trade outside of funeral and wedding orders that would come to them and many closed their stores at noon. When "old glory" is in every conspicuous place possible, even flowers are forgotten for the time. Some of the down-town florists had appropriate window decorations.

May covered a range of 50 degrees temperature with less sunshine than normal. The month was cold and windy and shrubbery was in bloom but a few days. Outdoor tulips were blown to pieces almost as soon as they opened. The prolonged season has been a decided help to the plantsmen and nurserymen. Bedding stock is in unusually good demand and the quality generally excellent.

Peterson's Nurseries and the Geo. Wittbold Co. generously gave of their time and material in the decorations of the Blackstone Theatre where the Woman's Congressional Union lunches their party this week. The entire stage is crossed twice, low in the front and high in the back, by a white lattice with clinging vines, and the effect is very striking. At either end and in the hotel parlors are masses of hydrangea plants.

PHILADELPHIA.

Dennis T. Connor, of the Lord & Burnham Co., has recovered from his serious illness and went on duty again June 1st.

Commodore John Westcott's club opening at Waretown is scheduled for the 23rd inst. The invitations are not out yet and who the lucky ones are to be this year is not yet known.

The Stafford Flower Farms (Edward A. Stroud, prop.) devoted to the culture of carnations and doing also a local florists' business, have been leased by Alfred M. Campbell.

Charles Sim has been suffering from a severe attack of asthma and bronchitis the past few weeks. He left on June 8th for a short vacation. The sea breezes at Atlantic City ought to do him good.

OUT OF THE GINGER JAR.

Our old friend Duncan McCaw, late of Craig's and now on his own at Norwood, flashed a new delivery auto into town the other day and nearly blinded us all with its splendor. It's even got a coat of arms—besides the name and address of the firm—on the outside. And the motto: "Virtus coronat opus" (merit crowns the work)—"that's going some," isn't it? If Duncan dares to send in anything but first-class stock on that wagon, we are justified in shooting holes in the motto—and can say for ourselves "Vincit omnia veritas" (truth conquers all things). Gwan with your old Latin, Duncan; Give us some Gaelic. G. C. W.

PITTSBURGH.

David Fraser, supt. of H. C. Frick's Pittsburgh estate, spent a few days in New York last week.

Mrs. James M. McGrew is convalescing in Columbia Hospital after an operation for appendicitis. Mr. McGrew is head salesman for G. P. Weaklin & Co. Miss Helen Ingraham has been added to the sales staff of the same firm.

William A. Clarke of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., with Mrs. Clarke, will be in the party of 180 Pittsburghers leaving next Tuesday to attend the Knights Templar Conclave at Los Angeles. Their intention is to be absent one month.

Owing to an unusual scarcity of laboring men, landscape work is proving somewhat of a disappointment. The orders for this work have been unusually large in numbers and dimensions, and if possible to carry out as was originally intended and expected, would have far more than compensated for any previous dearth of work in this line. As it is, however, the spring season of 1916 will long be remembered as a red-letter era in landscape architecture and gardening.

J. H. SMALL & SONS' NEW FLOWER STORE

A glance at the picture which we use as a cover illustration this week will perhaps give a much better idea of this palatial floral establishment than any wordy description that we may try to give, particularly as to dimensions and various statistics, which really count for but little. Messrs. Small & Sons feel that they have in this new place at 52nd street and Madison Ave., New York, the finest retail flower emporium on the continent and we are inclined to agree with them. Certainly they have the space and accessories for every department of the work and in decorative effect and artistic impression it would seem there is nothing more that could be added. The place is indeed an exhibition in itself and an object lesson in its daily-changed arrangement, in decorative art, where simplicity and elegance give expression to refined taste in everything that can make a leading metropolitan flower store worthy of the name.

Flower Market Reports

Monday, June 5, was a BOSTON record day on wedding decorations among the retail florists. Penn alone reports 29 affairs on that day. While the retailers are thus rushed with business the wholesale markets are lying in a state of coma, due to the fact that the growers are shipping in more stock than the market can possibly use, especially snapdragon and sweet peas, and there is practically no sale for them. The stores are clamoring for Hadley, Ophelia and Ward roses, however, for these colors are most popular for graduations and receptions. Lily of the valley has come into its own again, for this month at any rate, and is still a prime favorite for wedding bouquets. This week will see the last of the outdoor crop of lily of the valley. Cattleyas are plentiful and are being sold in goodly numbers. Marguerites are moving fairly well. Darwin tulips are shortening up. Lilies and callas lie inert. Long American Beauties are in better shape than the short lengths, but neither are selling heavily.

Stock for Memorial Day BUFFALO was not scarce—at least on Monday and Tuesday. A few days prior more stock could have been used to advantage, especially carnations, but there was an enormous supply of tulips, lily of the valley, and a lot of other outdoor material, and indications pointed toward a record-breaking Memorial Day business. But there was too much rain, and too many lilacs which come at this time had a tendency to lessen the sales of indoor material. Some peonies were handled, but there was no demand whatever and the supply on everything else was heavy. Following Memorial Day there was an oversupply on all lines and the demand was very light on everything. Rain storms galore and no speculative buying caused the market to fill up heavily and on Saturday bargain signs unloaded only a portion of the heavy receipts.

The first week of June CHICAGO has been one in which few in the trade have found profits large. Business has been very erratic. Some days, especially parade day, sales were few and the curbstome merchants did business at the "two dozen for a quarter" rate in roses and carnations. There was an accumulation of stock very hard to move to advantage. Shipping trade which always uses up most of the best grades of stock has suffered somewhat from the strike and the commencements are hardly yet in order. Local demand is confined mostly to funeral work and weddings, the latter reported by some downtown retailers to be aggregating well. Social events connected with the political conventions are also using up some of the best stock. Probably the number of corsages seen on the streets is the main floral feature of the week, orchids being the favorite. There is any amount of all kinds of flowers coming in daily and buyers can be assured of getting anything their trade demands at moderate cost.

Business last week CINCINNATI was fairly good but this week has shown a decided falling off. The supply is very heavy and there is only a weak demand for it. As far as quality is concerned the best stock is a limited number of summer roses. American Beauties, certain carnations, gladioli, lilies and outdoor sweet peas. All are plentiful. Lily of the valley, snapdragon, corn flower, coreopsis and water lilies are all excellent and in fair supply. New ferns and wild smilax are meeting with a good call.

The wholesale market of this metropolis for the past week and more has not been a market but an exhibition. Never before have so many flowers been seen here at one time as one sees piled high on the tables and in the windows of the wholesale district this present week. The quantity sent in daily is apparently limitless; the quantity legitimately sold is negligible. Scores—possibly hundreds—of push-carts are to be seen on the streets, heaped high with carnations and peonies mainly, with placards bearing the price "flowers 1 cent each." Besides the avalanche of peonies and carnations there are exposed on the sales counters of the wholesalers untold quantities of sweet williams, coreopsis, irises, pyrethrus, lilies, stocks, centaureas, sweet peas, etc., not to mention the roses in all varieties and all grades which encumber the cellars and refrigerators waiting for a purchaser. Cattleyas have suddenly taken a downward plunge, too, and Mossias are at 10c. are easy to find. American Beauty roses have stiffened up and if good, will bring a good figure. The yellow daisy market, normally excellent, has been completely broken up by heavy consignments from Boston where this crop is a specialty with a number of growers. The conditions above described are regarded as only temporary and as soon as the peonies are through improved conditions are confidently looked for.

Since Memorial PHILADELPHIA Day trade here has been fairly brisk but the supply of flowers has been greatly in excess of what the market could absorb. This was especially the case with peonies of which the supply was ten times the demand. Of course this redundancy in the peony had a more or less depressing effect on all other lines. In the rose market Beauties and Hadley sell best. Other roses are very sluggish. Carnations are much more plentiful and prices have dropped considerably. There is a fair cut of orchids and the call for them is excellent. Cattleyas are especially good and come in very nicely for the June girl requirements, along with red roses. The delphinium and the gladiolus continue in good supply and of excellent quality with the demand very good, all things considered. Coreopsis has made its appearance and will no doubt find some sale while the novelty lasts.

The prices, supply and demands for cut flowers are considered fair for this season all around since Decoration Day. There are plenty of carnations and peonies, although at time of writing there is not an over supply of roses. Of the latter, the long-stemmed grades predominate, although the short-stemmed flowers are now coming in better than for some time.

An abundance of stock at very moderate prices dominates the market conditions here at present. The retailers report much trading and no complaints are made because of poor business. With the usual number of weddings and the summer graduation of schools and other institutions at hand the florists here predict that the present month will be exceptionally busy. White orchids were a prohibitive flower last week. Failing to get any of this stock from the leading growers in New England and New York, it became necessary to purchase in the Boston retail market.

While Memorial Day business was not as good as the year previous everybody is satisfied, but they say that more business could have been done had it not been for the boosting of prices by the wholesalers for this day. On the night after the bottom dropped out again. Retailers found that the public would not stand for the sudden rise in price. They bought heavy in the plant line. The market had been crowded up all week with good stock and low prices except on Memorial Day. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, cape jessamine, peonies and a lot of outdoor stock are in abundance and trade somewhat slow.

Albany, N. Y.—All the florists here are booked to participate in the "preparedness" parade which will take place on Wednesday, June 14. Another matter in which the trade and the Florists' Club especially are actively promoting is that of the presentation of bouquets to the school graduates, one bouquet to accompany each diploma. Thos. Tracey is chairman of a committee to wait upon the Board of Education to urge favorable action on this proposition.

A NEW WHOLESALE FLOWER HOUSE.

David Welch and Edward J. Welch announce that they have severed connection with the corporation of Welch Bros. Co. and have opened their wholesale flower market at 280 Devonshire street, Boston, under the title of Welch's. It is hardly necessary for us to say here that HORTICULTURE wishes Messrs. David and E. J. Welch abundant success in their new enterprise. Their whole business life has been spent in the wholesale flower and supply trade and their record is one of industry and integrity. The new headquarters which they have acquired is admirably adapted for their

NEW BOOK

JUST ISSUED

Plant Propagation Greenhouse
and Nursery PracticeBy
M. G. KAINS

So many discoveries of new facts by plant investigators, shortcuts and "wrinkles" worked out by plant propagators, and nursery, greenhouse and garden methods simplified or made more effective, have made books hitherto available on plant propagation out of date.

There has also been an insistent call for a volume that would not only include the character of information wanted by nurserymen and other plant propagators, but also discuss the subject of plant propagation from the standpoint of fundamental principles, and include the latest conclusions advanced by investigators throughout the world.

This new book by Professor Kains will appeal with equal force to the amateur, the professional propagator, and the teacher in agricultural colleges and schools.

The book devotes many pages to special plant lists and condensed directions for propagation of vegetables, fruits, annual and perennial flowers, bulbs, ferns, orchids, cacti, evergreens, deciduous trees and shrubs, vines, water plants, greenhouse and house plants and palms.

The table of contents includes: An introduction on general principles, germination, seed testing, potting, layerage, bottom heat, cuttage, choices of cuttings, graftage, and theories and laws, Daniel's experiments in graftage, tree stocks and stem handling, grafting waxes and wound dressing, methods of grafting considered individually, budding methods, nursery management, and laws affecting nursery stock.

Illustrated 5 1/2 x 7 1/2 inches, 342 pages.
Cloth. Price, net, $1.50.

NEW COTONEASTERS, BERBERIS AND AESCULUS.

Chinese Cotoneasters.

Cotoneasters are shrubs or rarely small trees of the rose family, related to the apples, pears and hawthorns. The genus has long been known in Europe and eastern Siberia, but it is only in recent years that it has been discovered that the largest number of species of these plants grows in China. The first Chinese species was known to botanists as early as 1832; forty-five years passed before another of these Chinese plants was recognized, and it was not until Henry and Wilson began the systematic exploration of the flora of central and western China that any one suspected its richness in these plants. Now forty-eight or fifty Chinese species and well marked varieties are recognized. Of those with deciduous leaves twenty-four are now well established in the Arboretum. Among them are some of the handsomest shrubs in cultivation, and for this climate at least some of the species are perhaps the most valuable shrubs introduced by Wilson. For the embellishment of northern gardens the introduction and successful cultivation of the Chinese Cotoneasters rank in importance with the improvements made in Europe in recent years in the garden lilacs, with the forms of hybrid Philadelphus made by Lemoine, and with the collection of American Hawthorns discovered and raised in the last sixteen years through the activities of the Arboretum. Some of the Chinese Cotoneasters are low shrubs only a few inches high and admirably suited for the decoration of rock gardens; others are large broad bushes eight or ten feet high; and it is not possible to say which of these plants is the best for some of them are better suited for one purpose and some for another. On some species the leaves are small, thick, dark green and very lustrous; on others they are thin and of different shades of green, and of different sizes. On some of the species with thick and lustrous leaves the foliage does not fall until the beginning or middle of winter; that of the larger-leaved species falls late in the autumn, on some species assuming in the fall brilliant shades of orange and scarlet. On some species the flowers are bright red, and white on others, and the lustrous fruit which varies greatly in size is black on some of these plants and red on others. As flowering plants the most beautiful in the Arboretum are C. hupehensis, C. racemiflora, var. soongarica, and C. multiflora, var. calocarpa. These three plants have flowers comparatively large for the genus, about half of an inch in diameter, and bright red shining fruits. The first is a broad, tall and shapely shrub with bright green leaves which will be covered in a few days with flowers which make the plant as conspicuous as any Spiraea. These are followed by small, scarlet fruits which are a good deal hidden by the leaves. C. racemiflora, var. soongarica, is also a large and vigorous shrub; the flowers are a little larger than those of C. hupehensis, the leaves are dull blue-green in color, and the fruit is larger and more showy than that of the last species. C. multiflora, var. calocarpa, is flowering for the first time in the Arboretum. It is a shrub with slender, gracefully arching stems and blue-green leaves. The arching of the stems makes the flowers, which are borne in erect clusters on short lateral branches, conspicuous and there is now in the Arboretum no shrub in flower more graceful in habit or more charming in the arrangement of its flowers. The fruit of this species, judging by specimens collected in China, is abundantly produced: it is scarlet and about a quarter of an inch in diameter. Of the large-growing species with thick lustrous leaves attention is called to C. divaricata with red fruit and C. nitens with black fruit. These species have small, globose red flowers which are now open and are large, fast-growing, hardy shrubs valuable through the summer and autumn on account of their beautiful foliage. None of the species are perhaps so attractive in the autumn as C. foveolata; this is one of the most vigorous of all the species with larger leaves which late in the season turn brilliant orange and scarlet. The flowers of this plant are red and the fruit is black. The best of the dwarf species in this climate is C. horizontalis. This is now the most generally known of the Chinese Cotoneasters, as it was first raised in France forty years ago and has been growing in the Arboretum for more than a quarter of a century. When growing naturally it is a plant not more than two feet high, with wide-spreading branches; it has small, dark green, shining leaves, minute red flowers and small bright red fruit. Here the leaves fall in early winter, but in regions of milder climate they remain on the branches until a new crop appears in the spring. This is an excellent plant for a large rock garden, and in Europe it is often trained to cover low walls, for which purpose it is well suited, although the branches do not naturally attach themselves to stone or brick. C. horizontalis, var. perpusilla is a dwarf form with rather smaller leaves and is equally useful for the rock garden. This variety, Mr. Wilson tells us, is the common Cotoneaster of the moorlands of western Hupeh. C. adpressa, which is the dwarfiest of these plants, is distinguished from C. horizontalis by its thinner and less lustrous leaves, larger fruit which ripens several weeks earlier, and by its creeping and often rooting stems which form a dense carpet closely appressed to the ground. There are few shrubs better suited for the rock garden.

Berberis verruculosa.

An evergreen Barberry discovered by Wilson in western Szechuan, is flowering freely for the first time in the Arboretum. It is a small shrub with slender, arching stems, thickly covered with dark brown excrescences, small oval leaves dark green and very lustrous on the upper surface and pale below, and small golden yellow flowers which are solitary or produced in few-flowered clusters. The berries are black, oblong or bottle-shaped and covered with a glaucous bloom. On its native mountains this barberry is said sometimes to grow three feet tall, but the plants in the Arboretum are only a few inches high. These plants have now been growing for several years on the exposed southern slope of Bussey Hill where they have never been injured. Berberis verruculosa appears to be the hardiest and for this climate it is probably the most valuable of the Chinese evergreen species. The small size and compact habit make it a good subject for the rock garden.

Aesculus discolor.

It is fortunate that the scarlet-flowered variety (var. mollis) of this Buckeye is hardy here, for the flowers are not surpassed in brilliancy by the flowers of any other horsechestnut. On the typical Aesculus discolor the flowers have a red calyx and yellow petals generally more or less flushed with rose. This is a much less common plant than the variety mollis on which both the calyx and the corolla are bright red. This is a very common plant in Georgia and Alabama and ranges west to southeastern Missouri and to eastern Texas. It is the only red-flowered Buckeye which has been found west of the Mississippi river, and it sometimes reaches the size and assumes the habit of a small tree. On the Edwards Plateau in western Texas there is a yellow-flowered form (var. flavescens) which, because it has yellow flowers, was long mistaken by botanists for the Appalachian tree Buckeye, Aesculus octandra. Aesculus discolor and its varieties can be distinguished from the other American species by the soft covering of pale down on the lower surface of the leaflets, and from all species of the genus except Aesculus californica by the pale orange-brown color of the seeds. Aesculus discolor, var. mollis is just coming into flower.

Aesculus georgiana

Which is a native of central Georgia, is covered with its compact clusters of yellow and rose-colored flowers. Perfectly able apparently to support the New England climate, this Buckeye is one of the handsomest and most interesting southern shrubs which the Arboretum has made known and introduced into gardens.

Aesculus Briotii

This French form of the so-called red-flowered hybrid horsechestnut (Aesculus carnea) is in flower in the collection. It is the most brilliantly colored of all the forms of Aesculus carnea, and few trees hardy in this climate bear such showy flowers. It begins to flower when not more than ten feet high; it is perfectly hardy, and it should be seen more generally in American gardens.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

BIG HAIL STORM AT ST. LOUIS.

Hail, wind and a heavy downpour of rain has again visited the St. Louis and vicinity florists causing a loss which will probably total 150,000 feet of glass. This was the second destructive storm within a month. The first one confined itself to the south end of St. Louis but this one took in the county where many of our greenhouse men are located. Some had already repaired the damage done a few days ago and again it hit them hard. Among the heaviest losers this time were H. J. Weber & Sons, Geo. B. Windler, F. J. Fillmore, Wm. Schray & Son, Meuer Bros., John Held, William Kruse, John Walther, Ben Albers, John G. Knoll, Bourdet Floral Co. and the Missouri Botanical Garden. John Held, Meuer Bros and Will Kruse were among those who had reglazed after the recent loss. The great damage was in Kirkwood and Webster where florists are thicker than bees in a hive. W. A. Rowe's loss was the greatest as he got the full force of the storm, especially at the new place, and he estimates his damage at $5,000. A. S. Cerney, O. C. May, Oakland Floral Co., W. J. Pilcher, Hugo & Rudolph Gross, Frank Vennemann, Hootman Bros., Wm. Winter, F. W. Ude, A. F. Kopp, W. J. Edwards John R. Steinecke, Chas. Meier, Phil J. Goebel, Jr., and Deutchmann Bros. also suffered greatly. The Connors Floral Co. and Joe Hauser at Webster Grove, had also a heavy loss. All glass facing the west had no chance to escape breakage. Another great loss was to gladioli in the field. Over half were broken off and bent down by the wind. One of the county florists who made the rounds after the storm estimated the loss in the county to reach $20,000 to florists alone. Many market gardeners along Graviion Road, also the cemeteries, who all have one or more greenhouses, report heavy loss. The daily papers said after the storm that the total loss sustained would reach over the $100,000 mark.

Beverly, Mass.—Owing to the high cost of living, the gardeners along the North Shore, who are paid by the month, have asked for an increase of $5, which would make the wage scale $55 and $60 a month for gardeners employed on routine work. There is a scarcity of labor on the shore, owing to the fact that many Italians who were employed on estates returned to Italy to enter the war some months ago, and a number of them have been killed at the front, according to letters received by friends in this country. In order to get men at some of the estates, $2.75 a day has been offered.

This grapery was erected by us for Mrs. George Wilson of Philadelphia, on her estate at Great Neck—one of fashionable Long Island's most prominent show places.

The JACOBS full iron frame and patented cast iron eaves and sills, together with the removable gutter and leader, make this greenhouse just as perfect in every practical detail as any of the larger structures owned by professional growers.

Herein Lies a Goodly Suggestion For Florists

RECENTLY we furnished a greenhouse for the Forest Hills Gardens, South Richmond, Va. In connection with the photograph they were so courteous as to send us, a letter was enclosed which is so full of interest that we are going to give it here. Perhaps you will to advantage apply its main idea to your business.

This is what it says:

"You will note that the greenhouse is small, but it is the beginning of something larger, and I do want to add a word about our intent in establishing here.

"The original purpose of our undertaking is to grow and supply plants, bedding and conservatory plants for the retail trade in and about Richmond, to supply a long felt need in the establishment of the old gardens and for the creating of new gardens, and window boxes.

"Realizing that in the growing of plants much advertising is gained by attractive setting and displays, our first move was the commissioning of a competent Landscape Designer to arrange our grounds and properly locate the greenhouse.

Part of the Extensive Landscape Plan.

Designed by Chas. E. Gillett, L. A.

& Burnham's. We feel that with a show place there will be a great many more visitors and so we are arranging our grounds with this show place in front; also on the side of the greenhouse where trees, shrubs, plants, and vines are arranged to best advantage, and where people can see how best to use different materials and will want to buy just the things that strike their fancies, for a similar effect in their own gardens. Here we are aiming to introduce in the proper places attractive garden furniture, seats, sun dials, bird baths, etc. From these we hope to get many orders. In the rear of our show grounds we shall grow in cold frames and open fields the plants to supply any one of the effects shown. There will also be added in the rear of the present greenhouse, more strictly commercial houses as our work develops. But we shall always keep a representation displayed in the present house so that buyers need not spend valuable time in looking for what they want in other parts of the houses or grounds."

To which let us add we design, and build greenhouses and have been for over half a century.

THE HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER

A NEW DISCOVERY IN FABRICS

A Material from which Wrinkles Disappear Without Pressing

PROTECT YOUR CLOTHING WHILE AUTOMOBILING OR TRAVELING

HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTERS are made from a new fabric.

The Dusters can be used in the Auto all day, placed upon a hanger at night and all wrinkles will have disappeared in the morning.

This fabric is soft in finish, heavy enough to withstand the hardest usage, yet light in weight and cool. It is linen color and is exceptionally attractive, and as it has been shrunk, the Coats may be washed when necessary, and will look like new.

The Men's Coat is made double breasted, side slashed pockets, sleeve tabs, high collar, finished with attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

The Women's Coat is made with a full skirt, single breasted, patch pockets, and collar that can be buttoned up close to the neck. It is trimmed with very attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED

We guarantee every HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER to be exactly as represented, and if it is not entirely satisfactory when received, it may be returned to us, and we will cheerfully refund the purchase price.

Sizes Both Women's and Men's 34 to 46

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Asparagus plumosus

Now is the time for renewing beds and to give those that are to be carried over a top-dressing of cow manure and soil with a sprinkling of bone meal. When making new beds give plenty of headroom—at least 12 feet. The beds or benches should be prepared as soon as possible. Above all things see that they have a generous soil to grow in—say two parts fibrous loam and one part manure. A layer of eight or nine inches of this compost is none too much for asparagus. The plants should be set 10 to 12 inches apart and 16 to 18 inches between the rows. Thrifty plants, out of 4-inch pots, are the right sort to use. Syringe frequently and see they are kept moist around the roots.

Decorative Plants

A little attention to spacing and sorting into different grades and sizes at frequent intervals will be time well spent. See that spading is not too dense—just enough to cause a hazy light through the plants. Abundant ventilation should therefore be in order. Plants that have become excessively rootbound should now be repotted. Infested plants should be given a thorough cleaning, and sponging, even if not just needed, will be of great benefit. Plants of this class yet on parade in overcrowded show house or narrow quarters should be spread apart, while room in other houses is now unoccupied.

Gladioli

Plantings are made once a fortnight until the middle of July in order to insure a constant succession of flowers. The earliest outdoor planting should now be well above ground and have had one cultivation. The bulbs are set at an average depth of six inches. This keeps the stems more rigid in rain and wind storms. In dry weather give weekly waterings and it is well to plant a batch where the water is handy which can be forced in ahead of the others. Make use of a deeply cultivated soil. You can plant in double rows about 6 inches apart and place the stakes between them.

Rambler Roses

Copious watering and daily heavy syringings must be given the rambler roses. We often get our hottest weather up to the middle of July, and if the tender and unripened shoots suffer for water mildew will set in, which much weakens the growth and the strength of the eyes which will now be forming and from these will come the trusses of blooms next spring. Ramblers grown in pots under glass during summer, by having the pots plunged in a bench where there is some soil will retain the moisture better and by the end of August will have made all the growth desirable and can then be stood outdoors to ripen their wood. After this period they will not want so much water.

Sowing Perennials

Seed sown up to the middle of July will make nice strong plants by the fall. Now that bedding plants are all planted out there will be plenty of room in the frames. Give the soil a coating of manure and dig it over well, breaking all the lumps and raking fine. Draw shallow rows up and down the frame about six inches apart and sow the seed and press the surface over moderately firm. Never let them dry out; evaporation is great at this time. After watering keep them shaded until they start to germinate. Keep them well cultivated and when the seedlings have progressed so they can be handled, transplant to other quarters.

Shading Ferns and Palms

Now is the time to watch ferns and palms in the way of shading. Just give enough of shade to make them hold their color and keep them from burning.

Next week: Adiantums; Violets; Cinerarias; Orchids; Gardenias; Pelargoniums.

Stem Rot in Paeonies

Editor HORTICULTURE.

Dear Sir.—I would like to know if some of your kind readers could tell me what is the cause of the stem rot of paeonies. The stalks rot at the surface of the soil. Also what is a cure of the same?

Respectfully yours,

E. J. B.

The stem rot in paeonies is caused by a fungus. It is distributed by the wind. It causes the stem or bud, or leaves sometimes to turn a yellow brown and decay. No one knows the way to combat it, as yet. I cut the stem off just below the surface of the ground and put it where it will do no further harm. Cut the buds off if affected, and destroy them also. I have had plants so affected be clear of it the next year. But it is said it will live over winter on old affected stalks. It is best to burn up all affected parts if one can.

The power of "pull together"

The sum of $15,507.09 is to be divided equally between the New York Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of New York.

These results of the recent successful flower show in the Grand Central Palace. But a few years ago the boldest optimist would not have presumed to predict such a thing as a possibility. Such are the results of zealous co-operation and well-directed effort on the part of the two factors which are indispensable for the complete success of such an enterprise anywhere. It can safely be said that neither one of the two organizations which participated in this great undertaking and its happy outcome could possibly have done it alone. It was only the gentleness of New York, and results were a result of co-operation and harmony and those kind words are immediately performed were an equally reasonable for this brilliant achievement are well entitled to congratulation and the gratitude of all friends of horticultural prestige. Promoted in the same spirit of hearty concord there is no reason why the success of 1916 may not be repeated or even excelled in each coming year.

Rock gardening

It is "in the air" that rock-gardening is such to play an important part in the art of garden making in this country. One difficulty that is sure to confront and discourage any one trying to do rock-gardening here on the lines which succeed so well in England and some other European countries is that much of the most highly prized alpine material in which the gardener abroad is privileged to revel is really out of the question with us. Yet there is no insurmountable reason why this most fascinating branch of gardening may not be indulged in here and with charming results. We shall find—as we have been finding out in recent years in regard to our shrubbery planting—that there is an abundance of splendid native material which can be brought into effective use and, in association with such exotics as are found tractable, will amply fill the requirements of the most ambitious and exacting planter. There can be no doubt of the growing appreciation of rock-gardens and the interesting classes of plants which find their appropriate setting amid such conditions and surroundings and the nurseryman who will prepare intelligently to meet and supply the special demand that is sure to come will find that he has made no mistake.

Two societies

Practically ever since the florists broke away from the original allied association of nurserymen and florists, thirty-two years ago, there has been a constantly widening divergence in methods and policies and in the avowed purposes and ideals which have shaped the course of the national bodies representing these two interests. While the Association of Nurserymen has been invariably conducted as an exclusively business organization, the S. A. F. has been pursuing a more altruistic course, in which the immediate well-being of the strictly commercial element is not always dominant. In short, the nurserymen have had, for a definite object in maintaining a national organization, the protection and fostering of their business interests, while the S. A. F. and O. H. has chosen to direct its energies in a considerable degree for the promotion of horticultural advancement in a broad sense. During these years the S. A. F. has forged far ahead in numerical and financial strength as compared with the parent organization which, at the time of the separation, came under the undivided control of the nursery people. A perusal of the program for the nurserymen's convention to be held this month in Milwaukee shows a vast amount of preparation for a very busy time and will be interesting to compare it with the one which the S. A. F. will put out shortly for the coming meeting at Houston, Texas. Some of the critics of the S. A. F., who have been persistently endeavoring to relegate that body into the category of strictly commercial organizations might find in the comparison subject for a little second thought. As is generally known the nurserymen are now trying out a new system of membership from which much financial strength and influence is expected. HORTICULTURE extends its very best wishes for an unequivocal success.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Do Not Neglect the Young Plants

With the rush of planting, repairing, building and what not, it is always best to take time to look after the young stock. It is from this that the money will come in for the coming season and, more than that, it will have to furnish wood for plants in the future. It should therefore receive all the care possible to insure strong, healthy vigorous plants. To begin with it is best to have at least twenty-five extra plants for every hundred in two-and-a-quarter in. pots. When these are shifted the plants should be carefully selected and all culls thrown out, thus reducing the number of extras to about ten for every hundred. When the plants are shifted again, the culls or all unpromising plants should be thrown out again, bringing the number of extras to about five. Of course the cuttings must be selected when potting the first time so that the plants will be good nearly all the way through. Then when planting time comes the best plants can be picked out and the remaining poor ones thrown away. With this system there will be plenty of nice plants to start with if they are kept going all the time, and that is why they should not be neglected now. The plants grow very fast now if given a chance, and all that are not to be planted for three weeks or more and are well rooted, had better be put into larger pots unless they are already in the fours, in which case they should be spread a least bit and top dressed with fine bonemeal. In spreading the plants it will be as well not to give them too much room as the pots would dry out too quickly, even though they are sunk about half into the ashes on the bench. With Beauties, the tallest should be staked and tied to keep them from laying all over. Keep free from weeds as these are great robbers of plant food, sun and air. To clean the plants properly, it is best to go over them every so often and pick off all yellow leaves, watching out for spot, remove all weeds and then set the plants on the bench again, being careful to set the taller in the rear or the north side of the bench, and the smaller and weaker on the south side which will give them a better chance to grow, not being shaded by the tall ones as they would be if the plants were all mixed. While cleaning it is well to note any trace of spider or fly, or any other disease that may be about starting in.

Keep the Fires Going

We said the same thing a while ago, and the way the weather has been lately we need not be afraid to repeat it. The nights are very cool and the wet rainy days real chilly, which means mildew unless heat is turned on. A pipe of steam even at low pressure will be of great benefit to the roses, carrying a little air at the same time, which will give the plants fresh warm air to breathe. Sulphur will have to be used quite freely on the pipes as with low pressure they will not be very hot and the sulphur will evaporate very slowly. If a trace of mildew appears here and there a little sulphur mixed with lime and dusted on the plants will help to keep it from spreading. Keep all doors closed all the time and see that everybody does the same. Often a dose of mildew may be traced to an open door, where a few plants got it and it spread all over from them. If the plants have been well cared for, there will be plenty of roses to cut for quite a while yet, and if these can be kept free from mildew they will bring a good price compared to the returns for the mildewed stock. Keep the fires going and keep mildew out.

Spraying Roses

Mr. Arthur C. Ruzicka:

Dear Sir.—From time to time you have recommended for leaf spot, black spot, etc., a spray of ammoniacal copper carbonate. Will you kindly tell how to prepare this for spraying outdoor roses and how often to apply. Will appreciate very much your help.

Yours truly,

A. C.

Answer. To mix this preparation in small quantities take two ounces of copper carbonate and put same into earthen pot, adding enough ammonia to dissolve the copper. When thoroughly dissolving the copper, add the resulting mixture to two gallons of water, mix well, and then apply at once, as the mixture loses strength very fast if left exposed to the air. Unlike applying nicotine, it is best to apply this on a clear day when the ventilators are open at least a little. This gives the ammonia fumes a chance to escape without doing any damage to the plants and flowers. For outside work the mixture can be made a little stronger, using about five pounds of copper carbonate to fifty gallons of water, with enough ammonia to dissolve the copper. It should be applied late in the afternoon, and only to plants that are plenty wet enough at the root, as it will surely burn all that are dry, so that if there has been no rain for a while it will be best to water the plants well in the morning before spraying. The spraying can be done with an ordinary compressed air sprayer, known to me as Auto-Spray, and if you have to buy one to do the work get one with a brass tank. They cost more but last ever so much longer. Where only a few plants are grown they can be sprayed with a small hand sprayer, which is very inexpensive. The spray should be applied as soon as a trace of the spot is found and after as often as is necessary, say once a week under ordinary conditions and oftener if heavy rains follow the spraying. If you will require a great deal of the mixture it may be better to buy it ready mixed as it is not very pleasant work to make it. The spray is no cure-all by any means, but it will help to keep the spot from spreading and by giving careful culture the plants can be grown out of it.

Obituary

William F. Kastling

That it was the death of a friend, a comrade, a partner in the struggle for the betterment of the Society of American Florists. We are inexpressively shocked and grieved as will be thousands of others who knew and loved "Billy" Kastling. Particulars of his sudden death have not yet reached us.

In the year 1884 when 14 years of age, Wm. F. Kastling came to this country a lonely German emigrant boy. He drifted into the greenhouse business in Erie, Pa., and in 1893 became a salesman for D. R. Long, in the wholesale flower business in Buffalo. In 1896 he bought the business from Mr. Long and since that time has conducted a profitable and ever-growing wholesale flower and supply business, the largest in that section of the country. In connection with this he became proprietor of the Erie Floral Co., situated at Erie Pa., with 50,000 feet of glass.

At the S. A. F. Convention in Washington, D. C., in August, 1905, Mr. Kastling was elected president of the Society, he having served previously as vice-president in 1901, when the Convention took place in Buffalo. At Cincinnati in 1909 he was elected treasurer and has served in that capacity ever since, besides holding many other positions of activity and influence in the Society's councils. Two years ago Mr. Kastling was appointed postmaster of the city of Buffalo by President Wilson. Previously he had held many positions of prominence in local floral, social, political and business circles. He was financial secretary, treasurer and afterwards president of the Buffalo Florists' Club; vice-president of the American Carnation Society; park commissioner for the city of Buffalo; treasurer of the Orpheus Singing Society; president of the German Hospital in Buffalo; member of the Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Kastling died about five years ago.

In the passing away of William F. Kastling the Society of American Florists sustains a grievous loss. He was admirably equipped for service as treasurer. He was truly "the watchdog of the treasury," and the Society's financial interests were safeguarded with rare sagacity and fidelity. Earnest, conscientious, outspoken as an opponent, loyal as a friend, generous, tender-hearted—where shall we ever find one who can fill his place.

G. Supper.

Gottlieb Supper, for many years an employee of George C. Shaffer, Washington, D. C., died on June 1, aged 35 years. He is survived by his widow, who is also an employee at Shaffer's. His father, John Supper, is in the florist business at Lakewood, N. J.

W. L. McKay.

Wm. L. McKay, of the Van Dusen Nursery Company, Geneva, N. Y., died suddenly on May 25, aged 61 years.

Exhibition of Peonies.

The annual peony show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held at Horticultural Hall, Saturday and Sunday, June 17 and 18. In addition to peonies there will be collections of irises and other seasonable flowers.

This is one of the most brilliant exhibitions of the year and a fine display will be made. The exhibition is free to the public and will be open Saturday from 12 to 6 and on Sunday from 1 to 6 o'clock.

WM. P. RICH, Sec'y.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The New York Florists' Club held its last meeting for the season of 1915-16 on Monday evening, June 12, about 70 members being present. The preliminary report on the recent Flower Show in the Grand Central Palace as presented by Secretary John Young showed a gross receipt of $41,525.76. Expenses $10,000.00. Balance $31,425.76, one-half of which goes to the International Exposition Company who assumed rent, and one-half to the florists' interests who assumed the premium list, viz. $15,711.09. The premiums paid amounted to about $9,300. To this balance must be added the special cash prizes raised by the two societies, which amounted to about $4,551.50 in cash, and trophies and medals about $1,000. The show was a big success from all angles. The club raised cash prizes amounting to $1,235 and trophies $815. The Horticultural Society of New York raised cash prizes, $3,316.50; trophies $150.

Charles B. Weathered, chairman of the special committee appointed by the club on flower show matters for 1917, reported progress. Secretary Young presented a report for the Houston Convention transportation committee giving details as to the different routes and rates. The round trip, one way by water to New Orleans and returning all rail, being recommended by the committee as most advisable, will cost $83. This includes berth and meals on steamer to New Orleans and first-class transportation beyond. The committee reported they will send out literature later covering the different items of interest and information in regard to the trip.

The committee appointed to obtain information as to suitable buildings in case the invitation is accepted to hold the next S. A. F. Convention in New York reported progress. Secretary Young presented an interesting letter from Dr. N. A. Britton, of the Botanical Gardens at Bronx Park, which may result in the Convention Garden being located there, which would be a most favorable location. It was suggested by H. A. Bunyard that the International Garden Club would also be pleased to have the Convention Garden at City Island where the recent outdoor exhibition was held. So, much to the surprise of many, a Convention Garden is assured in New York if the Convention should be held there.

A. Herrington gave a very interesting talk on the International Garden Club—why it was organized, its aims and ambitions. He stated that the Garden Club had good financial backing and had already received many substantial subscriptions. The committees appointed since last meeting are as follows: Transportation to Houston, Texas—Charles H. Totty, John Young, W. C. Rickards. On building site for Convention Garden, etc.—Chas. H. Totty, John Young, W. C. Rickards. Flower Show committee

Reorganization of the

WELCH BROS. CO.

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of Welch Bros. Co., held at 226 Devonshire Street, Boston, June 1, 1916, Mr. Henry Haas was elected Manager and Frank J. Reynolds, Asst. Manager. Patrick Welch retains the offices of President and Treasurer.

As President of the Company I wish to express my appreciation of the continued patronage with which you have favored us, and I sincerely hope that we shall always be able to retain your business, as we feel confident that the merit of our goods and the excellency of our service in both the Cut Flower and Supply Department are of the best.

PATRICK WELCH, Treasurer.

226 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.

—C. B. Weathered, chairman; Frank H. Traendly, Charles H. Totty, William H. Duckham, Max Schling, L. J. Reuter, Henry Weston, Wallace R. Pierson, George E. M. Stumpp and John Young.

A VISIT TO CROMWELL, CONN.

On Wednesday, June 21st, the members of the National Association of Gardeners and the American Association of Park Superintendents will hold a Field Day at Cromwell Gardens, Cromwell, Conn., as the guests of A. N. Pierson, Inc. A large delegation is looked for, both from the vicinity of New York City and Boston, both of which points are within a day's trip of Cromwell. Those going by way of New York will leave the Grand Central Station on the Green Mountain Express at 8 o'clock on Wednesday morning, the 21st, securing tickets for Berlin, Conn., from which city Cromwell is reached by trolley. Connection can be made at Greenwich, Conn., at 8.50 A. M.; Stamford, 9.02 A. M.; Bridgeport, 9.38 A. M. Those going by way of Boston will leave South Station at 7.55 A. M. via Hartford, from which city Cromwell is also reached by trolley.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

This club celebrated its 30th anniversary with an out-door meeting at W. J. Pilcher's in Kirkwood on June 8th. The members started at 1.30 P. M. from the wholesale district in automobiles decorated with American flags and every member wore a red carnation. The procession was lead by W. C. Smith and at the meeting place were met by Mr. Pilcher and his force and made comfortable. The tour through the splendid rose houses was most interesting. The meeting was called to order by President Bourdet in the big boiler shed, nearly 75 members in attendance. The trustees reported the club's annual picnic would be held on July 19 or 20 at Romona Park. Spring Flower Show committee had an excellent report. The committee on organizing the State Florists' Association gave an account of how the new organization had been completed. Ed G. Tedirc, Henry Ochs, H. M. Studdard, Emmett McDonald and Alex Volkman applied for membership. The committee on selecting an official flower for St. Louis for the Convention Bureau, named Coreopsis.

President Bourdet invited the members to hold their next meeting at his place, which was accepted with thanks. After adjournment Mr. Pilcher took the members in hand and entertained them royally.

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club held a large and interesting meeting in the Dutch Room of the Fort Pitt Hotel on the evening of June 6th. The question of banquet sometime this fall to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the founding of the club was brought up, and it was decided that one should be held. The matter of a flower show at the same time was also under consideration. It seemed to be the sense of the club that it would be well to hold a Chrysanthemum Show in connection with the banquet, but that there should be no money prizes.

Herman Rapp, Leetsdale, Pa.,

showed Gloxinias for which he was awarded a cultural certificate. A collection of wild flowers was displayed, which was named by Dr. E. O. Jennings of Carnegie Museum. Then followed the feature of the evening, an "Illustrated Talk on the Flora of Washington State" by Dr. Jennings. Beginning near the eastern end of the State he took us across to the Pacific Coast, passing over a choice assortment of deserts, mountain peaks and glaciers, great forests and prairies. The wild flowers were in profusion, the pictures fine and the talk interesting, and the club greatly enjoyed the entertainment and instruction afforded.

H. P. JOSLIN, Secretary.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

All guarantors for the National Flower Show held in Philadelphia this spring have had their money returned to them in full with a ten per cent. dividend.

The New Haven County (Ct.) Horticultural Society had a free peony show on June 8, but very few peonies were in evidence. There was an excellent showing of German irises, however.

Miss Van Name showed forty vases of iris. She boasts of 600 varieties in her collection, some very rare. Mrs. Edward H. Jenkins also contributed forty vases. Many of these were seedlings and caused a good deal of talk among connoisseurs. The Park Department of New Haven and Jno. W. Anderson of the Yale Botanical Gardens also had some very interesting specimens. J. H. Slocombe, the veteran florist, showed two large groups of oriental poppies that were greatly admired.

Exhibits.

This department is being handled by Mr. Albert F. Meehan, Dresher, Pa. Intending exhibitors should at once communicate with him.

E. S. Osborne, Rochester, N. Y., hopes to make up a special train for members in New York State and New England, to which through sleepers from Boston will be attached. Write Mr. Osborne.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

Owing to the very late season, the June Show of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society will be postponed to Friday, June 23, 1916. Send in entries on the blank provided for the purpose two days before the show to Ernest K. Thomas, Secretary, Rhode Island State College, Kingston, R. I.

The annual June exhibition of roses, sweet peas, strawberries, hardy flowers, etc. by the Tarrytown Horticultural Society will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building, Tarrytown, N. Y. on Tuesday afternoon and evening, June 20, 1916, from 2 until 10 P. M. Admission free. See the prize schedule for list of special premiums. E. W. Neubrand is secretary.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held June 6th at the Botanic Garden of Smith College, Northampton, Mass. The principal business was the adoption of a schedule for the annual Flower Show, to be held in Northampton, November 1st and 2nd. George Strugnell read a paper on hydrangeas, for the growing of which he has a good reputation. E. J. Canning exhibited a collection of flowering shrubs, including some of the lesser known kinds. In the greenhouses the visitors were chiefly attracted by a display of zonal and regal pelargoniums, Canterbury Bells, Gladiolus Peach Blossom and Clerodendron fallax.

Clover Seed—Norway, $7,911.

Grass Seed—Netherlands, $301; Argentine, $762.

Other Seed—Netherlands, $1,705; England, $20,049; Chile, $1,900; British India, $3,114; France, $610; Hong-kong, $160; Japan, $284.

Nitrate of Soda—Panama, $14,266.

Notes.

New York, N. Y.—W. A. Sutherland, formerly with the Leonard Seed Company, Chicago, is now representing S. D. Woodruff & Sons, 82 Dey street, in the eastern states.

Rockford, Ill.—Condon Bros., seed growers, have purchased the McFarland farm, in Guilford township, and a large portion of it will be devoted to seed trials.

The Iowa Seed Dealers Association held their annual meeting at Des Moines, Ia., in the Savary Hotel on Wednesday and Thursday, June 7 and 8. It was a very successful and well attended meeting. Henry Field of Shenandoah is president and J. F. Sinn of Clarinda, secretary.

Theodore Outerbridge writes from Sunnylands, Bermuda, that the weather has been very cool there thus far this season but that rain is needed very badly and plants and bulbs are suffering for it. We should be very glad to share some of the rainfall which we have been getting in New England during the past fortnight.

Our advices from France state that there is a great shortage of labor with correspondingly high wages. Agricultural and horticultural productions, including seed growing, has been very much reduced this spring. Instead of growing seeds, growers prefer to raise potatoes and grains, which with a good deal less expense, command now very high prices.

SWEET PEA HISTORY.

DEAR EDITOR:

In answer to the question of Earl at South on the Department of the Medical Writer, Sweet Peas in Horticulture of May 21D, page 726, I find several mistakes which I want to correct for the sake of history and nomenclature of the Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas. I hope you will correct the following facts which can be very easily proved by any mentioned firms.

Mr. Earl admits in his address, that the Earliest of All and Christmas Pink, of which I was the originator, are practically the same. I agree with him as they are today, but ten years ago or right after the introduction of the Earliest of All it was very similar to my first Winter Sweet Pea the Winter Blanch Ferry. He admits that the Earliest of All was introduced in 1898, which is correct. But Mr. Earl omits entirely how it has happened that two practically the same varieties bear two different names. One must surely be misrepresented and renamed.

My original Christmas Pink was grown by many growers before 1898, also before the introduction of Earliest of All. The first greenhouse of it was grown by Thos. Young Co., in the season 1895-6, and the first flowers so far as I can recollect, were sent to Thorley, New York, at the price of 50 cents per dozen flowers. Later it has been sent to Fleishman's and other New York flower stores. I was in charge of the greenhouses at that time.

In 1897-98 it was grown by many growers and the majority of the flowers were handled by Gunther Bros., commission florists, at that time in 30th street, New York, and by James Purdy. Those firms can show the old books, how much of the Christmas Pink they have handled. Now I ask Mr. Earl—who have named the Earliest of All, if it is the same as Christmas Pink? As I have mentioned before, today those two varieties are most the same, but ten years ago there was a big difference between them. The so-called Earliest of All was a very dwarf grower with a small flower. In 1906 Lester Morse raised the Christmas Pink seed for me, also the Earliest of All for other seedsmen on the same field. Asking him for his opinion about the two varieties, he says: "There is a big difference between the two. Yours is double, is large, is a very strong grower and comes two to three weeks later when planted side by side at the same time." Since that time many thousand growers came to the same conclusion and have returned to my old Christmas Pink.

After I have tried out the Earliest of All, I come to the point that this is the same Sweet Pea as my first bicolor, the Winter Blanche Ferry, which I have originated and grown by Mr. H. Bolte at Allentown, Pa., 1890 and when I was with Koge Bros., West Hoboken, N. J., in 1892-94. The Winter Blanche Ferry was never advertised and was grown only by several growers to whom I gave the seed, and in 1895 I decided it is better of the much better Christmas Pink.

No doubt that all the old growers knew the name of the first Winter Sweet Pea, but it may be very misleading to the younger generation to have them believe that the Earliest of All was the first.

Yours very truly,

AME. C. ZVOLANKER.

Lompoc, Cal.

THE PEONY CITY.

There was a notable gathering of the Civic League of Omaha, Neb., on the 7th of June. It was peony day and the exhibit of that flower was fine. It is the aim of the league to make Omaha the Peony City. There is a garden of fourteen acres of this flower in full bloom. The writer was sent for to make an address.

Found at Last.

The trouble has been to find a peony for the northern belt of states for Decoration Day. There will be hundreds of blooms on that day and thousands two days after, but after seven years test in Nebraska the Umbellata Rosea has never failed. This is a beautiful fragrant pink. This year May was so cold we thought they would not come to time, but they came in on the home run gloriously, and now there is a great call for this flower.

C. S. HARRISON.

PEONY EXHIBITION.

The American Peony Society in co-operation with The Horticultural Society of New York held a Peony Exhibition in the American Museum of Natural History, New York City, on June 9th to 11th. Our special notes on the exhibits and list of prize winners appears to have miscarried and we are, therefore, obliged to go to press without them this week.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the American Peony Society was held in the lecture room in connection with the exhibition.

A discussion on the naming of new varieties and the desirability of a simplification of the present nomenclature resulted in instructions to the secretary to correspond with raisers abroad setting forth the attitude of the American Society. Lemoine & Son of Nancy, France, were made honorary members as was also Sarah A. Pleas of Colorado, whose varieties Jubilee and Opal in her exhibit were very beautiful. The directors were authorized to hold a meeting next winter and arrange for a spring meeting in 1917 and it was decided to issue two bulletins for the coming year similar to those of 1916. On the question of admitting Garden Clubs to membership no decision was reached. Arrangements have now been completed for the planting of a full collection of peonies at Washington to be known as the American Peony Society collection. Philadelphia was chosen for the next exhibition.

The membership of the society is now 150, 34 new members having been added this year. The cash balance to the credit of the society is over $1,700.

Miss Virginia Poehlmann was graduated from the University School for Girls on the North Shore last week.

The A. F. Amling Co.'s new place at Maywood is having its heating plant installed this week. Four Kroeschell boilers, each of 300 horse power, will do the work.

Miss Josephine Then, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Then and well known to the trade, is seriously ill at the German hospital. At this writing she is said to be slightly improved.

Miss L. A. Tonner, who brings her stock of peonies each day to their wholesale store says that the rain and wind together have made a hard combination against peonies this year, but they are showing some very fine stock notwithstanding.

During Manager Lautenschlager's trip to Philadelphia, a community order was placed with him for new Kroeschell boilers and two car loads will be on the tracks when this is in print. The order includes two No. 15 boilers, one No. 14, one No. 12 and one No. 24 and their destination is Kennett Square, Pa.

Large shipments of palms, araucarias, pines and aspidistras have arrived recently for Frank Oechsli, Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Winterson's Seed Store. On account of war conditions and congestion at terminals some have been long on the way. Some of them, however, have reached their destination in splendid condition.

No agreement has been reached as yet terminating the express employees' strike, but the office men were replaced promptly and the regular delivery of flowers to the trains is made daily by the committee and business goes on about as usual. By actual count, the express company's books show the handling of a larger number of orders the past four weeks than in a corresponding time last year.

The Vegetable Growers' Association of America, through the efforts of Fred Lautenschlager, are invited to hold their annual meeting this fall, in Chicago. The Association has never met further west than Grand Rapids, but there are so many engaged in market gardening and so much money invested in that business in and around Chicago that it is a most desirable place for meeting occasionally. Mr. Lautenschlager has got all the seed houses and the building material firms interested and with the entertainment part in his hands, success is assured. The executive board is meeting here June 15th for final arrangements.

NEW YORK.

A joint meeting of the committees of the New York Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of New York to formulate co-operative plans for next year's spring show, was held on Monday, June 12, at the Hotel Manhattan. No definite result was arrived at and the meeting adjourned until Monday, June 19, when it is expected that some mutual basis of co-operation will be reached.

The Tenth Annual Outing of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will be held on June 27 at Forest Park Hotel, Forest Park, Pike County, Pa. The party will leave New York at 10.00 A. M. in a special car attached to the Lackawanna Limited, arriving at the hotel at 1.30 P. M. and in time for the mid-day dinner. Refreshments will be provided en route. Rooms, lodging and meals will be provided at the hotel until the afternoon of June 29th when the party will return to New York via special car. The tickets, including fare, auto, rooms, meals and all other expenses, are only $15.00 per person. The affair has all the indications of being one of the Association's most unique three-day outings and will provide a most enjoyable, "different" and economical outing in the mountains and in genial company for three days.

PITTSBURGH.

Landscape men on all sides are complaining of continued scarcity of labor with no probability of relief in sight.

Clarence Mason Sallee of Pittsburgh was graduated last week from the Ohio State University with the degree of bachelor of Science in Horticulture.

DeForrest W. Ludwig served as chairman of the Floral Committee for the Milk and Ice Association's benefit performance at the Alvin Theatre last week.

During last week's celebration of the elimination of the R. R. grade crossings in Wilkesburg, Miss Emma B. Maxwell's display window was charmingly arranged with pink variegated caladium foliage. Miss Maxwell's processional float was also outlined with pink roses. William M. Turner had a most effective float composed of thousands of red and white peonies from which was scattered along the trail five thousand carnations of corresponding shades.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

July 19 has been selected for the annual field day of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C. Captain William H. Ernest, chairman of the committee, predicted the event would be the most successful in the history of the club. Great Falls has again been selected for the event.

Harry B. Lewis was appointed chairman of the Preparedness Day committee with instructions to enter into the parade with as large a representation as possible. It was later announced that it was expected that more than 200 people directly connected with the

WELCH BROS. CO. REORGANIZE.

The advertisement of the reorganized Welch Bros. Co., wholesale cut flower dealers of Boston, appears on another page. Patrick Welch, president and treasurer of the corporation is well known to all our readers in every part of the country.

Wm. Henry Hass, who is elected manager, is well known in Boston. He has had long experience in the marketing of flowers, having been in the employ of Wm. H. Elliott for several years, and of late has been engaged as a salesman for Norris F. Comley, in the Boston Cooperative Flower Market. He is very popular, and is considered one of the cleverest and most capable salesmen in the wholesale florist trade.

Frank J. Reynolds, assistant manager, is widely known throughout New England, New York State and Canada, where he has travelled considerably and acquired an intimate acquaintance with practically all the florists in this section. He started in the florist business about twenty years ago with the firm of Welch Bros. and continued for about eight years, leaving this concern to go with N. F. McCarthy & Co., acting in the capacity of manager of that concern for several years.

He was a salesman for a number of growers in the Boston Flower Market for two years and has recently been with McAlpine & McDonald. He has

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON This is the big week of graduations, commencements and all sorts of anniversary events, etc., connected with the colleges, seminaries and schools of lesser grade which abound in New England. These affairs are using up large quantities of flowers, as usual, and the Boston wholesale market has been to that extent revelling in comfort and joy. Besides, there have been lots of weddings, which supplied an outlet for choice material appropriate for such occasions. Whatever may come afterwards another week of this sort of business is reasonably assured and a good market can be counted upon. Prices run low, however, as there is a heavy supply coming in still and the demand, good as it is, has not been sufficient to create famine conditions sufficient to justify any boosting of prices. Lily of the valley is the only exception and the chances are that it will be at high notch for a long time to come.

The previous week was BUFFALO rather a hard one on the wholesaler and grower, especially the peony shipper and the local carnation man. There was an oversupply on these two items though had there been any demand the early part of the week the balance of the week could easily have taken care of itself. Peonies simply would not move at any price and when the time came for sales the quality had failed. The same may be said of carnations and the weather naturally was the full cause. Roses, beauties, lilies and other stock are also plentiful, though these items have moved more freely. Since Monday, the 12th, a better situation has existed, more life in the buyers and speculative buying more brisk, and it looks like a more profitable week.

In spite of handicaps CHICAGO Chicago market is disposing of a vast quantity of stock daily. The weather has been very conducive to soft stock and there is more or less coming that way, but also there is much that is of high grade and all of this sells to good advantage. The poorer grades are worked off for cheaper work and special sales and curbstone business. It is frequently asserted by men long in the business that the year so far is making as good a record in the sales books as other years. Wedding orders are coming in fast and using up much of the best grade of stock, particularly roses and peonies. Of lily of the valley there is a shortage and as some is included in nearly every wedding order there is a lively skirmish to locate it. There are plenty of short roses to meet any demand but of the longer ones there are more to spare. Some very fine American Beauties are now seen. Peonies are including some that are soft but the greater part are counted good stock and there will be enough in cold storage to last some time. Field daisies with long stems are plentiful. Sweet peas are inclined to be soft and are not shipping particularly well.

CINCINNATI Business has become quiet and stock is plentiful. Prices are rather low. The rose supply is large but only a part of it is of high quality. Carnations have been affected by the heat and but a few are really good. Gladioli and lilies are plentiful. Some good sweet peas may be had. Orchids and lily of the valley have an excellent demand. Snapdragon and water lilies meet with a fair call.

NEW YORK We record with much satisfaction a decided change for the better in this week's trading. The rose supply has been reduced and they as well as carnations are moving nicely—the latter at considerably better prices. Lily of the valley is particularly strong. Peonies are abundant and cheap but, as with everything else, "there is always room at the top" and it is surprising to see the avidity with which some magnificent specially cultured peony blooms now coming in from one grower are taken up at good prices, while large quantities of ordinary quality remain unsold. It is only fair to remark that Henry Weston is the grower of these flowers and John Young & Co. sell them—or, rather, they sell themselves at John Young & Co.'s! Lilies are down to the usual late spring prices. Cattleyas are superb and plenty of them but, like the peonies above alluded to, only the top-notchers bring a respectable price.

After a stroll PHILADELPHIA around the cut flower market here your correspondent has come to the conclusion that the eternal principles (whatever they may be) of the Republican party must be upheld, and that if there had not been so many peonies around things would not have been so bad, and that the standard bearers of the new crusade are a polar bear and an icicle, and that American Beauty and other red roses sold pretty well, but the horrible mess Democracy has made in our foreign policy has demoralized the markets of the world and brought in too many Easter lilies at a time when they were not wanted. While the carnations are plentiful and of splendid quality the horrible snub that Wanamaker gave to Brumbaugh has put a damper on the splendid demand that everyone expected. Orchids would sell better if the Seminole Indians down near Jupiter, Florida, who still think they own slaves and don't know that the war of sixty-one is over, would wear those flowers themselves instead of flooding the market here with them. We could not make much sense out of all this, but we pass it along for wiser heads to puzzle out.

For the time being the game is over, and the trade is philosophically and contentedly nibbling at the odds and ends of business, as it were. As for the flowers themselves, there are even more than plenty, the really good ones going at fair prices, the ordinary ones at "any old prices," as a wholesale man put it. On the past two Saturdays the downtown streets have been noticeable for the number of boys disposing of good carnations at practically the purchasers' prices. Present prospects are that material will shorten up very quickly. Lilies of the valley, particularly, will be scarce. Just now growers are busy replanting their houses.

Demand and quality of stock are both good and business among the retailers has been fine. The many rain storms have hurt outdoor stock greatly. Prices remain as quoted last week. Roses are still in good condition. These and lily of the valley have a big call. Carnations are also in demand and the supply is not overabundant. Gladioli sell well and window displays of them are seen everywhere. Hardy white phlox has a big demand, also coreopsis.

Stores were exceptionally busy last week. Stock continues plentiful and for the most part good. Flowers, usually burnt up by the middle of June, are coming into the market in fair saleable shape. This is particularly true of carnations and sweet peas. Roses from the north are very good and find ready sale. Lilies, of which there is a large supply, move but slowly. Lily of the valley continues scarce and continues to bring $6 per hundred. Pond lilies are being received in larger quantities. Rambler roses are quite late this year and at this writing the market is caught short, with a good demand. Tausendschoen and others of the early varieties are passing off the market; Dorothy Perkins and the later varieties are only just beginning to show color.

PERSONAL.

Announcement of marriage intentions has been made by Wm. M. Post, florist, New Bedford, Mass., and Laura Jolicoeur.

Professor Arno H. Nehrling, department of floriculture, Mass. Agricultural College, Amherst, and Miss Ada Kathryn Joseph, of Jasper, Ind., will be married on June 29th at South Bend, Ind.

Announcement has been received of the marriage of Thomas Boothe De Forest of the Lord & Burnham Company's New York office to Jessie Lord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Burnham, on Saturday, June 10, at Irvington-on-Hudson, New York.

Plant Propagation Greenhouse and Nursery Practice By M. G. KAINS

So many discoveries of new facts by plant investigators, shortcuts and "wrinkles" worked out by plant propagators, and nursery, greenhouse and garden methods simplified or made more effective, have made books hitherto available on plant propagation out of date.

There has also been an insistent call for a volume that would not only include the character of information wanted by nurserymen and other plant propagators, but also discuss the subject of plant propagation from the standpoint of fundamental principles, and include the latest conclusions advanced by investigators throughout the world.

This new book by Professor Kains will appeal with equal force to the amateur, the professional propagator, and the teacher in agricultural colleges and schools.

The book devotes many pages to special plant lists and condensed directions for propagation of vegetables, fruits, annual and perennial flowers, bulbs, ferns, orchids, cacti, evergreens, deciduous trees and shrubs, vines, water plants, greenhouse and indoor plants and palms.

The table of contents includes: An introduction on general principles of germination, seed testing, potting, and sowing; the propagation of cuttings, graftage, and theories and laws, Daniel's experiments in graftage, the effects of graftage on the growth of plants, and the effects of graftage on the fruit of plants; the propagation of plants by methods of grafting considered individually, budding methods, nursery management, and laws affecting nursery stock.

WEED KILLER

THE VERY NEWEST AND QUICKEST METHOD OF DESTROYING WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

We manufacture the strongest line of DISINFECTANTS on the market.

WHAT THE S. A. F. HAS A RIGHT TO EXPECT AT THE HOUSTON CONVENTION.

In an issue in one of the trade papers of June 3 an editorial appeared headed, "What Houston Has a Right to Expect." I wish to make reply to this article, and state what the S. A. F. has a right to expect at the Houston Convention.

The southern florists are alive to the importance of the meeting of the convention of the S. A. F. in the South this summer. We will avail ourselves of taking advantage of the opportunity in discussing such questions that will promote horticulture in general. We realize the great possibilities that lie before the southern horticulturists for development of our profession. We also realize the wonderful amount of good to be derived from the members of this organization in our midst, which will be a wonderful stimulant and of great help to the southern florists in discussing such matters that will tend to promote the cause of horticulture in the South.

On the other hand, we believe that the coming of the members of the S. A. F. from other sections to the South will be of great interest to them as they will have an insight into the possibilities that lie before the southern florists, and will, therefore, lay their plans to cooperate with us in the development of this section of the country.

But, why should we lay aside the important business of this society at the Houston Convention? We will have a large delegation from other sections, together with a record breaking delegation from the South, who have the interest of this Society at heart and are thoroughly familiar with the detail work of this organization, and are thoroughly prepared to vote on such matters that are of interest to the society. Time is not so short but we will be able to take up these questions and vote upon them intelligently.

The membership will be a representative one, and there is no doubt in my mind but that it is only right and proper that these questions should be taken up at this time as they are scheduled. There was a feeling at the time the convention went to San Francisco that possibly the western members would take matters in their own hands, and vote upon such matters that would be to their own interest, and possibly not to the interest of the society as a whole. It was demonstrated at the San Francisco Convention that the western boys had the interest of the society at heart, and did not make any attempt at railroading matters that were to their selfish interest. You may expect the same at the Houston Convention. The society may expect the southern members to use their best judgment, and will vote upon such that will be of interest to the society as a whole.

I want to state here that insofar as I am personally concerned, I expect to work diligently to this end, and I believe there will be no opposition from the other members along these lines. Any attempt to table such questions that are scheduled for this meeting will certainly be fought to the limit.

Mr. Jno. Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York, has been named as a chairman of a committee to make plans and receive reservations for those who care to make the trip by water from New York to New Orleans for the Houston Convention.

This is considered an ideal trip, and all those going to the Convention from the East should take advantage of this opportunity and write Mr. Young immediately, advising him of their intention of making the trip by water. All members will go on the same boat, and it assures a most enjoyable time for those who can spare the time to make the trip this way.

R. C. KERR, Vice Pres.

ARBORETUM NOTES.

Early Summer Lilacs.

The so-called Persian Lilac (Syringa persica) is now in flower. This is a native of Afghanistan and is said to have been cultivated in Persia and India from time immemorial and to have reached eastern Europe nearly three centuries ago. It is a broad, rather low shrub with long-pointed leaves and small fragrant flowers in few-flowered clusters which are crowded at the ends of the slender drooping branches and appear like one long narrow inflorescence. The flowers are pale lilac color. There is a white-flowered form (var. alba) and one with deeply lobed leaves (var. laciniata). The Persian Lilacs are graceful and delightful plants, and although they were early brought to the United States they are now too rarely found in American gardens. Crossed with the common Lilac (S. vulgaris) the Persian Lilac produced in the Botanic Garden at Rouen a hybrid with broader leaves and immense clusters of reddish flowers intermediate in size between those of its parents. This hybrid is one of the most vigorous, largest and most useful of all Lilacs. Unfortunately it has been called Syringa chinensis; it is also known as S. rothomagensis and as the Rouen Lilac. There is a variety (var. alba) with pale pink, not very attractive flowers, and there are forms with flowers deeper red than those of the type, and with double flowers.

Syringa villosa.

This is a large, very vigorous and hardy shrub from northern China which is now just beginning to open its flower-buds. The flowers are pale rose-color or rarely nearly white, and are produced in immense quantities in short broad clusters. In spite of the disagreeable odor of the flowers this is a valuable plant as it is one of the last of the true Lilacs to flower and greatly prolongs the season of Lilac flowers. Crossed with the Hungarian S. Josikaea, which is also now in flower, S. villosa has produced in Paris a hybrid race to which the name of S. Henryi has been given. One of these hybrids known as Lutece is now in flower and is one of the handsomest of garden Lilacs. It is a large and vigorous shrub with large dark green leaves and great clusters of blue-purple flowers. Some of the new Chinese species will flower a little later and these will be followed by the tree Lilacs of north-eastern Asia.

Robinia Kelseyi.

This Rose Acacia, which was discovered only a few years ago on the slopes of the southern Appalachian Mountains, proves a hardy and valuable garden plant. The flowers are smaller and lighter-colored than those of the well known Rose Acacia (R. hispida) which flowers a little later, and the branches are not covered with the viscid hairs to which the Rose Acacia owes its name. R. Kelseyi is a shrub sometimes growing from six to eleven feet high, with slender stems and branches, leaves composed of nine or eleven narrow lanceolate leaflets which are bronze color as they unfold, and short racemes appearing with the unfolding leaves and composed of from four to seven flowers produced from the axils of the leaves of short lateral young branchlets which grow from end to end of the branches of the previous year. Sometimes as many as four flower-clusters are developed on one of the short lateral branchlets, and as the flowers in the upper clusters on the branchlet do not open until later than those of the lower clusters the plants are covered with fresh flowers for a long time. This Robinia will prob-

ROSE GARDENS AT ARLINGTON, VA.

As previously reported in HORTICULTURE, the members of the American Rose Society on the occasion of their visit to Washington last month found it impossible to score the roses because of the heavy rainstorm of several days' duration which had destroyed so many of the blooms, and William F. Gude, was appointed to look after the matter, with instructions to appoint a suitable committee and to have the roses scored at an early date.

The committee consisted of Adolph Gude, chairman; George E. Anderson, Twin Oaks, D. C., and George W. Hess of the U. S. Botanic Gardens, with Prof. F. L. Mulford of the Dept. of Agriculture as an advisory member. These found the gardens in very fair shape. A hailstorm on Saturday had done a considerable damage all around, but this was less noticeable among the roses than elsewhere. More than a hundred roses were looked at, but in many cases the judges felt that it would not be fair ably prove to be a better garden plant than the Rose Acacia; for although the flowers are not as large or of as deep rose-color it does not spread by underground stems, a habit which makes the Rose Acacia a weed which once established it is almost impossible to control.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

NEW ROSE LOS ANGELES.

We have received from Fred Howard, the raiser, a color process picture of the new rose Los Angeles. It is a very attractive flower, color luminous salmon and lemon and a sturdy grower as shown by the plate. Mr. Howard makes no claims for it as a forcing rose but says, that it has already made an enviable record as a bedding variety.

The rose Gustav Grunerwald received the highest mark during the scoring, attaining 89 points, while its nearest competitors, Radiance and Konigin Carola, received 84. Two singles were also judged and Waltham Scarlet received 89 points, falling down seven points on fragrance and losing two points each on floriferousness and vigor.

ITHACA TEST ROSE GARDEN.

The rose test garden established at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will be opened for judging by the American Rose Society on Thursday, June 22. Members are invited to assemble in the offices of the Department of Horticulture in Roberts Hall and go from there to the rose garden. The Syracuse Rose Society is planning to attend in a body. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Here's a tip that's worth the growers attention. The golden coreopsis is a beautiful flower and a grand border perennial but as a seller in the cut flower market in June, July and August there is nothing to it. Grow gaillardia instead; the dark ones with clear, well-defined colors. They sell better than coreopsis and grow gaillardia instead.

In reply to a number of inquiries from old friends as to why we do not come out of town and report the local shows, would say that there are so many of them nowadays that it is impossible, and if you make a rule with one it should be with all—and impartial. What little reporting we do is merely as a side line to our real business. We are not yet in a position to adopt the dictum: "When your pleasure interferes with your business, drop your business."

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Worcester County (Mass.) Horticultural Society had its June exhibition of flowers, fruits and vegetables in Horticultural Hall, Worcester, on June 8. The display of iris was a feature of the show, with collections from the gardens of George N. Smith of the Wellesley Nursery, Hadwen Arboretum, Mrs. H. J. Eagon, S. E. Fisher, Mrs. Homer Gage, Edward W. Breed and Mrs. I. E. Sawyer. Rhododendrons and peonies also attracted considerable attention from the hundreds of flower lovers who visited the hall.

The summer flower show of the Connecticut Horticultural Society will be held June 27-28. Special prizes are offered as follows: Silver cup by Knight & Struck Co. for best three spikes, of Delphinium Belladonna; Stumpp & Walter Co., silver cup for best general exhibit; Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston, 1st and 2d for collection of roses; Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., New York, 1st and 2d for collection of sweet peas. For roses there are 19 classes; hardy perennials, 23 classes; sweet peas, 14 classes. It is hoped to have members of the Ladies Garden Clubs of Hartford and Middletown exhibit in a department set aside for this purpose.

Some Worth While Facts About Ernest Saunders' House

IF you know Ernest Saunders of Lewiston, Me., you know he comes pretty close to being right up among the front rank of careful buyers. When we say careful, however, don't mistake us. We don't mean he weighs every penny he can save—not that kind of careful. We mean—he counts every dollar he can make.

Not the kind either that counts chickens before they are hatched; but the kind that knows that the only way to produce the best of stock is to get the best there is to produce it with.

That's why he now owns one of our 40 x 425 feet iron framers. The building of 40 footers without columns can be done with perfect safety; but Mr. Saunders leans towards the safe side of safety and believes all this talk about columns has been carried a bit too far.

So we put in two columns and secured them to the rafters by a good rugged fitting that is bolted directly to the rafter and bolted through and through the column.

At the bottom they are set in heavy 4-way braced cast iron foot bases that are bedded in concrete. Unless our figures are all ciphers, nothing can lift that house up without lifting a good generous slice of old Mother Earth with it.

Just notice the clamp column swing for the overhead mains. A neat practical fitting that does the work the way it ought to be done.

The roof ventilating hand wheels are equipped with our special tell-tale device that shows at a glance the ridge sash opening.

What would a house like Saunders' cost you? Well it will cost more than it did him. And every day you put off building it is liable to cost still more.

Next year it will probably cost still more.

This year, right now, is the time to build.

You know we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

THE HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER

A NEW DISCOVERY IN FABRICS

A Material from which Wrinkles Disappear Without Pressing

PROTECT YOUR CLOTHING WHILE AUTOMOBILING OR TRAVELING
HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTERS are made from a new fabric.

The Dusters can be used in the Auto all day, placed upon a hanger at night and all wrinkles will have disappeared in the morning.

This fabric is soft in finish, heavy enough to withstand the hardest usage, yet light in weight and cool. It is linen color and is exceptionally attractive, and as it has been shrunk, the Coats may be washed when necessary, and will look like new.

The Men's Coat is made double breasted, side slashed pockets, sleeve tabs, high collar, finished with attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

The Women's Coat is made with a full skirt, single breasted, patch pockets, and collar that can be buttoned up close to the neck. It is trimmed with very attractive buttons, and has the belted back.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED

We guarantee every HAMILTON NON-WRINKLE DUSTER to be exactly as represented, and if it is not entirely satisfactory when received, it may be returned to us, and we will cheerfully refund the purchase price.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Adiantums

No asparagus, no matter how soft and feathery will ever entirely take the place of adiantum and every retail grower who can provide a house in which he can maintain a temperature not less than 60 degrees during zero weather, should devote some bench room to its culture. Stock out of 2½ inch pots is all right, but better and quicker results will be obtained by making use of larger plants. The adiantum, like most members of the fern family, flourishes in mellow loam. This with a fair amount of well-rotted cow manure and a little sharp sand will do nicely. Provide good drainage and allow about one foot of space between the plants. The present is as good a time as any to prepare for planting out and even if you should not get as large and as fine fronds as your wholesaler supplies, you will appreciate having a good number of plants to cut from next winter.

Care of Violets

They should grow without a check and this necessitates faithful watching. Remove every runner. Keep the plants free from diseased or yellow leaves. Watch out for greenfly or other insects; don't wait until they pay a visit, but use fumigation and a weak nicotine solution regularly to keep them away. Do not wait for weeds to come, but go over the benches twice a week if possible. A very important matter at this time is to keep the surface of the benches loose by continued scratching. Of the leaders in cut flower stocks, grown extensively for winter production none probably requires more watchful attention during hot and dry summer than does the violets. The slightest neglect, the least delay or oversight, very often costs the grower dearly. Keep the plants clean and well watered and syringed during bright weather, but during dull weather keep your house as dry as possible.

Cinerarias

It is well to make three sowings—one early in July, another about mid-August, and the last in the middle of September. The last dates are the best for most growers as they will have them from February on to Easter, which will be not so late next year. Use fresh seeds of the best strains to be had. Sow on leaf-mold plentifully intermixed with clean, sharp sand. Place the trays in a cold frame. Seeds of Cineraria hybrids started about this time germinate most readily and with proper attention during the warmest months of summer are least difficult to work into good stock. When the seeds are up lay off the sashes on rainless, pleasant nights altogether. Time to transplant is after the seedlings have developed their third leaf. Keep moist and shaded, but let the sashes be raised a few inches from the start unless in unusually cold windy weather. Keep clean by frequent fumigations.

Orchids

All such Cattleyas as Mossiae, Mendelii, Warneri, etc. when through flowering should be given new material and when in poor condition repot, using osmunda fibre, and sphagnum moss with a liberal drainage. These orchids require every encouragement in the way of heat, light without direct sunlight, and moisture, for they have baffled quite a few who have tried to grow them. During now and through the summer see that they don't suffer for the want of water. Now as the season advances the Cattleya department will need more air thus necessitating more thorough and frequent damping of the walks and under the benches, with a syringing overhead once or twice a day. When there is a spell of damp weather don't do much damping, and it will be necessary to keep on air with a little fire heat so as to keep them in good shape.

Gardenias

Early propagated stock of gardenias should be well-rooted in four inch pots by this time. To have good stock for next winter's flowering the house or bench should be prepared right away. On the way the soil is prepared depends much of the success or failure. The best compost is a loam with plenty of fibre in it, but always avoiding a heavy soil. A very good mixture is fibrous loam three parts, well-decayed cow manure two parts with a sprinkling of bone. It is a good plan to place a layer of broken crocks on the bottom of the benches which will insure a sweet soil. They can be planted about fifteen inches apart each way and see that they are well firmed around the ball. Keep plenty of atmospheric moisture in the house. On all good days give them a good syringing at least twice a day during summer.

Pelargoniums

Now is a good time to give pelargoniums a rest. The best place for them is outside in full sun and gradually reduce the water supply. When the foliage takes on a yellow color the plants can be placed on their sides for about three weeks. This will thoroughly ripen up their growth and put them in condition to break again later.

Next Week:—Chrysanthemums; Crotons; Orchids; Raising Perennials; Compost for Carnations; Stock Plants.

 treasuryship

In the January issue of William F. Kasting, the Secretary of American Florists, is made a most eloquent and convincing appeal. His position of treasurer for such an organization, collecting a considerable amount of labor and receiving money, and the financial position of the investment of its funds in good education, is the nature and part of an effort to bring such ability and loyalty to Mr. Kasting, and it is not found at every turn. There is little that Horticulture can add to the appreciation of Mr. Kasting and his worth is expressed in the editorial notes published in the issue of last week, but we are pleased to record the selection by President MacRorie of so good a man as J. J. Hess to take up the work which Mr. Kasting has laid down and assume its responsibilities until the Society shall come together and register its choice of a successor. Mr. Hess is a life member of the Society since the year 1909. He is one of the strong representative men financially and socially of the great middle west and we believe his selection will be received with much favor by the rank and file of the S. A. F.

What the
 entitled to

The consumption of peony blooms for commercial florists' use has increased apace in recent years and, in the aggregate, amounts to a considerable figure in the season's flower output. The peony comes in at a time of the year when the call for large decorative work is very general and it is exceeded by no other flower in adaptability and usefulness for producing imposing effects on a large scale. It seems, therefore, unfortunate that so little attention is paid by those who conduct our peony exhibitions to this very important phase of the peony's place in the floral world. Even the American Peony Society at its annual show held in New York City had nothing more artistic to present than the antiquated groups and rows of stove-pipe jars of blooms, a method of displaying such material which serves the purpose of supplying names and identities of varieties for those who may be interested but does practically nothing towards extending the sphere of practical service and utility of the peony as a cut flower through the imparting of popular knowledge concerning the splendid decorative qualities of this noble flower which neither the chrysanthemum nor the dahlia can outshine. It does seem as though we ought to do something better in our exhibition arrangement than is done by the street hawker, for instance, who is a familiar figure on the streets of New York City with his push-cart load of jars filled with peonies in manner exactly similar to what was set forth at the Peony Society's show. The American Peony Society has done some excellent work during its existence, but here is one direction in which there is room for a great awakening. There is no reason why they should neglect it and we shall hope to see a good start made at Philadelphia next year.

The announcement by the Executive Committee of the American Rose Society of their proposal to inaugurate a systematic campaign of inquiry into rose diseases and the best methods of combatting these troubles is very encouraging and should be a source of much gratification to all rose growers. A better place for this important work than the place selected—Cornell University—could hardly be suggested and Professor Whetzel's interest and services will be invaluable. One evident reason why the State colleges and similar institutions have done so little for floriculture is simply that they have not been asked to do so and followed up by the floricultural people, which is greatly to be regretted.

For his services to Botany and Horticulture, Harvard College has conferred the honorary degree of Master of Arts on Ernest Henry Wilson of the Arnold Arboretum. All the time Mr. Wilson and their number has grown apace during the few years he has lived and worked in this country—will be pleased to learn of his exceptional honor of which he is the recipient. It has been worthily won and is a recognition worthily bestowed. E. H. Wilson has been a frequent contributor to Horticulture and Horticulture is pleased to announce the first to publicly extend congratulations.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Planting

With prospects of a wet cloudy season ahead, growers cannot afford to delay planting any longer than is absolutely necessary. We hope the weather will not continue as it is at present. Heavy showers at night, accompanied with fog when it is not raining, do not make ideal weather for growing roses. It is therefore advisable to plant early, even though the old plants have to be sacrificed, and unless the old plants are doing real well it will pay to do so. Last year spring business was so good that many growers planted very late, and with the dark rainy summer and fall the stock did not root well and the result was that the cut was light all winter, the winter itself being very severe making matters much worse. When cleaning the houses after wheeling all the soil out, see that everything is cleaned thoroughly as fungus will thrive during the dark weather and there is likely to be more disease than during clear weather. Even though the time is short and work behind the regular schedule it will pay to do things well as we go along and avoid trouble later. See that the benches are well gone over with hot lime wash as the plants will not root very fast during the cloudy weather, and if there is fungus in the soil to attack and destroy the roots it will take quite a while to make more and meanwhile the wood on the plant will go to sleep and may not wake up until spring.

Planting Shawyer

This one rose does not mind being planted late and if nice plants are used planting can be done away up into August. A house planted last year in late July, cut nice stuff on the first of September, receiving its first dose of liquid manure one month after planting. Nice stock was cut all winter, with a heavy cut in the spring. To do well the plants must be vigorous, free from spider and spot. The sod should be at least one-third cow manure, well decayed, so that it will not burn the new tender roots that the plants will send out as soon as they begin to settle in their new quarters. Under ordinary conditions we would not advise using liquid manure so soon after planting but this house was an exception and the plants were well able to take it.

Watch Out for Spot on the Young Plants

With dark rainy weather it will be advisable to be very careful in watering and syringing young plants, more so those that are pretty well up and more or less crowded. Go over the plants every now and then, taking off all yellow leaves and all spot that may be lurking here and there. As this is done set all small plants to the south side of the bench and the taller ones to the north, so there will be no poor plants among the good ones. The good ones take water oftener than the poorer ones and more of it, and if there was a weak plant here and there among the good ones, it would naturally be too wet all the time and would surely start spot, which would easily spread to the plants surrounding it. We do not worry much about spot except when it appears here and there on the Beauties and Ophelias. It will go right through these and take many leaves with it unless checked. The other roses will generally have a spot here and there, but with good care that is as far as it will get on them unless conditions for its spread are made very favorable by careless syringing or watering. Water as early in the morning as possible so that the plants will have every chance to dry off by night, the same being true of syringing. During the cloudy spells see that the plants are not over watered. This could only happen with potted stock with heavy close soil and poor drainage. With open soil and plenty of porous material under the pots the plants should not suffer from too much water, unless they are watered too frequently. When they have to be watered on cloudy days it will be well to run through the houses last thing at night and blow plenty of air-slacked lime around, which will dry out the air thus making conditions unfavorable for spot. With potted stock, the lime should not be blown under the plants but into the air above the walks so that the plants will not be whitewashed. Be very careful to keep the rain out should there come a shower, and night men should be instructed to put the vents down in the houses with young stock first. It is best to be on the lookout for storms, and put the houses down so they shed until a little before it starts to rain, and then lower them more. In this way the vents will not be closed up too suddenly and it will be better for the plants. It is not always possible to do this however, and no chances should be taken. If the storm comes up too quickly, the houses had better be lowered away down at once. During mild rains it is best to lower the vents so they shed, and if the rain comes in, lower them some more. On chilly nights steam should be kept in the houses. With such seasons as the last few we have had, it is best to keep the main boiler on all the time as it will save coal in the end, for it takes both coal and time to start a fire again and again.

gretted as there is much that the college people can do to help along the florists' cause. Our expert specialty growers can hardly be expected to look to the colleges for much practical instructions on cultural methods—in fact, the relationship might well be reversed in many cases. But it is different when we come to problems that call for scientific research and laboratory investigation, such as plant diseases, insects, soil properties, etc. as they affect any department of plant growing. Here we should take fuller advantage than has been done thus far of the painstaking work that the agricultural college people are prosecuting and these studious investigators should be consulted and listened to with all the respect due to knowledge so acquired. The American Rose Society seems very much alive of late and the movement under consideration together with the Rose Garden effort and the Rose Annual publication afford cumulative evidence to that effect.

GETTING READY FOR BAR HARBOR.

All indications point to a record crowd going from Boston with the Sweet Pea Society to Bar Harbor, Me., on Friday evening, July 14. It is expected that those traveling from West and South will converge at Boston and join with the general party leaving Boston for Rockland, Me., on the Bangor steamer at 6 P. M. on that day. Some may prefer to go on Thursday evening. But in either case sleeping accommodations should be engaged in advance for this all-night cruise on the open Atlantic. The Gardeners' & Florists' Club of Boston have secured fifty staterooms and these are at the disposal of applicants as long as they last. Write to W. N. Craig, Sec'y, Faulkner Farm, Brookline, Mass., or apply to the Eastern Steamship Corporation, Bangor Division, Boston.

The harbor of Rockland, Me., is one of the most beautiful in the world and as approached on the steamer in the early morning presents a picture which once seen is never forgotten. Rockland is the gateway to the scenic wonders of Penobscot Bay, one of the grandest and most romantic beauty spots of North America. Here is the starting point for the fleet of smaller steamers which carry the passengers to all points on the Maine coast. Here we transfer to the Mt. Desert steamer and are soon under way. The visitor will find a never-failing interest in the rugged shores, rocky promontories, cliffs and precipices backed by blue hills and clothed in unchanging green. We stop at Vinal Haven, North Haven with its busy little harbor and summer cottages away up on the heights, Stonington with its great granite quarries, Southwest Harbor, Northeast Harbor and Somes Sound—a veritable enchanted land—Seal Harbor, and thence along close to the surf-washed shore with palatial villas perched on the spruce-clad heights above, an ever-changing panorama, and five hours after leaving Rockland the boat swings in to Bar Harbor and here again there is much to see, of which more later on.

The Metropolitan Line express steel steamships, Massachusetts and Bunker Hill, are now using the Cape Cod Canal on their daily trips between New York and Boston. The distance between New York and Boston, around Cape Cod, is 337 miles and via the canal it is 260 miles, the trip between the two cities being thus lessened by 77 miles. The steamers now depart from New York and Boston at 6 P. M. and are scheduled to arrive at either destination at 7.30 A. M. This all-the-way-by-water trip between the two cities has been popular all along and the adoption of the canal adds a new interest to a route which is one of the most fascinating on the Atlantic coast. Should the visitors from New York and southward, bound for the Sweet Pea meeting and exhibition at Bar Harbor, decide upon this mode of travel to Boston, which we strongly recommend, it will be quite essential that stateroom accommodations be secured well in advance as the travel northward is very heavy in July. This plan would give opportunity for a full day in Boston before the departure of the steamer for Rockland at 6 P. M.

Should the weather in the interim be favorable it is expected that the show of sweet peas at Bar Harbor will be by far the finest ever put up on this continent. Many entries from a distance are booked and the local contributions will be very extensive. In the peculiar cool and moist sea air of Mt. Desert all garden flowers assume a dazzling brilliancy of color which is not found inland or farther south. Sweet peas and, in fact, all annual flowers as well as hardy perennials in Bar Harbor come closer to substantiating the glowing color descriptions given in the seed catalogues than in any other place we have ever visited.

A CAPE COD NURSERY.

Down at West Barnstable, Mass., with the waters of the Atlantic washing the shores a few miles away on either side of the long sandy arm known as Cape Cod, an interesting demonstration has been going on for the past three years. Here a ninety acre nursery has been established by R. & J. Farquhar & Company, of Boston, for the growing of certain specialties which for one reason or another are not always satisfactorily handled in nurseries having the typical New England climate and environment. The soil is a sandy loam, rich in leaf soil and one of the particular purposes for which it was chosen is the growing of young hybrid rhododendrons. There are many thousands of these under cultivation at present, and judging from their general vigor and sturdiness they find this location very much to their liking. Quite a large percentage of them are seedlings from crosses made by James Farquhar some years ago, and in the wide variety of form and tint one finds many promising sorts, especially in soft pinks and clarets. A field of ten thousand seedling Rhododendron (Azalea) Kaempferi is an inspiring sight, the largest plantation of this grand species in existence.

There are lots of rare and new things in the way of conifers from China from the collections of Wilson and others which seem to fairly revel in the pure salubrious air of this region. Looking them over we were particularly impressed with a lot of Abies recurvata. It is a beauty. A plantation of twenty thousand young Lilium auratum absolutely free from any trace of disease or weakness is perhaps one of the most hopeful features seen on this interesting place, for the establishment of the lily industry here may mean the return of this magnificent species to our gardens. No lily will thrive out of doors for long in rich soil and here they appear to find ideal conditions. The nursery is under the care of James Littlejohn ever since its inception and he has it in admirable condition.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

At this early date great interest is being shown in the 1st Annual Convention and Trade Exhibition to be held at Houston, Texas, August 15, 16, 17. It would appear that there will be a very creditable attendance from the East.

Rates and particulars as to the different routes may be obtained by application to this office. One favorable route will be by Southern Pacific Company, via steamer to New Orleans, train to Houston then all rail returning. The best obtainable rate from New York City to Houston by this route would be $83.00. This rate will include berth and meals on steamer line to New Orleans and first class rail transportation beyond, returning from Houston via St. Louis and New York Central lines. Steamers sail semi-weekly from Pier 48, North River, foot of West Eleventh street, every Wednesday and Saturday, at 12 o'clock noon, and are due in New Orleans the following Monday and Thursday. Connections can here be made for Houston either on the Sunset Limited leaving New Orleans at 11 A. M., which will fetch our party in at Houston at 10 P. M. the same night. This will give a beautiful ride through the Louisiana Sugar and Cotton belt, which is a very scenic route.

If the party desires to stop over at New Orleans for a day or so, connections could be made with train No. 9 leaving at 11.30 P. M., due in Houston next morning at 11.30. Sleeper rates between New Orleans and Houston are $2.00. Trip if made from New Orleans by daylight could be accommodated in large commodious coach unless party preferred to use parlor cars.

S. S. "Momus" will leave New York Aug. 9th, arriving at New Orleans Monday, Aug. 14th, in the morning; by taking rail service there would arrive at Houston 10 P. M. same night. Any of our members desiring to leave earlier may take the S. S. "Creole," leaving New York August 5th, and arriving New Orleans August 10th. If arrangements for the trip are made promptly we will arrange so that the delegates and visitors will have "the time of their life." Our Southern brethren are making every effort to have this convention one of the most successful in the history of the society not only from a business standpoint, but also from the great amount of pleasure and valuable information derived from our visit to the South.

Some of the leading firms of the country, alert to the opportunity of the southern market, have made early bookings for large blocks of space in the trade exhibit. Among them we find, Lord & Burnham Co., John A. Evans Co., M. Rice Co., A. L. Randall Co., Burlington Willow Ware Works, J. A. Peterson & Sons, and H. C. Doescher. Intending exhibitors should not delay in securing space.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

The exhibition table had a fair display of peonies from Mr. B. H. Farr, of Wyomissing, and B. F. Barr, the essayist of the evening. Mr. Barr's paper was both encyclopedic and cultural and was well received and a vote of thanks was extended. In the discussion it was brought out that the period of peony flowering could be advanced by using an application of nitrate of soda every three or four days. They can be held in cold storage by cutting them only partially open, putting them into water in a temperature of about 45° for some 24 hours and then packing into boxes or better in jars of wet moss with the heads wrapped in tissue paper. In a temperature of 30° to 35° it is claimed they can be held for from two to fourteen days. It was also brought out that a peony should not be expected to give full results until at least three years after it has been planted. Mr. Barr claimed that the variety Gen. Washington is the nearest to red in existence today.

Albatre, Gen. Washington, Bernard Pallissy, Asa Gray, Madame Baquet, Coronne d'Or, Wilhelmena, Festiva Maxima, Eugene Verdier, Princess Beatrice, Marie Lemoine and Souv. de Exposition Universal, were among the varieties shown.

The Flower Show Committee now stands Harry K. Rohrer, chairman, M. J. Brinton, A. F. Strickler, Elmer Weaver, Lemon Landis, David Rose, Rudolph Nagle and B. F. Barr. The Picnic Committee reported no date fixed, but B. F. Barr's meadow as the place. Any out-of-town florists who wish to attend will be welcome and can get full information by applying to the chairman, Mr. Elmer Weaver, Ronks, Pa. The Programme Committee suggested that the August meeting be made an Aster meeting at the establishment of Elmer and Charles Weaver. There is a possibility of the Club taking up the planting of a Rose Garden in one of our local parks.

The appeal for contributions to the Miss Jarvis fund was carried over for a special voluntary contribution from the members at the picnic and the meeting at Weaver's so that we could turn in a tidy sum as a Club.

LENOX HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

There was a good attendance at the monthly meeting on June 14th. An alteration in the schedule of forthcoming show was adopted, which made class 40 read any bi-color in place of any marbled or mottled. A paper entitled "Horticulture as a Profession from the Standpoint of the Gardener" was read and well discussed. Notwithstanding an early date and a very late season, there is every promise of a good show on June 28th and 29th. The Garden Club of America is making this the occasion of their visit to Lenox. Many valuable cups and prizes are offered for sweet peas, etc., and a special feature will be a non-competitive display of orchids from Mr. A. N. Cooley of Pittsfield. A large floor space has been reserved for this exhibit, and those who saw Mr. Cooley's display at the last Fall Show and his 1st prize group at the New York Spring Show should make a point of seeing this display.

Mr. Cooley is constantly adding many new and rare varieties to his already extensive collection, and if not already so, it will not be long before it will take its place beside any private collection in the country. The next meeting will be held July 12th.

James De Vyner, entomologist of Mount Vernon, gave a lecture on "The Hickory Bark Beetle and the Means of Controlling Same." The lecture was full of practical information. Mr. De Vyner exhibited some hickory wood that had been infested with the beetle and also specimens of the insect in its various stages, from the larva to the adult. At the conclusion of the lecture, the lecturer was questioned at considerable length. An essay received from the National Association of Gardeners on "Culture of Hardy Perennials," was read and was most favorably received.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

The exhibition of peonies in connection with the annual meeting in New York last week was not so large as would have been the case had the local plants been seasonably in bloom. Again, the heavy rains and general wetness for several days had impaired the quality of the blooms that were out. There was a generous showing of irises, outdoor roses and perennial border plants which added greatly to the popular interest and value of the exhibition. The prize awards were as follows:

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

Tuesday evening, June 20th, last regular meeting of this club for the season was devoted to entertaining the ladies as per annual custom, so very little business was transacted. The secretary read his minutes and some communications relative to the visit to Cromwell, Conn., by the N. A. G. on June 21 and the trip to Bar Harbor on July 14. July 27 was announced as the date for the annual picnic, the place, Cunningham Park. The secretary was instructed to send a letter of good cheer to Mrs. E. M. Gill who is ill. Then the entertainers were called into service and there was an hour of music and song, followed by a collation served in the large exhibition hall and then the youth and beauty of Boston horticulture danced and danced until midnight.

The entertainment was high quality throughout and every number was given an encore. Particularly acceptable were the songs of Miss Emily Edgar, daughter of Mrs. W. W. Edgar of Waverley and the violin solos by Master Duguid, son of John Duguid of Wellesley.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The New England Cemetery Association had their annual outing at Bellevue Cemetery, Lawrence, Mass., on Wednesday, June 19. It was a most enjoyable affair. Superintendent William Lord was manager of arrangements.

The Premium List for the Southampton (N. Y.) Horticultural Society's tenth annual exhibition has been sent out. It is quite lengthy, including some interesting special prizes for artistic work and decorative use of flowers, and should bring out a fine display. The dates are July 26 and 27, and one-half of the net proceeds are to go to the Southampton Hospital.

The Board of Directors of the Vegetable Growers' Association met in Chicago on June 15th, and accepted the invitation to hold their annual meeting this fall in that city. The board consists of N. J. Reutenik, Cleveland, O., pres.; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., sec'y; Prof. C. W. Wade of the Michigan Agricultural College and Prof. Durst of Illinois Agricultural College, Champaign, Ill., directors.

HOW TO GET THE BETTER OF ROSE DISEASES

When the Editor of THE PEONY SHOW, June 1916, asked me to write something on rose diseases, I was surprised to find that there had been such little in America and widely in Europe. The American Rose Society, the Bailey Standard Encyclopedia of Roses, and the American Rose Society (1914) listed out rose diseases, but that the English and the French either skipped the subject or glossed it over.

Knowing how serious to rose-growers was at least one of these diseases—the all-too-familiar “black spot,” the editor then canvassed the various colleges and experiment stations, and the Department of Agriculture at Washington, only to learn that the rose had never had the attention given to carnations or cabbage or cut-worms, to apples or potatoes. Prof. H. H. Whetzel, the noted pathologist of Cornell University, wrote that none of his brethren had ever studied the diseases of what he termed “man’s oldest and most widely cherished ornamental,” and that therefore no means of control of some of these destructive rose diseases had been worked out.

The American Rose Society believes that this condition is a disgrace. It has therefore undertaken to organize a careful inquiry into rose diseases, which if supported by those interested ought to result in the proposal of methods of prevention and control as efficacious as those that, through similar study, have given fruit-growers courage to proceed profitably in defiance of brownrot and similar diseases.

Much correspondence, following authorization at the recent Washington meeting of the Society, has developed an exceptional opportunity to have the proper study begun and carried through at a small part of the expense—Cornell University sustaining most of the cost.

Professor Whetzel states the situation thus:

“What is needed first is a rather careful study of the rose disease situation as represented in the gardens and houses of the members of the American Rose Society . . . a survey, in order that we may determine just what the chief diseases of the rose are. . . . We propose that Mr. Massey, who has worked on florists’ crops, and who is, in my opinion, the man for this job, should be employed by the American Rose Society under my direction, to spend three months of each year for two years in rose disease survey and investigation work, traveling as may be required; and that during the remaining nine months of each year his special line of investigation with us would be the diseases of roses. That is, if the American Rose Society can support him while in the field one-fourth of the time, the Cornell Department of Plant Pathology will have him make rose disease investigations the chief line of his work as florist disease investigator for the remainder of two years.

“We would provide such ordinary laboratory apparatus as he may need and also give him professional aid and counsel, together with our hearty interest in the Rose Society’s activities.

“This would give the American Rose Society the services of a thoroughly trained investigator of florist crop diseases at a very small cost. . . . I am sure that the American Rose Society will find this a most valuable contribution to the knowledge of rose diseases and to the welfare of the rose-grower.

If the American Rose Society desires to avail itself of this opportunity, I must know of it before June 30, 1916, in order to properly arrange with Mr. Massey.”

It is the hope of the Executive Committee of the American Rose Society that the opportunity thus presented is one which rose-growers generally will be willing to support by the special contribution necessary, information as to which must reach your President, as noted, before June 30. Let us act together to help put rose-growing in as safe a condition as is carnation-growing or apple-growing.

S. S. PENNOCK,

President.

AUTHORS ATTENDED PEONY EXHIBIT.

A thousand invitations were sent out for the annual exhibition of peonies in the gardens of the Country Life Press (Doubleday, Page & Co.) at Garden City, L. I. The peony display, is composed of more than three thousand plants collected by the American Peony Society, and this year from forty thousand to fifty thousand blossoms were on view during the week June twelfth to seventeenth. The public, at all times welcome to Country Life Press, is always especially welcome during the season of peony bloom and during the subsequent season of rose bloom, for at that time the gardens are perhaps at their best.

On Thursday, June fifteenth, Doubleday, Page & Co., gave a Garden Party to authors and others of their friends who cared to take advantage of this opportunity to see the gardens and the motion picture film of the making of a book.

ONE WEEK'S IMPORTS.

Imports at the port of New York of horticultural material, for the week ending June 9th, were recorded as follows:

Bulbs—Netherlands, $22; England, $42; Hongkong, $1,045.

Plants—Belgium, $2,525; France, $93; Netherlands $60; England, $172; Scotland, $7; Bermuda, $19; Mexico, $75; Brazil, $2,349; Venezuela, $866.

Red Clover Seed—France, $14,048.

Clover Seed—Canada, $286; New Zealand, $318.

Grass Seed—France, $1,664; Scotland, $62; Argentine, $2,088.

All other seeds—France, $14,879; Netherlands, $3,385; England, $9,904; Scotland, $47; Argentine, $8,696; Hongkong, $335; Malta, $3,893.

Nitrate of Potash—England, $112,515.

Other fertilizers—Scotland, $85.

Guano—England, $97.

PEONY SHOW OF MASSACHUSETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This brilliant June spectacle struck a very bad weather combination this year. After having been postponed for one week on account of the backwardness of the dates, finally selected June 17 and 18, proved entirely too early for the local growers, the best they could do being the rather blooming varieties. Then to add to the disappointment the opening day was the tenth and worst of a series of ten days of rain. Yet, with all these drawbacks, the exhibition was a big one and turned the hall into a gorgeous sight and as if to atone for Saturday's downpour the weather man handed out an ideal day for Sunday, with a throng of visitors in attendance.

The irises, oriental poppies, hemerocallis and other herbaceous flowers far outshone the peonies, as it happened.

In the herbaceous peony classes, G. H. Peterson of Fairlawn, N. J., got the lion's share of the 1st prizes, taking six of these. Other winners in the peony classes were: Mrs. J. L. Gardner, A. H. Fewkes, S. G. Harris, Geo. N. Smith and Mrs. C. S. Minot. The iris prizes were won by E. M. Dunphe and H. F. Chase; the rhododendron prizes by T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., Weld Garden and W. C. Winter; the hardy herbaceous flower prizes by Weld Garden and Blue Hill Nurseries.

Silver medals were awarded to R. & J. Farquhar & Co., for a grand display of hardy herbaceous flowers and shrubs and Miss Grace Sturtevant for new seedling iris. Honorable mention was accorded to Ernest B. Dane, gard. D. McKenzie, for display of orchid blooms; Mount Desert Nurseries, for artistically arranged group of hardy flowers; Blue Hill Nurseries, for vase of Thalictrum aquilegifolium purpureum; Miss Grace Sturtevant, for iris Ann Leslie (Dr. Bernice seedling). A first class certificate of merit was given to Miss Grace Sturtevant, for iris Stanley H. White (Hector × Caterina).

Gratuities—A. H. Fewkes, Paeonia Mme. Calot; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Paeonia magnifica; Wellesley Nurseries, collection of peonies and iris; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., display of iris; J. K. Alexander, collection of iris; Blue Hill Nurseries, collection of day lilies and iris; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., collection of fuchsias; Ernest B. Dane, orchid blooms; J. T. Butterworth, orchids in bloom; Mount Desert Nurseries, artistically arranged group of hardy flowers; Miss Cornelia Warren, collection of hardy flowers.

The display by Mount Desert Nurseries was quite novel and a pleasing departure from the massed groups of promiscuous material usually seen. Each variety—such as dicentra, Solomon's seal, lilacs, eremuruses, irises and hemerocallis was shown by itself in a branching bamboo stand, producing a graceful fountain-like effect. The exhibit of Blue Hill Nurseries was particularly praiseworthy for its complete and legible labelling, the collection of hemerocallis being very complete and the finest variety being the bright pure orange Dr. Regel. Thalictrum aquilegifolium purpureum, a chance seedling is a lovely novelty with dark red stems and a cloud of soft purple bloom. Incarvillea brevipes was another fine thing in this collection.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

Fred Lantenshaw is planning on the Houston trip for there are always florists who seem to be lying in wait for him at the conventions with orders in their pockets.

John J. Stuppy of St. Joseph, Mo., and family, are in Chicago. Mr. Stuppy is on his way East and Mrs. Stuppy and children will visit relatives here during his absence.

The new gladiolus Myrtle, now on exhibition at E. C. Amling's is of a very attractive clear pink. It is grown by A. P. Bonvallet, Wichert, Ill., who expects to introduce it later.

Those who attended the funeral of W. F. Kasting from Chicago were George Asmus, Wm. J. Keimel, M. Barker and A. Ringler. Mr. Kasting was to have visited Chicago on his way home from St. Louis.

The store vacated by Lyon & Healy at Wabash avenue and Adams street is being divided into small stores and several florists are reputed to have signed leases. No one has been found who is willing to admit it at this time but it will probably house a flower store in the near future.

One of our enterprising nurserymen arranged with a department store a large exhibition of named peony blooms, for the ostensible purpose of giving pleasure and instruction. Both parties concerned are willing to take the sales that are sure to follow. This is a practical way of creating love for the big flowers and selling the plants and it is to be hoped more "commercial exhibits" will follow.

The John C. Moninger Co. is receiving some very gratifying letters from The Miller Floral Co., whose three steel houses they have just completed at Farmington, Utah and Stephen Hyde, Carthage, Mo., who has received material for a house 84 by 600 in fine order. Their greenhouses being erected for Montgomery Bros., at Hadley, Mass., and for Van Allen at Newport, are progressing, and another eastern order just placed is for Russell Bros., Inc., of Syracuse, N. Y., calling for four houses, 21 by 125. Rudolph Kurowski says Houston is too far away for the Moninger Co. to send one of their model greenhouses but the firm will probably be represented there.

ST. LOUIS.

The florists of St. Louis received a great shock on Thursday, June 15th, with the announcement of the sudden death of Wm. F. Kasting. Mr. Kasting arrived here on Monday, June 12th, as a delegate from New York to the Democratic Convention. He paid visits to his friends in the trade on Wednesday in company with J. J. Beneke, Secretary of the Florist Club, visited the wholesale district and was apparently in good health and arranged an automobile trip to visit the trade on Thursday morning. That evening he took suddenly sick with heart trouble at the Maryland Hotel and died there on Thursday morning at 10.30. His remains were taken in charge of by his brother-in-law, Mr. La Tour, who came with Mr. Kasting and left for Buffalo that night. The Florist Club and the five wholesale houses wired floral emblems to be sent to the funeral.

CINCINNATI.

Chas. A. Moss, who was formerly in the Cincinnati Park Department under Reuben Warder and is now located at Spartansburg, S. C., was in this city recently.

Gus Adrian, Jr., and Miss Cora Pherson were married on the 17th. The first their family and friends knew of the marriage was the following day when they were leaving for the Che-naux Islands to spend their honeymoon at that place.

PITTSBURGH.

George McCallum and C. C. Phillips are planning for a two-weeks' fishing trip next month on the Cheat River, West Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. McGrath left on Thursday to spend a week in Chicago, where Mr. McGrath, who is manager of the Blind Floral Co. has business interests.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Clarke and Mrs. E. A. Williams were members of the Pittsburgh party which left on last week to attend the Knights Templar conclave in Los Angeles.

The Ludwig Floral Company sent an unusual floral tribute for the funeral of William F. Kasting. The piece was designed of white carnations in envelope form with the postmark, stamp and address in immortelles.

The advantages of featuring floral decorations is being more and more recognized by commercial firms. Last week the Joseph Home Co. observed its 2nd two-days' rose fete. Exquisite long-stemmed Beauties and Rambler Roses were used in tall wicker standards and festoons overhead with charming effect. The Kauffmann Co. initiated their 45th anniversary with the window adorned entirely with foliage plants and peonies. Ray J. Daschbach, manager of the floral department supervised the work of course.

Randolph & McClements were the floral decorators for a wedding which was the most picturesque event of its kind hereabouts. The church decorations were foliage plants, ferns and pink hydrangeas. White wicker standards surmounted by baskets of white peonies, with loops of rose satin ribbon marked the aisles. Ophelia roses, white orchids and orange blossoms formed the bridal bouquet. overflowing with Dorothy Perkins roses were carried by the matron of honor and bridesmaids. The bridal table on the lawn enclosed the fountain in which bloomed water lilies, the table centerpiece being formed of pink hydrangeas. The other tables on the terraces held baskets of roses in combination with pink and white snapdragon and larkspur. The entire grounds were enclosed with a vine-covered lattice.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The July meeting of the Florists' Club has been postponed from July 4 to July 11, because of the holiday. William H. Ernest, chairman of the outing committee, will render a full report on the plans for the field day at Great Falls on July 19.

Mrs. M. J. McCabe, who is associated with her husband in the florist business in Anacostia, D. C., and who is in charge of their retail stand in the Center Market, has gone to Miami, Fla. Mrs. McCabe has not been in very good health, and her doctor has ordered a change of scene.

The blue laws which have long reposed on the statute books of Virginia are being rigidly enforced. Under the laws all unnecessary work on Sundays is prohibited. This means that deliveries of flowers cannot be made by florists here or in the state named without liability to arrest for violations.

William F. Gude was decidedly in the limelight last week when, with President Wilson, he was one of the central figures in the Preparedness Parade which caused the turning out of 60,000 people. It was a great day for Washington and in its honor all work was stopped. The florists closed their establishments and only did that which would not hold over until the next day. There were more than two hundred in the company which carried the pennants of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C. Each parader carried a flag and, in addition, each florist carried an American Beauty rose. The pennants were decorated with flowers. The committee had but a short time in which to get the florists together, but the representation was a good one and all who participated were well pleased.

BOSTON.

R. E. Lassman of Waverley is retiring from business after many years of active participation in the florist trade. His greenhouses are now for sale.

Michael H. Norton has been confined to his home in Dorchester for the past ten days, suffering from a slight impairment of his usual good health. He is progressing satisfactorily and hopes to be out again in a short time.

Henry M. Robinson, Charles Robinson and William Penn were the guests of M. C. Lincoln over the holiday at the latter's Laconia, N. H., residence. Ostensibly, the party went to fish, but the results were far from satisfactory, both to those concerned and those who must listen to their reminiscent tale of woe.

The Florists' Bowling League will hold their annual picnic at Lake Boone, Hudson, Mass., on Sunday, June 25. A ball game and other athletic events, including a fat man's race, will be in order. J. Sloane is chairman of the executive committee, and those desiring to enjoy next Sunday as only florists can, will please communicate with him. The entire body will leave the flower market in autos at 9 A. M. sharp and will not return till late in the evening.

Flower Market Reports

A careful review of market conditions during the past week will show that over seventy-five per cent. of the business is going through the regular June channels, viz., weddings, receptions, etc. These affairs have been very numerous in Boston during the past month and evidently reached their climax this week, as both retailers and wholesalers report a steady volume of business. Roses, Hadley and Ophelia especially, top the market as regards preference, and lily of the valley breaks all previous records for prices, bringing $8.00 a hundred. The dull weather greatly shortened up the supply of this flower and curtailed the receipts of carnations in a marked degree. In the latter case it was perhaps fortunate, as there is practically no demand for carnations. Snapdragon is of excellent quality, but is moving slowly. Feverfew, as well, is stationary. Calendulas can be said to be lying dormant. Lilies are doing fairly well for this season and the same is true of sweet peas. Taken on the whole, the market is in a fair condition, with no troublesome surpluses to contend with and a strong, steady outlook for the coming week.

The market has been BUFFALO congested all the past week and the outlet blocked. Carnations were overplentiful and the height of the home-grown peonies was on. There was also a heavy supply of roses, lilies, sweet peas and out-door material. Saturday is usually looked for as a clean-up day, but the wholesalers were disappointed with the outcome. There were bargain signs galore amongst the merchants, though this helped but little. Floral work was lightly scattered.

A fairly steady demand CHICAGO uses up the greater part of the best grades of stock. There is a large quantity of inferior stock being cut now and what cannot be moved in the flower stores is apt to be seen at the street corners, where the customer is generally charged all that the flowers are worth. Cool weather has been favorable to producing plenty of the best grades of roses so commencement and weddings have been well taken care of. The American Beauty troubles are of the past with some of the large growers, for they are cutting daily some extra fine roses. Mrs. Russell rose is here in great quantities, medium and short stems predominating, of splendid color and the demand is good for June. Sweet pea growers, for the time, are cutting very few good flowers. Their soft condition has impaired their keeping qualities and there is not enough good stock in the market to fill orders. Carnations have not suffered with the temperature. There are plenty to be had but the demand for the divine flower is limited. Peony season is shortened by excessive rain and the same cause has lowered the quality of the crop as a whole. Sunburst roses are of splendid color, the deep shade being attributed to the cool nights.

Business is good only at times. The supply is very large and meets with a very irregular demand. Prices as a whole are rather low although shipping business is holding up fairly well. American Beauties and other roses are in a good supply and excellent. Some very fine Ramblers are coming in. Gladioli meet with a ready sale. Lilies plentiful. Carnations in a heavy supply but of rather indifferent quality. Lily of the valley and orchids are having a very substantial call.

Slowly but surely the tide is falling in the flower business and unmistakable premonitions are seen and felt of that peculiar lassitude which is due to descend about this time on the entire wholesale flower trade district of New York. It is not quite the same in any other city that we have ever had an opportunity to compare. The cut is getting smaller, the quality is growing poorer and general trade is falling off from day to day, and then after a while the bottom is reached and one might as well close up shop and steal away. The only excitement occurs when some buyer comes along in a frantic hunt for some special thing that is difficult if not impossible to find. Scarcely a day passes without some such episode. "Price is no object" then, but that does not help any when the goods don't exist, although they may have been in enormous abundance a fortnight ago. A strange business this is in its vicissitudes, irregularities and unforeseen episodes!

There has been a considerable improvement in trade conditions here. We seem to be over the worst of the glut, including the peonies. What peonies are available now are mostly cold-storage and are bringing fairly good prices. Good roses are selling well, the leaders being American Beauty, Russell and Hadley. These three have held their quality better than most others all along the line. There has also been a good demand for Rambler sprays, and this still continues. Carnations are plentiful but the quality is nothing wonderful except in a few isolated instances. The lily glut is about over and these will be back to normal very shortly. Delphiniums in the free, graceful and showy forms, such as Belladonna, are quite a feature of the market and meet with much favor. They are a valuable addition and a bright spot just at this time of year. Sweet peas are still holding their own pretty well. The hot weather hasn't hit them yet. We haven't had any hot weather to speak of so far. Of course there are wagon loads of blue cornflower. They sell in large quantities, although at low figures, as there is nothing more chic and lasting for a boutonniere. Lily of the valley seems to be in good demand in some places but slow in others. Prices are above normal everywhere on this staple and indispensable article.

Flower Market Reports

The wholesale cut flower ST. LOUIS market experienced a good month in both demand and consignments. Much was expected by the retailers for decorating work for the National Democratic Convention, and this with graduating work and weddings kept them quite busy and ended the season in glory. We have had plenty of rain and outdoor stock is looking good. This with cool nights has kept up the quality of the stock fairly well. The market contains plenty of roses. Carnations are still excellent. Lilies are up and so is lily of the valley. Sweet peas sell well at present time. Fancy ferns are scarce.

The June rush is WASHINGTON about over and the stores are beginning to feel the usual slack season of summer. There has been an oversupply of rain, punctuated with hailstorms that have been more or less damaging. The heated period is now at hand and stock is beginning to show the effects thereof. Sweet peas continue to be as good as have ever been seen in this market and hold ready sale. Lily of the valley remains scarce but is not in the great demand of early June. Roses from northern points are good and sell well. Peonies are still to be had although the local crop is about over with. Carnations are showing the effects of the weather and are very cheap. Water lilies are seen in every store. Cattleyas are more plentiful and selling better. Lilies are stagnant.

and Nursery Practice By
M. G. KAINS

So many discoveries of new facts by plant investigators, shortcuts and "wrinkles" worked out by plant propagators, and nursery, greenhouse and garden methods simplified or made more effective, have made books hitherto available on plant propagation out of date.

There has also been an insistent call for a volume that would not only include the character of information wanted by nurserymen and other plant propagators, but also discuss the subject of plant propagation from the standpoint of fundamental principles, and include the latest conclusions advanced by investigators throughout the world.

This new book by Professor Kains will appeal with equal force to the amateur, the professional propagator, and the teacher in agricultural colleges and schools.

The book devotes many pages to special plant lists and condensed directions for propagation of vegetables, fruits, annual and perennial flowers, bulbs, ferns, orchids, cacti, evergreens, deciduous trees and shrubs, vines, water plants, greenhouse and house plants and palms.

The table of contents includes: An introduction on general principles, germination, seed testing, potting, layerage, bottom heat, cuttings, classes of cuttings, graftage, and theories and laws, Daniel's experiments in graftage, tree stocks and scion handling, grafting wires and wound dressing, methods of grafting considered individually, budding methods, nursery management, and laws affecting nursery stock.

WEED KILLER

THE VERY NEWEST AND QUICKEST METHOD OF DESTROYING WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

We manufacture the strongest line of DISINFECTANTS on the market.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

The following letter, which has been received from the chairman of the National Flower Show Committee by all subscribers to the guarantee fund, tells its own story—a story that should make all true friends of horticulture feel happy:

Dear Sir:—The very gratifying results of the recent Fourth National Flower Show at Philadelphia, has enabled the committee, in behalf of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, to return to the guarantors a 10 per cent. profit on the full amount of money subscribed to the guarantee fund, instead of 10 per cent of the amount paid as per call.

The immensity of the National Flower Show was such that we feel that thanks are due you as one of its supporters, and surely the object is being achieved when 100,000 people view the fruit of skill and labor of America's most prominent growers and merchants.

Philadelphia has received a horticultural benefit which could not be had by any other means. One-half million lines of reading matter was published in the newspapers and magazines, besides the paid advertising. More people paid admission to this show than at any two flower shows ever held in this country.

Again thanking you for your co-operation, which made this possible, we remain,

Very truly yours,

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW COMMITTEE,
GEORGE ASMUS, Chairman.

Chairman George Asmus, of the National Flower Show Committee, Secretary John Young and Treasurer W. F. Kasting, had a meeting in Buffalo on June 7 and 8, to audit the report of the Philadelphia show and it is promised that a complete and final report will be made in the course of a week or two.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

Southampton (N. Y.) Horticultural Society met on Thursday evening, June 1st. The Secretary reported the ten vases in the Art Museum Park filled with one exception. G. E. M. Stumpp kindly offered to fill that one, it being now out of the prize competition, which closed June 1. The chairman of the show committee reported fine progress in show matters. G. E. M. Stumpp offered a cup to be awarded as the Society shall think best. W. L. Jagger read a paper on Gardening: the Experience of an Amateur.

The annual rose show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at the Nassau Country Club, Glen Cove, N. Y., on June 15. Roses, peonies and other seasonable garden blooms were shown in profusion by members of the summer colony.

The principal rose exhibitors in competition were Harold Pratt, gard. Frank Johnson; Herbert Pratt, gard. Henry Gaut; John Pratt, gard. John Everitt; S. D. Brewster, gard. Harry Goodband, and W. E. Kimball, gard. James McCarthy. It was too early for the H. P. roses, but the Teas and H. T. were very fine. A nice table decoration was put up by Jos. Adler, gard. for Harvey Ladew. Prominent non-competitive contributors were C. F. Cartledge, gard. Wm. Noonan, and Mrs. J. F. Agre, gard. W. C. Jones, both of these receiving special honors.

The horticultural trades interests in Great Britain are urging that since the importation of foreign-grown bulbs, etc., has been forbidden by the government, the order should also as a matter of justice exclude the entry of cut flowers.

Philadelphia — Rupert Kieule, the well-known retailer at 17th below Market St., suffered a broken ankle from an auto accident on the 17th inst. He was taken to the Women's Hospital nearby.

A ROCK GARDEN EXHIBIT.

We have had considerable to say about rock gardening of late because we believe it to be a department of garden art with a big future. Several good examples of such work have been shown at various exhibitions the past spring. The example which we illustrate on this week's title page was much admired by visitors, and considering that it was under a tent, with no background for a setting, it was well done. At the same place next year we have the promise of some elaborately constructed rock work in the open and with a setting of trees and other accessories.

STEM ROT OF THE PEONY.

Referring to the query and answer on this disease appearing on page 819 of our recent issue, a successful peony raiser says that stem-rot is often brought about by the use of too much manure close to the stems. Avoiding this and adding careful observation, plus clean culture, he asserts that no trouble may be feared from stem-rot.

Obituary

Charles B. Wetherby.

Charles B. Wetherby, florist, died at his home in Fulton, N. Y., on Saturday, June 10. He was fifty-seven years old and is survived by his widow, one daughter and one brother, William Wetherby, Oswego.

E. Neubert.

The death is announced of Emil Neubert, whose name is connected with the lily of the valley trade of Hamburg. Mr. Neubert, who was 85 years of age, had been in his early years a member of the staff of Dippe Bros., the Quedlinburg seedsmen. About sixty years ago he went to Hamburg and established the nursery at Wandsbeck.

Charles E. Shackley.

Charles E. Shackley, for many years engaged in the florist's business in Auburn, Me., passed away Monday night, June 12, at his home, 325 Turner street, after several months of painful illness. He was born in Dover, N. H., 68 years ago, and came to Lewiston with his parents when quite young. He carried on the florist's business at the Turner street greenhouses for many years. Mr. Shackley is survived by his wife, and two brothers, Horace of Lewiston, and Frederick of Boston.

David H. Laney.

David Hobbs Laney, a pioneer florist of Woodhaven, New York, died Sunday, June 11, on his seventy-fourth birthday from a paralytic stroke, at his home, 1812 Woodhaven avenue, where he had lived for thirty-six years, and was for thirty-three years in charge of the Grosjean estate. He was born in South Warmboro, Hampshire, England, June 11, 1842, and had been in this country forty-six years. He leaves a widow, Hannah, and three grandchildren.

Philip Edward Moon.

Private Philip Edward Moon, of the Seaforth Highlanders, was killed in action on April 28th, at the age of 19 years. He was a son of the late Henry Moon, the best flower painter of our day, and grandson of Mr. F. Sander, Bruges and St. Albans. The sympathy of many in the trade will go out to Mr. and Mrs. Sander and Mrs. Moon in their bereavement. His Captain, in a letter of sympathy, says: "Philip was a brave soldier and a good lad—one of the very best—and he has, for a long time, had our admiration and love. I will always treasure the memory of him; his great love of nature and his knowledge of flowers was so wonderful to us all."—Horticultural Trade Journal.

Nicholas P. Kruchten.

Nicholas P. Kruchten, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Kruchten, and secretary of the firm of N. J. Kruchten & Co., lost his life in an automobile accident at Lawrence avenue and the river, Chicago, on the night of June 13th. At first it was thought the machine, which was being driven at high speed, collided with the rail of the bridge but later a defective wheel is regarded as the cause of the accident. Mr. Kruchten died almost at once and his two companions were seriously injured. N. P. Kruchten was 29 years of age and was in active charge of the growing end of the business at 5308 N. Western avenue, two brothers, John and Henry, having charge of the wholesale store in the Atlas block. Nicholas Kruchten also leaves a wife to whom he was married six years ago. The funeral was held from the home of his parents on Friday and interment was in Graceland cemetery.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Prof. A. H. Nehrling, head of the department, is to be married on June 29 in South Bend, Indiana. He will go to Colorado on his wedding trip.

The Department of Floriculture is closing up its work for the college year. With the reorganization of the work and the addition of new courses the department has been able to carry on its professional duties better than in the past. In order that the students may have practical experience to supplement the professional courses given by the college, the department endeavors to place men on private estates and commercial places during the summer vacation. This year the department has been able to place 14 men for the summer work.

A. S. Thurston, assistant in the department, is to teach the courses in floriculture to be given in the Summer School. Under the direction of A. S. Thurston the perennial garden has been enlarged and quite a number of new plants have been added. The garden at present includes a very representative collection of herbaceous perennials; it contains about 3,000 plants representing 450 species and varieties. The perennials are planted in large beds, each genus and species being correctly labeled. Although the garden is not planted for effect, but for educational purposes, it makes a very effective showing with its variety and succession of bloom against the background of green furnished by the wide grass walks.

ST. ALBANS, ENGLAND.

A personal letter from Mr. F. Sander, Sr., of St. Albans, England, conveys the sad intelligence that his grandson has just been killed in action, to which Mr. Sander adds "His life was to me dearer than my own." Mr. Sander keeps closely in touch with events horticultural on this side of the water and is especially rejoiced over the great success of the big popular flower shows in this country and the rapid advance of commercial orchid growing, a condition which he predicted when he visited the United States some thirty years ago.

POT MAKERS FORM CREDIT ASSOCIATION.

A brand new Credit Association was organized June 17 at Atlantic City, N. J., with the makers of 90 per cent. of the pots used in this country, in attendance. Twelve potteries, located in the eastern section of the United States, were represented.

The vital subject of Credit was the drawing card and the meeting resulted in the appointment of a committee of two to plan details for the conduct of the Association and to report at a future meeting. The organization will be known as The Pot Makers' Credit Association.

Mastica is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass as occurs with hard putty. Lasts longer than putty. Easy to apply.

Will last a life-time.
$1.25 EACH

Adjustable—can and frame separate—easily cleaned. Frame all one piece, of malleable iron. More practical and more easily operated than any other.

Seal-tight liquid putty at $1.25 per gallon.

METROPOLITAN GREENHOUSES

Thorough In Every Particular

The three things of utmost importance after signing the contract to build a greenhouse, are, Quality, Speed and Economy. This is a basic truth, and absolutely essential to the success of any greenhouse building operation.

Our organization is letter-perfect down to the minutest detail.

Along with many other prominent Metropolitan Greenhouse owners, Mr. Martin Metzner, for whom we built the above Greenhouse on his estate at Lake Ronkonkoma, Long Island, will verify our claim that we are capably equipped to build satisfactorily, rapidly and economically.

Three Interesting Chapters in Our Greenhouse Construction

IT WAS IN 1888, at the Jay Gould Estate, that we originated the construction that used the first cast iron gutters for greenhouses. It was considered a big stride. It gave added rigidity to the frame and entirely overcame a serious defect of design.

In those days only the plain half round gutter could be cast. But it wasn't long before we developed a method of casting, so we could vary the gutter, giving it an architectural moulding effect, which has been generally followed in greenhouse building ever since.

So much for Chapter Number One.

Next came the curved eave with the gutter placed at the sill. Here, indeed, was a radical departure. It greatly increased their attractiveness and put greenhouses in an entirely different class.

And now comes Chapter Three, the modified curved eave, which many of the gardeners endorse heartily. The gutter is back at the eave again and the continuous side ventilation sash restored. The curve above the gutter is enlarged giving increased height for the side benches.

It is really a cross between a curved eave and a curved eave house, with the combined advantages of both. We called it the Modified Curved Eave. It's the house we recommend your building. When you are ready to talk it over, say when and where, and we'll be there.

The Curved Eave Type.
